The second unit of the smelter is expected to blow in before the end of September. Officials in charge conservatively estimate that the two units will handle 1,800 to 2,000 tons per day, and that on the completion of the concentrator the gross tonnage of the smelter will be from 2,200 to 2,300 tons a day. It is also reported that the extreme richness of the "H" ore body will give the mine an average value of $38 per ton. Figuring on a $30 net basis per ton on a 2,200 ton day, Noranda's net profits per year would be approximately $22,000,000 or a little over $10 a share.

Mine officials estimate that Noranda has $85,000,000 worth of ore for every 100 feet below the 400 foot level. If these figures are substantiated by developments now under way, Noranda will be a billion dollar mine down to the 1,500 foot level.

Solloway, Mills and Co. recommend Noranda at its present price both as an investment and a speculation of worth.

Royalite

According to a recent statement issued by the Royalite Oil Company, their No. 4 well in Turner Valley produced 15,441 bbls. of crude naptha during the month of July, or an average of 493 bbls. a day. Royalite No. 8 was second in line, with a total production of 8,103 bbls. a day. Their No. 6 well produced 5,64 3bbls. and their No. 7, 2,567 bbls.

Newbec

Advices from Rouyn this morning state that the chalcopyrite recently encountered in a drill hole by Newbec ran 8 per cent. copper and $1.60 in gold over a width of three feet, and a five foot width of disseminated chalcopyrite ran 2½ per cent. copper. Good progress is being made in the hole started a couple of days ago.

Ritchie

The third diamond drill hole at this propery has been compleed and assay results should be known in a very short time. The cores are said to show very favorable mineralization. The company plans to install a second drill as soon as possible, and plans also include the sinking of a shaft. The date of ommencement or location of same has not been decided as yet.

Glassair

The Glassaid Mining Corporation Limited, 44 Flack Building, Vancouver, B.C., has notified the Vancouver Stock Exchange that the following advertisement will appear in the "Sun" once a week until August 30th, 1928: "After Sept. 15 next, shares of the Morton Woolsey Consolidated Mines Ltd., N.P.L. successors to the Bernier Metals, Ltd., N.P.L., will be issued in the names recorded in the Glassair shareholders register on that date and the register closed prior to an extradordinary meeting to consider disposal of remaining assets and future of the corporation. Holders of Glassair certificates now outstanding are notified to register before the date mentioned in order to participate.

Market Review

Trading on the Standard board yesterday was of decidedly good character, and the tone was firm to strong. Particular attention was paid to the higher priced issues, such as Noranda, which was the feature of the five hour session. This issue opened practically $2 over its close last night and in heavy accumulation climbed up to $56.05 during the afternoon session but reacted somewhat from this to close at $55-55.25, for a net gain of $3.75.

Amulet was again in the limelight towards the close, and in heavy trading, moved up to $4 from an opening of $3.70, closing at the top for a net gain of 33 points.

The Kirkland Lake issues were in better demand today. Teck-Hughes after opening at $9.05 sold up to $9.35 closing 25 points better at $9.30-40. Wright-Hargreaves was 7 points better at $3.45-$3.48. While Lake Shore was in fair demand, it was off 15 to close at $20.00-$20.25. Kirkland Lake Gold was inclined to be erratic, but finished 3 points better at $1.44-5. Bidgood was strong and up 4 to close at 59 to 60. Crown Reserve was one better at 43-4.

In small demand, Hollinger was firmer and up 25 at $10.50-60. Its neighbour, McIntyre, was up 10 at $20.35-50. After opening firm at $1.35-6, Malartic met large block of selling, and reacted to $1.31, closing at the bottom for a loss of 5 points. Sherritt-Gordon and Sudbury Basin fared somewhat better, although erratic, in that each of them closed up 5 at $6.45-50 and $6.70 bid, respectively.

Mandy was again very heavily sold, and re-acted from the opening of $3.90 to $2.70 closing 22 points off at $2.73-5. Its neighbour Hudson Bay was 10 points better at $17.60-70. Again influenced by New York buying, International Nickel was strong and up $3 at $1.01-2.

The volume of trading at 733,200 shares was considerably off from yesterday, but activity was confined principally to the higher priced issues, and in point of money involved trading was greater than has been the case for some few days.

Greater Rockford Takes Off To-day

Hazardous Flight Begun

Hassell and Cramer Had Plane Ready To Start Yesterday Morning.

BLAZING NEW TRAIL.

Northern Ontario Will Be Route For Atlantic Flights If Successful.

COCHRANE, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer hopped off at 12.12 eastern standard time to-day for Mount Evans, Greenland, next stop on their flight to Stockholm, Sweden.

The monoplane, its tanks filled with gasoline which arrived Thursday night from Rockford, was ready for the 1,600 mile hop to Mount Evans, Greenland, early yesterday morning, but unfavorable weather prevailing over the hazardous territory they will traverse prompted the aviators to postpone their departure.

Aviators Impatient.

The aviators naturally impatient at the delay since they arrived here Thursday afternoon after covering the 800 miles from Rockford to Cochrane in 6½ hours, but they feel confident that by waiting for good weather conditions they can better fulfill their objemt of blazing an aerial trail from the Middle West to Europe.

Hassell said he had selected Cochrane as his first stop because it was on a direct line to Mount Evans and also because, according to the course

FIRE DESTROYS EAST CITY BARN

Mrs. J. Healey Loses Calves, Sheep, Pigs and Hay Early To-day.

BLAZE IN BAKERY.

A red glow in the sky that did not represent breaking dawn, sprung from a scene where the city firemen, called at 3.55 this morning, labored under a time handicap to save a small barn, near the Trent Canal, just east of Woodbine and Cameron Avenues. Barn and contents, including about nine tons of hay, harness, two calves, two sheep, and two pigs, the property of Mrs. J. Healey, were lost in the blaze, which had not been discovered in time to give the firemen much chance.

The ladder truck, Number 2 motor, and the Chief's car made a speedy response, and twelve hundred feet of hose was run out from a hydrant on Euclid Avenue to Cameron and across to Woodbine Avenue. However, the hay had taken fire too quickly. It is estimated that the damage will amount to approximately $500.00.

A dense pall of black smoke made difficult the work of the city firemen when they answered an alarm from the Nut-Krust Bakery, George Street, at 6.50 this morning. A container of grease became overheated and ran over on to the electric coils, which immediately caused a blaze, and incidentally the smoke. A 35-gallon chemical tank and two foamite chemicals were used. The damage will run about $250.00.

Child Sees Loved One Shattered by Fall

Falling from an unknown height, about six fifteen last night a body was dashed to pieces on the sidewalks of a residential street in the west end of the city. So sudden was the accident that all the witnesses stood in horror and then rushed to console the companion of the victim who was held speecheless at the swiftness with which tragedy had struck into his little heart while one of his dearest friends lay mangled on the sidewalk. Soon his silence gave way to the welcome relief of tears and the spectators knew that in a few minutes he would soon forget his grief. The shattered being was a red lollipop and the friend a little child of four or five.

NORTHERN ONTARIO MAIN ROUTE FOR ATLANTIC FLIGHT

COCHRANE, Ont., Aug. 18.—The great Canadian Northland is destined to be the main route for aviation to Europe, if the flight of the "Greater Rockford" from America to Europe is a success, and this town may then become a calling point for planes on their way across the waste of wilderness and ocean.

That is the prediction made by Parker Cramer, navigator of the plane, after it landed here for re-fueling.

"If we are successful," he said, "our flight will change the air route to Europe. Canada's northern wilderness will be recognized as the safest trans-Atlantic route, and the far northern posts will soon be the air stations of a new and shorter road to Europe.

FLOWERS LEAD MARKET TO-DAY

Basket Section Is Full of Choice Blooms This Morning.

PRICES VARY.

"I'm going to take a rest for awhile, folks. Talking is just as hard as working for a living," announced the purveyor of a razor paste at the farmers' market this morning. He had an interested audience, the members of which waited patiently while he lit a cigarette and indulged in a few moments of reflective silence.

Flowers were the keynote of the basket section this morning. Everywhere one looked there was a mass of flagrant bloom to meet the eye. For 10, 15 or 25 cents, one could purchase big bouquets of gorgeous gladioli, masses of tinted phlox with gypsophila, tiny bunches of purple pansies, flaming bring yellow African ball marigolds, prim rich red dahlias, pale blue delphulum in second growth, snapdragon, bronze gaillardia and yellow coreopsis with maroon centres. There were some wonderful sweet peas of a named variety with blossoms fully three times as large as the ordinary flower. They came in pale cream, pink and mauve and had babies' breath to set them off. A novelty at one booth was the "cone flower" with long pointed petals drooping downward, while a tiny blossom that looked much like a prickless Scotch thistle boasted four different names. It came in red and orange, and might be called a "miniature paintbrush," a "tassel flower," a "cacalia" or an "Amelia."

Eggs were 38 to 43 cents a dozen this morning; butter was 43 to 45 cents a pound, and chickens might be bought from 35 to 45 cents a pound, while young ducks were 35 cents a pound.

Pale yellow clover honey sold for 20 cents in glass jars and was priced in pails at $1.25 for ten pounds; 65 cents for five pounds, and 40 cents for two and one-half pound containers.

Gherkins were 15 cents in quart boxes and cucumbers sold at 4 for 10 cents, with ripe golden cucumbers at 25 cents in a large basket.

For 20 cents one might buy a quart of wild raspberries or a quart of the purplish Columbian variety, a measure of Duches apples or a quart of blueberries.

White pickling onions were 15 cents a quart; tomatoes were 40 cents for six-quart baskets and 65 cents for the ten-quart size, and corn was 15 and 25 cents a dozen. Potatoes were 25 cents a peck. Celery was 20 cents a bunch.

A fruit dealer had cherries at 15 cents a quart and peaches at 65 cents a basket.

Chokecherries in six-quart baskets sold at 40 cents, or two baskets for 75 cents.

Fresh trout were 23 cents a pound. Little white Yorkshire pigs were $11 a pair, and a brace of tiny Scotch collie pups had an admiring attendance of three little boys who sighed for the $4 necessary to buy one of the soft small things.

VISITORS LEAVE FOR MOOSE JAW

Ramsay MacDonald and His Daughters Will Then Travel To Rockies.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Ramsay Masdonald, former British Prime Minister, and his three daughters took leave of Winnipeg last night after a one-day stop-over which was crammed with activity. The visitors will proceed direct to Moose Jaw, Sask., where they are scheduled to make a brief halt and then continue to the Rockies.

PREMIER THINKS TRIP HAS AIDED IMMIGRATION

Hon. G. H. Ferguson Promises To Give Sufficient Notice Before Retiring.

ROBB RETURNS.

Minister of Finance Says He Gave Banks Permission To Open Negotiations.

QUEBEC, August 18. — Canadian Press. — "Newspapers retire me occasionally, but I will give sufficient notice before leaving office," said Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, when asked in an interview on arrival from Britain as to rumors that he might retire from the Provincial Conservative leadership.

The Ontario Premier stated that during the three month trip he had discussed migration with ministers and other interested parties in various countries and while immigration was a matter for execution by the Dominion Government he felt he played some part in increasing the interest shown by these countries in Canada, and its prospects for settlers.

Mr. Ferguson said he was sure that tours through this country by such representative groups as "the Young Ambassadors of Empire," and trade delegations were but forerunners of a great settlement development.

Hon. J. A. Robb, Dominion Minister of Finance, who returned at the same time, said the most important part of his trip to Great Britain was the agreement entered into in regard to claims and counter-claims arising out of war.

Asked as to details of the proposed merger of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Standard Bank, Mr. Robb said the contracting parties had received his permission to open negotiations in accordance with the Bank Act. Definite approval by the Dominion Cabinet awaited the action of the shareholders of both banks in agreeing to the fusion. The Treasury Board would also have to approve. He would issue a statement on his returp to Ottawa, if such appeared necessary.

No new trade agreements were negotiated during his trip, Mr. Robb said.

French Premier Faces Financial Catastrophe

PARIS, August 18. — Mme. Poincare, wife of the French Premier, has revealed in a newspaper interview that her husband is facing financial ruin because the costs of his official position vastly exceed his income from the government.

The man who stabilized the franc, increased its value 100 per cent. in two years and repaid the Bank of France 15,000,000,000 francs advanced to the government, is being forced to spend his small savings to live.

The Premier's salary is about $5,000 yearly. It is estimated that he could earn several million francs annually in private legal practice.

PREMIER SAILS WITH KELLOGG

Leaves New York This Morning To Go To Paris To Sign Treaty.

ESCORTED TO SHIP.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 18 (Canadian Press)—Premier Mackenzie King of Canada sailed on the Ile de France early this morning on his way to Paris to sign the Kellogg multilateral treaty. The Prime Minister, who was accompanied by D. O. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, was greeted after he boarded the boat by Frank B. Kellogg, United States Secretary of State, a fellow passenger and the man who brought into being the new treaty.

Mr. Kellogg went to Mr. King's suite to meet him and both came on deck to be photographed.

"I am delighted to be going over," Premier King said. "I think the whole of Canada is back of every movement to create a world spirit which will insure peace, and this is one very important step in this direction."

Mr. King was met at the Grand Central Station by officials of the State Department. A motorcycle escort of police had been arranged and the premier's party was whirled across Manhattan at express train speed to catch the Ile de France.

Independent Advice Necessary on Power Available, says Mr. Hall

The City Council is to be highly commended in taking active steps to acquire from the Dominion Government a lease of dams numbers 4 and 5 and Burleigh Falls with the end in view of developing them for the general advantage of the citizens of this city.

Proposed Developments

The most economical development at these two points would be to have a reach of the canal extended from dam number 4 to dam number 5 and have a twenty-six foot lock constructed at the outlet of the reach below dam number 5 and then a power plant could be erected near the entrance to the present lock number 5. A new lock should be built at Burleigh Falls and the wings of the dam built so as to drown out Lovesick Lock and the power plant could then be erected upon the present site of existing locks.

Independent Advice Necessary

It is most unfortunate however that the city council has not sought to obtain advice from engineers of their own choice and directly responsible to the council. The advice received from independent engineers would have been free from bias and would have commended public confidence. The advice and suggestions would have shown the advantage this city would derive from owning its own power and generating plants.

It is unfortunate that the city council have even asked the local Utilities Commission "To make a report upon the power available at these dams, the cost of development, etc."

The Enemy For Advice?

The city council were badly advised to go into the camp of the enemy in order to get advice because if we may judge from past experiences, the members of the local Utilities Commission have always regarded themselves AS BEING THE SERVANTS of the Hydro Commission rather than the SERVANTS OF THE RATEPAYERS WHO ELECT THEM.

There is no doubt that the city council made this unhappy choice owing to the fact that no funds are available to pay the engineers inasmuch as the estimates for the current year have been made months ago. Under the circumstances the council did the best it could.

Three Courses Open

The local commission are now put up against a real test. It will take one of THREE COURSES. It will do nothing at all and thus treat the city council and the ratepayers who elect its members WITH CONTEMPT, or secondly; it will refer the matters in question to the Hydro Commission which will condemn the proposition in advance of any investigation or thirdly it may honestly make an investigation by independent engineers on the cost of developing power at these two points and the cost at which power could be delivered to the local commision's sub-station.

6,000 Horse Power Available

But what is the use of even making an investigation? say many Hydro Commission supporters. The city is bound by a thirty year contract to take power from the Hydro Commission. The fact is Central Ontario power rights belong to the Province. If the Hon. G. H. Ferguson says "yes" Peterborough may go ahead. That is all that is necessary. The Province will have 6,000 horse power to sell elsewhere.

Real Money to Spend and Real Results

The Dominion Government will have to spend real money to carry out the proposed developments. There can no doubt it will, if the facts are placed before it with earnestness and intelligence. The Dominion has already spent $17,000,000 on Trent Canal and until it is completed this expenditure is wasted, or practically so. In addition to that there is upwards of 50,000 TONS OF COAL GOING TO WASTE EACH AND EVERY YEAR THROUGH SHEER NEGLECT. A wilful waste makes a woeful want. A real want makes an awful gaunt. Try to sell real estate in this city—the finest in this province—and what do you find? An awful want and an awful gaunt.

Remedy to the Earnest

The remedy is in our own hands. Elect men who are in earnest and intelligent, whether it be in the local commission, the city council or the higher places in the Province and Dominion. If they are inspired with faith they may remove mountains. Why then should the taxpayers of this city cringe and crave before the Hydro Commission of Ontario or its creator, the responsible government of the Province of Ontario? A day of reckoning is at hand and none too soon.

August 18th, 1928. D. R. HALL.

ROADS ROUGH FOR PILGRIMS

REST OF WAY CLEAR.

The Examiner has been asked to print a road bulletin for those who may wish to motor to Fort Ste. Marie to-morrow. Peterborough to Lindsay, detour is rough, but passable. Lindsay to two miles east of Sunderland is a good gravel road. Motorists must then take Highway 12 to Orillia. This road is good to Brechin but from there to Orillia it is under construction and a temporary detour has been established. Some sections of the highway are very rough and the section from Brechin to Atherley is not recommended for through traffic. From Orillia to the Fort is a good gravel road.

ONE DWELLING IS AUTHORIZED

Only Four Permits Issued This Week By Engineer's Office.

TOTAL VALUE $2,700.

Only four building permits were issued this week by City Engineer Parsons and these were for one dwelling, two garages and a summer kitchen totalling in all $2,700.

The house is being built by S. Abmott on Lansdowne street, east of Lock street, and will be a two-story six-room brick veneer building. The interior will be finished in pine and there will be an electric fireplace installed. The house will be heated with hot air and will be completed about December 15. The estimated cost is $2,500.

FIFTEEN KILLED BY HURRICANE

150 INJURED.

PARIS, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press)—An Algiers despatch to Le Petit Parisian to-day said fifteen persons had died and one hundred and fifty had been injured in a hurricane accompanied by a tidal wave and earth shocks which devastated the coast of Algeria. As the wires were down the full tale of the disaster has not been told yet.

DELEGATION LEAVES FOR CANADA TO-DAY

Acting Prime Minister Sees Parliamentarians Off at Waterloo.

LONDON, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press Cable).—Lord Halisham, Lord Chancellor and Acting Prime Minister, gave a cheerful farewell to-day to the United Kingdom's delegation to the meetings of the Empire Parliamentary Association in Canada. The parliamentarians left Waterloo station for Southampton to board their steamer for the Dominion.

MONGOL CAVALRY RAID MANCHURIA

RANGERS ENJOY FINE EXCURSION DOWN OTONABEE

Regimental Outing Favored By Fine Weather and Good Crowd.

PLEASANT TIME.

Gore's Landing Provides Enjoyable Place For Dinner and Sports—Scenery Beautiful.

"A success in every way," seems to be the only phrase which describes properly the regimental picnic held yesterday by the Peterborough Rangers. The crowd was just about right, the weather ideal, and the scenery, both on the trip and at the destination, Gore's Landing, was most beautiful.

Not all the members of the regiment were able to attend, nor did all who could not come send their wives and families along, but there were enough out to ensure the success of the occasion and yet not so many as to make the boat trip uncomfortable. There were seats for all and plenty of room to move around.

With the veteran Captain Scollard at the helm, the Steamer Stoney Lake moved out from the George St. wharf a few minutes after eight o'clock. When the concrete and gravel of the wharf and street had been left behind the cooling lake breeze was felt, moderating the heat of the bright sun, which was even at that early hour, almost unbearable.

Hardly had the boat entered Little Lake, of course, when the little folks present felt the need for ice cream, or pop corn, or a drink, or some of the other refreshments which Major Whitherbottom was serving at the booth in the bow of the boat, and the drain on parental purses was begun. Incidentally Major Whitherbottom and his staff put in a busy day.

After the necessary stop at Lock 19, the first port of call (also the last until Gore's Landing was reached) was the street railway wharf, where Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Gordon Hall and family and other passengers, embarked, making the party complete.

From this point the sail was uninterrupted. The steamer moved sedately down the river, whose green banks, with numerous cottages and tents presented an ever changing view of nature's beauties. Some of nature's beauties came out in bathing suits for their morning plunge, while other lassies, with aprons, brooms, etc. came to the doors to wave a greeting to the happy throng on board the boat.

Several members of the band had brought their instruments along and, led by Bandmaster Peryer, they commandeered a shady spot on the upper deck, at the rear, and proceeded to provide music at frequent intervals. Downstairs a number of young men gathered around the piano, with Harry Hodgson at the keyboard, and sang a great many songs, greatly enjoying the sound of their own voice. Major Park acted as choirmaster for a time and the repertoire included almost every song from "Ramona" back to "Swanee River." The strains coming up the stairs and those coming down, did not always harmonize, but nobody minded a little thing like that.

By the time Rice Lake was reached a great many of the younger picnickers were beginning to feel the effects of their frequent trips to the booth, but at the same time the question most mothers had to answer was "When do we eat?" Dinner was delayed somewhat, in most cases, by the fact that a side trip had been arranged, the steamer going several miles down the lake before turning back to dock at the destination just at twelve o'clock.

The landing was the signal for women and children and their escorts to attack the viands contained in a great variety of boxes and baskets.

STEAMSHIP HURONIC REFLOATED YESTERDAY.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., August 18 (Canadian Press). — The steamship Huronic of the Northern Navigation Division of the Canada Steamship Lines, which went aground on a rock known as Lucille Island on August 6, was refloated at 5.40 p.m. yesterday.

Lucille Island is nearly opposite the mouth of the Pigeon River, which marks the border line between Canada and the United States.

The Huronic's 150 passengers were removed from the vessel on the salvage steamer Champlain shortly after she went aground and since then several futile efforts have been made to pull the Huronic off the rock on which she rested.

Three Armed Men Rob C.P.R. Train; One Is Captured

Shoot Farmer Who Was Helping Them Get Car Out of Ditch When Pursuers Come After Stolen Automobile.

ROBBERY AND MURDER OCCUR NEAR PARRY SOUND; THEFT OF CAR FOR GETAWAY BRINGS MEN ON TRAIL

Man Who Fired Fatal Shots Is Captured When Stunned By Monkey Wrench Wielded By Wounded Man—Police Pursue Others Into Near-by Bush.

PARRY SOUND, August 18 (Canadian Press). — Thomas Jackson, Waubamik farmer, was killed and two brothers named Laird were wounded early to-day in a battle on the roadside with bandits, who a short time before had held up a mail car on the Canadian Pacific Railways transcontinental train Number Four, near Romford.

One of the bandits was captured, together with $1,725 in currency, and is now in Parry Sound Jail, while his confederates escaped into the bush, and at last reports were surrounded by police, who expected to make the arrests in a short time.

No definite estimate of the amount obtained by the robbers has been announced.

Following the robbery of the mail car, in which three clerks were held up at the point of guns, between Romford and this city, the robbers made their escape at Parry Sound in a motor car stolen from two United States tourists. At Waubamik they ran into difficulties, and their car crashed into a ditch. Thomas Jackson died an innocent victim of circumstances, but in consideration for what he thought were stranded tourists.

Aroused in the early morning, he hitched up his team and hauled out the car, but just as this was being done, a pursuit car occupied by the owner of the stolen machine and the two Laird brothers, Walter and Houghton, drew alongside.

A battle ensued, in which Jackson was shot through the neck and almost instantly killed, and the Lairds were wounded. One of the bandits, who so far has not been identified, was captured and brought to Parry Sound Jail, while the others made their way into the bush.

A posse led by provincial constables is scouring the district, while word had been received from Toronto that two Provincial inspectors had been sent up.

Walter Laird was shot in the chest and lies in St. Joseph's Hospital, where his injuries are not considered dangerous. His brother Houghton was shot in the hand.

Two Men Entered Car.

Investigation showed that two robbers participated in the hold-up, wearing masks and holding up the clerks as they were preparing the mail bags for transfer to the train going north. They slashed the bags open and rifled them of their contents and remained on the train until it stopped at Parry Sound.

Here a confederate was waiting and the three stole a motor car belonging to Lee Lyman, a visitor from the United States and a brother-in-law of the Lairds. They were heard by the Laird brothers when they started the car and the two Lairds, accompanied by Harold Roland, set out in Roland's car after the robbers, after Houghton Laird had notified the Parry Sound police, who followed. The ditching of the robbers' car, the battle with the pursuers, the death of Jackson and the escape of two bandits followed.

Apparently the Laird brothers had no knowledge that the men they chased were mail car robbers. The shooting started when they demanded their car.

Was Helping Motorist.

TORONTO, Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press.)—Claude Jackson, son of the farmer who was killed at Waubamik in the battle with the mail car robbers early to-day, gave an account of the affair over the long distance telephone.

He said that his father had been called to the door early in the morning and a "foreigner" had offered him a lot of money to pull a car out of a ditch. His father and he hitched up a team of horses and went to the car in which the man was waiting.

"We were starting to hitch up to pull the car out when another car came tearing up the highway with three men in it. As soon as they saw us they started yelling and pulled up," said Jackson. "In this car were the Laird brothers and another man.

"Walter Laird leaped out of the car and shouted 'that car is stolen.' As he jumped he held a monkey wrench in his hand. When the foreigner saw the other car stopping he pulled out a gun. Laird yelled 'Don't

OPS FARMER BREAKS NECK

LIES PARALYZED.

LINDSAY, Aug. 18.—James Robinson suffered a severe accident at his farm this morning when he fell from a load of grain on which he was riding with such force that he broke his neck. He was immediately rushed to the house where several doctors were called. They at once took him to Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay, where he now lies in a paralyzed state.

Mr. Robinson whose farm is a mile and a quarter south of Lindsay on the Peterborough-Lindsay highway, was drawing in grain and his little grandson was driving the horses. The young lad started the horses and Robinson was thrown from the load on the sudden start.

He is a well known resident of this district and was a prominent man in the political life of the community for several terms.

NOVELTY DANCES MOST ATTRACTIVE

A large crowd assembled last evening at Chemong Pavilion to participate in the light fantastic to the strains of music played by the Ohians, under the direction of Eric Roberts, for the novelty dances that had been arranged by Harry Forler, who had decorated the place with many novelties that blended with the color scheme of lighting.

The special features of the evening were the sparkler and balloon dances that appealed to everybody present. The orchestra also participated in the frolic by adorning themselves in old fashioned head attire.

Have You Contributed To the Memorial Fund?

Subscriptions Coming Daily, But Hundreds Expected Still To Come.

With work progressing satisfactorily on the Citizens' War Memorial in the erection of the granite, the bronze figures now at the station, the completion of Peterborough's handsome memorial is in sight within the next few weeks.

A large number of subscriptions to the fund have been received from citizens who were thankful for the opportunity of contributing, but hundreds of subscriptions expected have not been sent in which no doubt will come in due course. In order that a personal canvas is not necessary it is hoped that subscriptions will come in readily during the next week.

Any subscription is welcome from one dollar up. It was felt that every home in the city would care to contribute something in recognition of the faithful discharge of duty by hundreds of our boys who went overseas never to return.

Will you please be kind enough to send in your subscription during the coming week.

FARM WORK IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY DURING FINE WEATHER

WHEAT IS GOOD CROP.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Aug. 18.—After one week of really fine weather, farm work farm work has progressed rapidly and although everyone is still many days behind, the situation looks decidedly more hopeful than during the rainy spell of two weeks ago.

Most local farmers are finished haying, but a few have still some to cut being prevented from finishing by the rush of cutting spring grain which is practically all ripened now.

Threshing is well under way during the last few days and wheat seems to be yielding exceptionally well. In this locality wheat did not seem to be as badly sprouted after the rains as is the case in other parts of the province so that the quality will be fairly good for milling.

The first threshing here was done on the farm of Lindsay Watson on July 31, but rain caused a delay of about two weeks and this is about the same time that every farmer has lost in his harvest. Oats promis is a very heavy yield and while barley is a poor crop, the early varieties are good.

Corn and root crops are growing exceptionally well. Potatoes are being slightly affected by rot but a spell of dry weather will correct this condition.

Second growth alfalfa and other clovers are growing faster than any crop at present annd nearly every dairy herd is in pasture that rival the pictures on the front of farm magazines. Much alfalfa will be cut for hay and this will mean a great deal of wonderful feed for winter.

With pasture of this kind, cows are milking well and the flow is holding up better at the local factories than is usual at this time of year. Factory statements released this week show an average price for cheese of nearly 22 cents with the butter fat price much the same as June from 55 cents a pound upwards. The factory cheques will

W.M.S. CELEBRATE 25TH ANNIVERSARY

(Contributed.)

The W.M.S. Bensfort Auxiliary of the Peterborough Presbyterial celebrated their 25th anniversary by holding an even-song service in the Bensfort United church on Sunday, August 12th, opening with Hymn 274, 'Jesus Shall Reign"; prayer by Mrs. Wilbert Wood; the president, (Mrs. W. C. Cadenhead) reading the Scripture lesson, Psalm 96; a violin solo, "In a Monastery Garden" was beautifully rendered by Miss Roberta Emberson of Toronto.

The president briefly outlined the work of the society past and present, asking Miss Emberson, the first recording secretary of the Bensfort W.M.S. to read the membership roll and financial standing between 1903 and 1910. Mrs. Frank Morrison, the present recording secretary, read the membership roll and standing to date, showing how the society has grown and prospered.

A memorial service during which Mrs. Lang the organist for the evening played Beethoven's 'Funeral March' and during which the president read the roll of honor in remembrance of those members who have entered into the life eternal, closing with Revelation, chapter 14, verse 13. The congregation standing. Hymn 521 followed, sung to Consolation.

Mrs. Bookhout, president of the Peterborough Presbyterial, gave a most interesting and instructive address on W.M.S. work, dealing particularly with the work of the United church. The great advancement when put into plain figures is really stupendous, and shows what a wonderful work has been accomplished in about 125 years towards the Christianizing of the world. The wrapt attention of the congregation all through Mrs. Bookhout's address showed how interesting the theme was.

Miss Stenton, of Chatham, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Edgar Wood, sang "Abide With Me" with expression and sweetness.

During the collection, which was taken up by two of the ladies, the Lord's praper was sung by the choir and people.

A very beautiful service closed with Hymn 208, 'Sun of My Soul."

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press Service). — Indications that Mongolia was more densely populated 20,000 years ago than today are seen by Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, explorer, in remains of an old culture found by the Central Asiatic Expedition of the American Museum of History.

Dr. Andrews, as leader of the expedition, cabled the museum from Pekin yesterday that a 5,000-mile trek by automobile into Mongolia had resulted in the discovery not only of bones of a new prehistoric mammal, but of residence sites and relics of the dune dwellers, who lived in the remote Asiatic land at about the end of the Pleistocene epoch.

THE NEW MASTODON

The message further reported the finding of a new mastodon with spatulate jaw and incisors eighteen inches wide. Two skulls and many bones of the gigantic new mammal, said to be possible larger than Balachitherium and with a humerus as large as a man's body, are in the expedition's packing cases.

FURTHER REVELATIONS

"Earlier expeditions," he asserted, "have revealed about two-thirds of the history of Mongolia during the age of mammals, and it would appear from this report that the present expedition raised this estimate to about four-fifths of the period.

Balachitherium was an immense rhinoceros-like animal, remains of which were found by the Central Asiatic expedition on one of its previous trips into the interior of Mongolia.

HIGHWAY WORK IS PROCEEDING

Three Depositories For Crushed Rock Have Been Established.

PERSONALS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, August 18.—Work on the new Provincial highway is proceeding wel. Three depositories for crushed rock have been established—one at Lindsay Neals, another near the C.N.R. crossing and the third near Bonarlaw School. A quarry has been opened on Thomas Neal's property, one and a half miles south of the village and crushed rock has been laid from the village at that point. Among the latest arrival in machinery is a gasoline grader.

Personals.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEETS AT CAVAN

Members of Mount Pleasant Branch Visitors of Society.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, August 18. — A very interesting meeting of the Cavan Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Creighton Carr on Thursday afternoon.

Mount Pleasant Institute were present and took charge of the program.

The president of the Cavan Women's Institute, Mrs. R. M. Howden, was in the chair and conducted the business part of the meeting, which opened by singing the Institute Ode.

The secretary, Miss Eileen Hunter, then read the roll call to which the Cavan members responded.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted and business arising from the minutes discussed.

It was reported that a set of stainless steel knives had been purchased, and sent to Mrs. Bertha Howson, a former member of the institute, who had moved to Toronto.

A letter of acknowledgment and appreciation was read from Mrs. Howson.

It was decided to ask for a debate in November instead of September as the season would not be so busy.

It was also decided to hold a corn roast in September at the home of Miss Eileen Hunter, the menu to consist of corn and pie.

Miss L. Syer extended an invitation for the institute to meet at her home in September. The Program Committee will be Mrs. C. Carr and Mrs. L. Sutton. This concluded the business session.

Intereting Program.

Mrs. T. Graham, president of Mount Pleasant Institute, then took charge of the program, which was as follows:

A paper by Miss Finlay: "Thoughts, What we Are."

Paper, "The Women's Institute and How it Changes," Mrs. Ira Lowes.

Reading, Mrs. R. G. Graham, My Neighbor's Call."

Paper, "A Well-Planned Week's Work," Mrs. T. Graham.

The meeting closed by all rising and singing the National Anthem.

The program was certainly interesting and profitable. Several excellent papers were read. The rectiations were good, some of them humorous.

The meeting was held on the well-shaded lawn. This proved very pleasant as the afternoon was warm. The Mount Pleasant ladies dropped their musical selections as there was no instrument handy.

The lunch committee served lunch on the lawn and a very pleasant social time was enjoyed aroufid the tea tables Mrs. J. Armstrong, Mrs. L. Sutton, Miss L. Syer, Mrs. C. Fee, Mrs. Melville Carr, Mrs. L. McNeil and Miss Nettie Sutton, assisted Mrs. Carr in serving lunch.

There was a good attendance from both institutes.

Mrs. J. Swain moved and Mrs. F. M. Staples seconded a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation to the visitors for the splendid program which they had given.

The Mount Pleasant ladies responded by thanking the Cavan ladies for the pleasant social time and lunch provided.

Personals.

Miss Dorothy Edmison, Little Britain, who with her brother Ralph, are visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Sutton, Millbrook, was present with Mrs. Sutton.

Miss Hattie Quinn, Peterborough, who is also Mrs. Sutton's guest, was present.

Mrs. Galbraith, Detroit, who is spending a vacation with her mother, Mrs. R. M. Howden, was also a visitor at the gathering.

Mr. James Paul threshed peas in the field on Thursday afternoon. The yield was fair, about 20 bushels to the acre.

Motorless Plane Flies Nearly 8 Hours; Viennese Set Glider Record In Meet

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—Remaining in the air almost eight hours with a motorless plane, the Rhoengeist, the Vienna flier Herr Kornfeld today established a new world's record for gliding flights at the Rhoen contests near Cassel. The aviator's exact flying time was seven hours and fifty-four minutes, or two hours and thirty minutes more than the best previous record made by Bachem.

The Rhoen meet reached its culmination in every respect. No less than 194 starts were made by participants. Nehring, a young Cassel flier, reached a height of 610 metres, and it is asserted that Hirth probably ascended still higher. Magersuppe of Cassel demonstrated a new machine called the Hessenland that possesses aero-dynamic qualities and promises to capture the altitude record next year.

Nearly 300 young flying enthusiasts are now assembled at Wasserkuppe and many more are awaited in the next two or three days to make the contest the greatest held so far.

SMALL BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

OFF LAKEFIELD DOCK.

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 18.—(Examiner Correspondence). — On Wednesday afternoon Carmen Abrams, the seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Abrams, had a narrow escape from drowning. In company with several other children he was swimming off the government dock and got caught by the current and went down twice, when twelve year old Phyllis Charlton, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Charlton caught him and brought him to shore. The plucky girl should be recommended to the Humane Society for her act of bravery.

The need of chains at the dock is demonstrated daily and it is to be hoped that it will not require a trajedy to bring about the aids to safety. The village authorities would do well to look into the question of a proper bathing beach now while the swimming season is here and investigate the needs and then be ready for the season of 1929.

THE BARREN FIG TREE

Matt. xxi. 19. "And when He saw a fig tree in the way, He came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig tree withered away."

THIS occurrence took place on the Monday before our Lord's crucifixion. After making His triumphal entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday, as we term it, He walked out in the evening of the day to sleep at the house of those well-loved friends, Lazarus and his sisters, in the quiet village of Bethany. Early on Monday morning He returned to Jerusalem, and on the road, probably, when they were near the city, He felt hungry. He saw one fig tree—such is the original expression—in the way. St. Mark adds, "afar off, and having leaves." It is clearly implied that there were other fig trees along the road, and that He fixed His attention on this one particular tree, which was distinguished from the others by having leaves at a time of year when the fig tree is bare, or only shows the first signs of what will become fruit by-and-by. In the fig tree, as you know, the fruit shows itself before the leaf, and therefore it might, perhaps, have been supposed that, beneath the leaves which made so fresh and attractive an appearance in the distance, there would be fruit, more or less nearly ripe. Our Lord came to the tree; He found nothing but leaves; and then, Lord of nature as He was, He uttered this word against the tree, "Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever—no man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever." And that some effect followed at once on our Lord's speaking, is plain from St. Matthew's report that presently the fig tree withered away. But it was only on the following morning, when they had once more walked out late to sleep at Bethany, and were again returning towards Jerusalem, that they saw the fig tree dried up from the roots.

We may feel, at the first glance, that generally,—that it raises some questions, at least, which cannot be well set aside. Let us consider them very briefly before we go to the lesson which the miracle is intended to enforce.

First of all, then, it may be asked whether this destruction of the tree does not seem to involve something like an act of injustice. Punishment implies moral responsibility, and moral responsibility is only possible in the case of a free agent. How could this tree do any act—how could it leave any duty undone—what made its destruction a moral necessity, or even a moral propriety? The tree had no will or responsibility of its own. It had leaves and not fruit, because He who gave it existence willed it to bear, in this unwonted manner, leaves and not fruit in the early spring. This fig tree, literally speaking, was just as destitute either of blame or of merit as were those lilies of the field, which our Lord held up to the admiration of his disciples, as being what they were without any effort of their own. Why, then, should the tree be treated as if it were a free agent who had been put upon his trial, and who had failed? Children, we are reminded, may vent their petty displeasure upon inanimate objects; but the master of the moral world might be expected to recognise—(so men have put it)—its true frontiers, and not to punish lower forms of life for faults which are only possible in higher existences. Nay, more than this, St. Mark incidentally observes that, when our Lord blasted the unfruitful fig tree, the time of figs was not yet. Many attempts have been made by scholars to give other meanings to these words in the original language; but there is, I apprehend, no reasonable doubt that they do mean that, at the end of March, or at the beginning of April, the season for the figs had not yet arrived. And if this be so, on what grounds of justice, we are asked, could the fig tree possibly be punished? In not bearing figs at that time, it was, surely, obeying the law of its kind. Could the Law-giver Himself blast it without some shadow of caprice—some suspicion of injustice?

Now, the supposed force of this objection is due to our treating a metaphorical expression as if it were the language of reality. When the Psalmist says that the seed of the ungodly shall be rooted out, everybody knows that he is using an expression which, literally, is only true of a vegetable, but which describes very vividly the utter destruction of a race of human beings. And conversely, we borrow words which apply, properly speaking, to human beings, and we use them when we are speaking of the animal or vegetable world; and so long as we remember that they are only metaphors, and do not properly apply to irrational or inanimate creatures, such a use of words may make our language and our thoughts more vivid, and no harm is done. Take this very word "justice." We speak of "doing justice" to a picture when we mean justice to the artist who painted the picture. The picture itself cannot possibly be treated justly or unjustly, although we may form, as to our loss or to our gain, a true or a false estimate of its merits. Justice and injustice pre-suppose rights to be respected or to be violated, as the case may be, and rights, properly speaking, belong in a literal, as distinct from the metaphorical sense, only to a person.

In order to have rights, it is not enough to exist. Only a self-determining being who can produce, and can consciously possess what he produces, has rights in the complete sense of that word.

Thus, before and above all others, God has rights—rights absolute and unqualified over all His creatures, since all owe their existence to Him. And the mischief and the misery of human sin consist pre-eminently in this—that it involves a denial and a rejection of the rights of God. Man, too—every man—has such rights, because man, too, is a person. And one of the many mischiefs of slavery, for instance, is that it treats man, not as a person, but as a thing, and thus involves a denial of human rights in their most essential aspects.

But have the lower animals rights? Well, in one sense, they have. Just as they have a shadow of reason and of memory in their faculties of instinct and of association, so they have shadows of human rights. They have, at any rate, such a claim to our care and consideration, as is involved in the fact of their being God's creatures, endowed with feeling. But then, by God's appointment, these claims are subordinated, not, most certainly, to our passions or to our caprice, but to our necessities. To torture or destroy an animal out of curiosity, or spite, or pure wantonness, is to violate the law of the universe. To treat animals as intended to do human work, and to supply human food, is to observe that law; and against these last very enormous claims on the part of man, animals have no rights.

And when we descend to the vegetable world, the case is even stronger. A tree is merely a thing. It has not a shadow of personality attaching to it; and when we talk of doing justice or injustice to a tree, we have to remember that, quite literally, these terms do not apply to anything that we can possibly do to it, and that to talk of "injustice" in blasting or cutting down a tree is good English if we are in the realms of poetry, but that it is nonsense if we are in those of moral truth. The tree is there to be made the most of by man. No moralist, so far as I know, has yet maintained that in using it to furnish our houses, or to brighten our hearts, we sin against any law of natural justice. Surely, then, if by its sudden destruction the tree can do more, much more, than minister to our bodily comfort—if in its way it can be made to teach us a moral lesson of the first importance, there is no room for any question of injustice, unless we are to take leave of sober fact, and to bury ourselves together in poetry and metaphor.

Here, then, you will observe, it is necessary to dwell on the consideration that, as against our Lord, the tree had no rights,—that as St. Paul describes man in the hands of God, as clay in the hands of the potter, this description must apply with at least equal force to the lower creatures of God's hand; for even if our Lord had only been a man charged with a great and beneficent mission to mankind at large, and had destroyed a tree in order to advance one step in that mission, it would have been equally impossible to charge him with injustice, since, according to the true conception of the universe which ever subordinates what is merely material to what is moral, if a tree can be made by its destruction to illustrate a moral or spiritual truth, so far from being the object of injustice, it has distinguished honour put upon it: it does the noblest work that it can possibly do.

But if there is no injustice—if the tree had no rights—was there not in this act of our Lord a touch of severity which is, at least, unlike the characteristic mildness and beneficence of His action and hearing? There are, no doubt, my brethren, many who use this language who mean something more than it immediately implies. They wish to think that our Lord is benevolent in such sense as to have lost sight of justice—of all that is due to sin—of all that is due to the rights of God—of all the lessons that are necessary in order to enforce these solemn sides of truth. They would seem, sometimes, to have constructed in their imagination—in their literature—a kind of fancy Christ, quite unlike the Christ of the gospels—a Christ warranted to bless all in this modern world, which the true Christ of the gospels must have condemned—must condemn. They have veiled His cross, it seems, from the eyes of men, for they have made it the symbol, not of an atonement for sin, but only of an act of heroism. They have respectfully removed the crown of thorns, and replaced it by a crown of roses. A Christ like this may not consistently speak a word at which a tree withers into death, and therefore the narrative has to be treated as a sort of foreign element in the text of the gospels—as a wholly anomalous and unaccountable incident which had better be passed over with a light step, as it will not bear examination.

And yet how untrue is this estimate of our Lord upon which the criticism proceeds. It is an estimate which would not really do honour to a mere man. What, brethren, is goodness? Goodness is benevolence, no doubt, among other things, but goodness is a great deal else than benevolence. Before all things, I apprehend goodness is truth, it is truth in conduct, and, as being truth, it is sometimes also justice, and, as being justice, it is sometimes also severity. One of the worst traits of the bad man in the Psalter is his moral indifference. "Neither doth he abhor anything that is evil." Easy good nature, which will not rouse itself at the cost of discomfort and even of giving pain to others, is not really goodness; it is indifference to that which goodness requires. And our Lord alike in His teaching and in His action shows Himself to be of an utterly different moral mould from this. As a Teacher, he tells men—classes of men—the sternest truths in the very plainest language. As compared with sin, He makes little account of pain. "Pluck out the right eye," He says—"Cut off the right hand sooner than sin." He reveals the sinner's doom more clearly than any one of His apostles. He does not leave it to them to proclaim the less popular side of the religion which he comes to teach. The last thing that could be said of Him with truth would be, that in Him all else gave way to a general benevolence.

But it may be asked, "Did not the tree feel?" I answer you, I do not know. Feeling, like life, is one of those mysteries of nature which lie closest to our existence here, and of the frontiers of which we know little or nothing. Speaking broadly, feeling is an attribute of animal life; but we have all heard of plants which shrink from the touch, and it is barely possible that something analogous to feeling is to be found in plants of less sensitive organization.

Even if this be so—and here, let me repeat it, we are altogether in the region of conjecture—it is not, I submit, more cruel to destroy a plant in order to teach a great moral truth, than to destroy a plant in order to eat it. If by its destruction the plant does our soul a service, there is quite as good a reason for putting it to some sort of distress—if we must use the term—in the process of destroying it, as there is if it is wanted to support our bodies. Our Lord has a great and solemn lesson to teach His disciples: this lesson could best be taught by the destruction of this particular tree. Upon the whole, in the view of the needs of all His creatures, it was not severity; it was the truest mercy thus to destroy it.

But it has been suggested that our Lord was, in this matter, either deceiver or deceived, for St. Mark says that, "seeing a fig tree—one fig tree—afar off, having leaves, he came, if haply he might find anything thereon. St Matthew implies as much. Did our Lord know that the tree had no figs on it? If not, how could He be what He claimed to be in relation to nature and to man? If He did know, upon what principle did He thus act so as to give the impression that He was really ignorant.

Christian faith, of course, cannot hesitate between these alternatives. Our Lord, as St. Augustine has put it, at least, was not less informed as to the general habits of the fig tree than an ordinary person. Despite the false promise of the leaves, He would have known that the time of figs was not yet, that it was too early to expect even the hasty fruit before the summer to which Isaiah makes reference. Whatever might be the case with others, He would not be misled by a premature and irregular show of leaf. He who could instruct His disciples on the preceding day how, in a village over against them, which neither He nor they had yet visited, they would find an ass tied and a colt with her—He surely had no need to walk up to the tree and lift the leaves in order to discover whether it had fruit or not.

But then this throws us on the other alternative. We have to inquire why He acted as if the discovery had yet to be made,—why as if, on its being made, He spoke as one who felt a shade of disappointment, or of anger. And the answer is that this incident is, from first to last, an acted parable.

It would, perhaps, be truer to say that it is an acted prophecy.

In the East, action was and still is often a more vivid and effective way of communicating truth than language. When a prophet of Israel sat in sackcloth, with dust on his head, by the side of the road along which the royal chariot would pass, his action was a much more powerful rebuke to the monarch, for neglect of duty, than a sermon would have been, even though it had an introduction, three arguments and a conclusion. The East, as I have said, is traditionally the home of eloquent action: but in all countries and ages human action is a kind of human language, and it is often much more expressive than words which fall upon the ear.

In our intercourse with each other, and in our worship of God, action expresses thought and feeling in a condensed way, which often could only be put into very cumbrous and awkward language; and our Lord on this occasion was teaching—teaching in the main by action. He was acting a parable, and no objection can be urged against His action to which teaching by parable—that is to say, by putting forward an imaginary story as if it were literally true—is not always open. Just as when our Lord spoke of a husbandman, or of ten virgins, His hearers did not suppose Him to mean a literal husbandman, or literally ten virgins, so, when He walked up to the tree, they would have known that He was teaching them parabolically: and this action in walking up to it implied nothing whatever either as to His knowledge or His ignorance about its fruit. That tree, covered at this unwonted time with its pretentious crop of leaves, gave Him an opportunity of teaching a great and solemn lesson which those around Him needed to learn. He might have put His lesson, we may dare to say, into the shape of a parable:—"A certain man, seeking a fig tree in the way, far off, having leaves, came to it if haply he might find fruit thereon." But the spoken words would have arrested the attention of His disciples less visibly than the action under their very eyes; and our Lord who knew what was the real case of the tree, knew also how He could most persuasively instruct His followers.

What, then, was the lesson which on this occasion He desired to teach? Was it simply the shame and guilt, in every responsible creature of God's hand, of moral unfruitfulness? Did He cause the tree to wither because it was the symbol of nations and of men who do nothing for His glory and nothing for their fellows?

That He does punish such unfruitfulness is certain, but this is not the lesson which He would teach us here. The time of figs was not yet. To use figurative language, the tree did not sin by not producing figs at a time of the year when they could only have been produced in the open air by what we call a freak of nature, or, rather, in despite of her ordinary rules. This tree was a symbol of that which, in man, is a worse sin than a merely fruitless life. It had leaves, you will observe, though it had no fruit. That was the distinction of this particular tree among its fellows ranged along the road, with their bare, leafless, unpromising branches. They held out hopes of nothing beyond what met the eye. This tree, with its abundant leaves, gave promise of fruit that might be well nigh ripe, and thus it was a symbol of moral or of religious pretentiousness. Not simply as unfruitful, but because, being unfruitful, it was covered with leaves, it was a fitting symbol of that want of correspondence between profession and practice—between claims and reality—between the surface appearances of life and its real direction and purpose—which our Lord condemned so often and so sternly in the men of His time. And, as representing this, it was condemned too.

And thus the fig tree represented immediately, we cannot doubt, in our Lord's intention, the actual state of the Jewish people. The heathen nations, judged from a Divine point of view, were barren enough. Israel was barren also, but then Israel was also pretentious and false. Israel was the fig tree of the spoken parable which our Lord had pronounced just a year before In that parable, you will remember, a man who had a fig tree planted in his vineyard, complains to the dresser of the vineyard, "Behold these three years I come seeking fruit on this tree, and find none. Cut it down. Why cumbereth it the ground?" And the dresser had pleaded for indulgence and delay. "Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it and dung it, and if it bear fruit, well: and if not, after that thou shalt cut it down." No Jew with his eye on the language of the prophets, particularly of Ezekiel, could have doubted that in this parable our Lord referred to the Jewish people: but what He then taught by words He now would teach, in its completeness, by action, for now the year for which the dresser of the vineyard had pleaded had just run out. Jesus had entered Jerusalem. He had seen how this precious year had been spent. His penetrating glance had surveyed all that was fair and unsubstantial—all that was hollow and pretentious—in the national and in the individual life of Judaism. Israel was covered with leaves. The letter of the law—the memories, the sepulchres, of the prophets—the ancient sacrifices—the accredited teachers—all were in high consideration. Israel was, to all appearances, profoundly religious. But the searching eye of our Lord found no fruit upon this tree beneath the leaves—no true soul-controlling belief even in the promises of the Messiah, of which they made so much—no true sense of their obligation and of their incapacity to please God. The Jew, as St. Paul afterwards urged, made his boast in the law. He was confident that he was himself a guide of the blind, a light of those that were in darkness, an instructor of the foolish, and a teacher of babes. But then, while proclaiming thus to the heathen nations around him his position and his prerogatives, he taught not himself. He, with the decalogue on his lips, could steal, could be an adulterer, could commit sacrilege. Even when this was not the case, so little was he alive to the exacting severity of the Divine law, that, "being ignorant of God's righteousness, he went about to establish his own righteousness, not submitting himself to the righteousness of God." During that year of patient appeal our Lord had stretched out His hands in entreaty all day long to a disobedient and gainsaying people. The tree by the roadside was a visible symbol of the moral condition of Israel as it presented itself to the eye of Jesus Christ, and there was no longer any reason for suspending the judgment which had been foretold in the Savior's parable. "No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever." If humanity needed light, strength, peace, consolations, Israel could no longer give them. Israel was hereafter to be a blasted and withered tree on the wayside of history.

But the parable applies with equal force to nations or to Churches in Christendom, which make great pretensions and do little or nothing of real value to mankind. For a time the tree waves its leaves in the wind. It lives on, sustained by the traditional habits and reverence of ages. Men admire the symbol of so many blessings—of so much activity and life. There is nothing to raise a question as to the true state of the case, and the proverb is as true of nations, as of individuals, that they are often taken at their own estimate—that "so long as thou doest good unto thyself, men will speak well of thee." But, at His own time, Christ passes along the highway—passes to inquire and to judge some unforeseen calamity, some public anxiety, some shock to general confidence, lifts the leaves of that tree, and discovers its real fruitfulness. And thus history is full of withered fig trees. There are ancient dynasties—there are world-famed cities—there are national Churches—which have heard the condemning words of Christ, "No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever."

We may think, to us English, at any rate, these words do not apply. Surely it were better, as St. Paul told the Gentile converts who might deem themselves out of the reach of those dangers which had led to the rejection of Israel, surely it were better and wiser not to be high-minded, but to fear.

And, lastly, to every individual Christian this parable is full of warning. The religious activity of the human soul may be divided, roughly, into leaves and fruit—into showy forms of religious activity and interest, on the one side, and the direct produce of religious conviction on the other. It is much easier, we all know, to grow leaves than to grow fruit; and many a man's life veils the absence of fruit by the abundance of leaves. This is always true. It is always easier, for instance, to take interest in and to discuss religious questions, than to submit the will entirely to religious principle. But it is especially true in days like ours—days of great activity—days of widespread unsettlement—days of religious revival—days, it may be (at any rate we are often so told) of transition towards some new phases in the life of the Christian Church. In days like these, every newspaper, every public place of converse, carries men's thoughts in one way or another to religious questions. And it is difficult to appreciate the extent of the change which has occurred in this respect, as far as this country is concerned within the last thirty or forty years. It has, no doubt, an encouraging side, for which we may thank God. This constant reference to religious matters brings the most important of all subjects before the minds of those who would otherwise forget it—brings it before them, whether they will or not. It reminds them, at any rate, although indirectly, that the unseen and all that belongs to it are of unspeakable importance to human beings. It is easy, and, unhappily, it is true, to say that much of such religious discussion and interest is, in itself, trivial and unsatisfactory enough. That may well be the case; and yet nothing connected with this vastest of all subjects is really unimportant, and trifles, as they appear, are often the keys to truths and principles which immediately underlie them. With whatever results, young persons now become acquainted, to a certain extent, with the controversies of the time, and converse on the tenets and observances which divide schools and Churches. But the danger, my brethren, is lest this interest, this knowledge, should be taken for more than it is worth. It is better than nothing—better than indifference, but it proves nothing as to the condition of the conscience—nothing as to the real tenor of the heart—nothing as to the deepest movements of the inmost life—nothing as to the soul's state before God, as to its prospects for eternity. An anxious question for all of us is whether the foliage, so to call it, of our Christian life is the covering of fruit beneath that is ripening for heaven, or whether it is only a thing of precocious and unnatural growth, which has drained away the tree's best sap before its time and made good fruit almost impossible. To take an interest in religious questions, in religious society, in religious observances, is most right and important; but it is not necessarily the same thing as being the servant of Christ our Lord in whose soul His wonder-working grace is bringing forth the fruit of the Spirit—"love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. These are the results for which our Lord will look, and no show of leaves, no fervour of language, no glow of feeling, no splendour of outward achievements for His cause and His Kingdom, will compensate for their absence.

And for the production of such fruit, His grace is sufficient. Washed by His blood, illuminated by His word, fed and invigorated by His sacraments, the Christian soul is like a tree planted by the water side, that should bring forth its fruit in due season, and whose leaf also should not wither.

Pray, brethren, above all things that we may be real. Let us, when we have used strong religious language—let us ask ourselves whether we really mean every word of it. When men say kind and flattering things about us, let us ask ourselves how far, in God's sight we deserve them. Let us be quite sure that it is far better that God should own the fruit of our lives by-and-by, than that men should pay compliments to the leaves here and now. When our Lord will visit us in death and in judgment, this we know not. We do know that when He comes, He will know and see all. We know that when He demands is fruit, and not merely leaves.

CONSCIENCE

(By Robert C. Chapman.)

When peace reigns in the Conscience there is always power over sin. Peace is like a sentinel that keeps guard at the door of the heart; if the sentinel be off his post, either the tumult within drowns the voice of the spirit, or, because of the stillness of death, his voice is not heard.

A guilty Conscience is one of Satan's great weapons against the children of God; faith can only be bold as the Conscience is clean.

There is no trial to the believer like guilt upon the Conscience; but it is the triumph of faith to see guilt removed by the atoning blood of Christ. A very little stain upon the Conscience makes a wide breach in our communion with God.

If we have a doubt upon our minds upon any point, we should go straight to Jesus to get it solved. Love abhors a winding course.

If the Conscience be not rightly instructed, it becomes a tool for Satan; if it speaks a false peace, it works ruin; and if it does not speak peace at all, it is a tormentor.

We should never deal lightly with the whispers of a doubtful Conscience.

Let Christ keep the heart, and the heart shall keep the life.

Our lack of walking in the spirit often moves others to like negligence.

How great a blessing is a tender Conscience; one that will discern and deal with a little sin—that will lead us to say, "Search me, O God!" In this state we not only grieve at any angry thought, or an outbreak of temper, but even for a thought of unbelief that may but glance across the mind.

The pardon of sin sealed on the Conscience strengthens the soul for communion with God; whilst guilt on the Conscience drives us from God. These are noiseless things in the world, but great things with God.

The child of God should remember that he has the root of every evil within him; if he take not heed to tend the garden of his Conscience, evil weeds will spring up and grow; especially will the besetting sins of his unconverted days be his plague.

A scrupulous Conscience comes of the flesh, and ignorance of God's will; but a good Conscience is among the best of God's blessings, for it is cleansed by the blood of Christ, and enlightened by the Scriptures and the Spirit of God.

We must deal with our Consciences as people do with their houses; if they would keep their dwellings clean, they must day by day be cleaning.

A spiritual Conscience deals most with the evil of the heart; but when the conscience is not spiritual, the heart is the last things dealt with.

A rebuke from the Lord duly regarded will lead us into safe paths, whilst a rebuke not heeded is the forerunner of sharp correction.

The heavenly Conscience never says, "Must I give up this? Must I give up that?" For this pleases not the heart of Christ.

Have I faith and a good Conscience? Then I can leave everything to God—let Him give, or take, or withhold as He pleases.

A pure Conscience is a conscience so thoroughly purged by the blood of Christ, that it makes the soul, as it were, a mirror wherein is seen the face of our heavenly Father.

A tender Conscience concerning unbelief and its slightest stirrings, will greatly help us in our path of obedience, and in our walk with God.

We ought to be trying our Consciences by the Word of God and helping our neighbours to do the same. It would indeed be a blessing to the saints, were they to exercise themselves in judging everything by the Scriptures. A child of God may walk unblameably in men's eyes, yet have little of the mind of Christ, and little of the spirit of communion; his Conscience may be in so small a measure guided by the word of God, that as to edifying others, he is little better than a piece of lumber.

DISAGREEABLE AND DANGEROUS.

Among motorists the demand that such highways as the Chemong and Lakefield roads should be oiled is increasing in intensity.

A week of dry weather has increased the dust nuisance, and when traffic is heavy on these roads the conditions are not only disagreeable to an extreme but dangerous as well.

So thick are the clouds of dust that at times drivers might as well be driving in a dense fog.

The Ontario Government will pay 50 per cent. of the cost of treating these roads with oil.

Would it not be good business, not only for the motorists, but for the farmer living along such highways, for the city and county to take advantage of this Government assistance and take steps to have the Lakefield and Chemong roads oiled?

"NEAR MONTREAL."

A letter that arrived in Peterborough yesterday morning from Cleveland suggests that there still remains much for the Chamber of Commerce and the Trent Waterway Association to do in the way of educating our neighbors in regard to this district.

This communication was addressed to "Peterborough, near Montreal, Canada."

Apparently local propaganda is not having its full effect among our Ohio friends, and we call the attention of the officials of the above named bodies to this evidence.

Probably they could secure the assistance of Toronto men engaged in this publicity work, inasmuch as the address is rather a slap in the eye to the Queen City as well.

If the letter had been addressed "near Toronto" it would not have been so bad, but placing Peterborough "near Montreal" is the limit.

Really something should be done in regard to this sort of thing.

THE TOURIST INDUSTRY.

According to the Provincial Department of Highways, more than ten million American tourists will visit Ontario this year, which with several million from other countries and provinces will bring the total to some 40 per cent. greater than last year.

It is estimated that at least $100,000,000 will be spent in the Province by this army of visitors, a figure which indicates the development of the tourist industry into one of Ontario's biggest industries and justifies municipalities in extending their efforts to secure a larger share of this profitable traffic.

Early in the summer the movement of tourists into Ontario did not assume the proportions of other years, but in recent weeks there has been a big increase in the number of arrivals, and practically all sections of the Province are reaping the benefit of the expenditures made by these millions of visitors.

There is every reason why this part of Ontario should next year intensify its campaign to attract tourists.

Fewer industries offer surer or more lucrative returns.

COMMON-SENSE RULES.

Of rules for the guidance of motorists there would seem to be almost a plethora. Those which have been devised by the Province of Quebec Safety League, as the result of an abnormal number of highway accident in that Province this season, contain so many provisions of the common-sense variety that they are worth reproduction:

"In a curve or steep descent drive at eight miles an hour.

"At intersections of roads or streets drive at eight miles an hour.

"When three hundred feet from a railway crossing slow down to eight miles an hour.

"In a city, town or village, or in any populated section, drive your taxi or pleasure car at twenty miles an hour.

"Drive your automobile on the right half of the road. The other half is for vehicles coming from the opposite direction.

"Be constantly on the lookout for children. You have to think of them.

"Do not spatter pedestrians.

"Do not blind other drivers with glare lights. Dim your lights when you meet another automobile.

"Do not leave your auto on the side of the road without lights when it is dark.

"Have your brakes inspected from time to time. Your safety on the roads depends largely on them.

"Do not fail to stop when a police officer signals to you or whenever you see a sign or poster directing you to stop. In case of accident give your name and address.

"When passing a horse, if it shows signs of fright, take proper means to protect the person driving or riding it and if necessary stop the engine."

General observance of these rules would undoubtedly lead to marked improvement in highway conditions and to some decline in the growing number of accidents.

HOOVER FIRES THE FIRST GUN.

Standing on the campus of a university where he lived as a student, Mr. Herbert Hoover has fired his first big gun in the campaign for the United States presidency. It is a well-phrased, able, and dignified utterance, the sum total of which is that Mr. Hoover appeals for the presidency on three main grounds: (1) Rigid enforcement of prohibition; (2) relief for farmers through a three-fold plan, including tariff protection; and (3) religious tolerance.

Mr. Hoover, it is clear, is not going to permit himself to be circumscribed by his party's platform nor by the machine-made dictates of some Republican leaders. His pronouncement on prohibition is in line with what was said at Kansas City, but Mr. Hoover is independent enough to admit that existing conditions under Volsteadism are not all that they should be, and that some remedy for them must be found. Moreover, while holding that the prohibition law must be enforced, so long as it remains part of the constitution, he sensibly points out that there can be no challenge to the right of anybody working by legitimate means for its abrogation.

On the question of farm relief, too, Mr. Hoover goes much farther than most eastern Republicans. He is not for the McNary-Haugen bill, with its allegedly unworkable equalization fee, but he adopts paternalism to the extent that he would have the Government loan farmer organizations large sums of money to assist them in marketing.

Finally, on the question of religious tolerance—a question made acute by the fact that Governor Smith, the Democratic candidate, is a Roman Catholic—Hoover strikes a fine and courageous note. He might have remained silent, might easily have taken advantage of the prejudices which in some southern and border States threaten a Democratic schism, but, on the contrary, he strikes at religious intolerance in language as vigorous as Governor Smith himself might use, thus:

> "In this land, dedicated to tolerance, we still find outbreaks of intolerance. I come of Quaker stock. My ancestors were persecuted for their beliefs. Here they sought and found religious freedom. By blood and conviction I stand for religious tolerance both in act and in spirit. The glory of our American ideals is the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience."

Taken as a whole, Mr. Hoover's utterance sets a fine example in political controversy, one that might be profitably followed by political leaders in all countries. One searches this speech in vain for a small or slighting remark directed against Mr. Hoover's opponent, nor is there in it any of that propensity toward vituperative abuse, so common and so futile in the pronouncements of so many politicians. This speech, in fact, is the declaration of the political creed of a high-minded and educated gentleman, concerned more with his country's well-being than with shoddy partisan fustian. If Governor Smith follows his example, and his record is a promise that he will follow it, the struggle for the presidency should at least be a credit to political democracy.

That it is going to be a hard struggle, in doubt until the last vote is polled, there is evidence aplenty. The normal high financial interests are naturally Republican, because it is the tariff party, the party of property, but the rank and file are different. The farmers, usually Republican, are in a state of mutiny; the wets are openly and vigorously for Smith; New York State, figuring heavily in the Electoral College, and carried in 1924 by Coolidge, is likely to go Democratic.

The Democrats, on the other hand, are more united, more aggressive and more brilliantly led than for years in their history. Such Republican defections as that of John J. Raskob and Pierre Dupont are tremendously significant. For they not only mean that the Democrats will have a full war-chest—a mighty thing in any election; they mean also that the reputation which Governor Smith has gained as a man of affairs, practical and level-headed, a man who gets things done, and does them in a sensible way and with efficient results, is counting with important men all over the United States.

Nor is Smith's religion likely to be the handicap to him that many at first believed. His record at Albany is so unblemished, his fairness to Protestants and his almost passionate hatred of intolerance, so evident, his antagonists have thus far made no headway against him on religious ground. Smith, too, is so courageously willing to meet his assailants on open ground that he has won the admiration of all who like to see fair play. William Allen White, the famous Kansas editor, who made a bitter attack upon him, has been compelled to withdraw most of his charges and to apologize; and Reverend John Roach Straton, who assailed him from his pulpit, is now showing no great inclination to meet Smith face to face in the same pulpit to uphold his accusations.

Tammany, too, thought to be a heavy load to carry, is being largely offset by the fact that the notorious Vare machine in Pennsylvania has loaded itself upon Hoover, plus that curious Chicago imbecile, "Big Bill" Thompson. If anyone attempts to shout Tammany at Smith the retort of Thompson and Vare for Hoover will be perhaps enough to balance it.

It is no business of Canadians to sympathize with or wish for the triumph of either American party. Both parties, fortunately, are led by men of sterling character and fine achievement, and no matter which wins it is certain that the good relations which exist between Canada and the Republic will not be impaired. Yet as a spectacle of democracy in action, and because of the many unique features which distinguish this campaign, it must be for Canada, as well as for most of the world, the most interesting thing that will occur during the next two months.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It has been discovered that a number of New York lifeguards can't swim. But they probably make a fine picture in a bathing suit.

"The drunken driver must go," says a newspaper heading. That's just the trouble. He always does go.

Somebody stole part of a generator from a motorcycle in front of the Oshawa police station. It must be great to be able to sleep like that.

So far as is known Miss Agnes MacPhail, M.P., has not had that trip over the Trent Canal yet.

Buy your tickets for the Exhibition in strip form. You will want to visit the big fair often, and this opportunity enables you to save money.

It is no longer unanimous for Al Smith. An American car bearing a Hoover banner was noticed on George street the other day.

A Thought

"I CAN'T AFFORD IT"

Suppose you father were alive and came up to your house and said, "Son, I am down and out, will you take care of me?" If it would only take fifty cents a day to take care of him, would you say, "No, I can't afford it?"

Well, some day you are going to have an old man to take care of and it isn't going to be your father—it is going to be you. Why not invest fifty cents a day in life insurance to take care of him in old age?

GOD'S MINUTE.

How shall He not with Him * * * freely give us all things.—Rom. 8:32.

O God, our Father, we thank Thee that we may come to Thee. Though Thou art holy, and we know how unfit we are to present ourselves before Thee, yet, O our Saviour, Thy sufferings and death for us give us the precious knowledge that Thou dost love and will forgive us. We thank Thee that we may come so freely and tell Thee all that is in our hearts. We are deeply conscious of our weakness; we pry for strength and power. Many times we fail to do what we should; help us to make our lives useful and helpful to others.

Thou knowest, too, how many things fall to our hands to do; in the midst of it all, give us sweet hours of quiet and repose, keep us from becoming anxious or complaining. We ask for a trust in Thee that will still the soul and help us to see that Thou art in all our lives. Lord, Thou hast been so much to us, we want all the world to know Thee, help us ever to use Thy blessings that of those near and far away, some may be led to know and to love Thee. Help us to so live that our lives shall be a testimony of our love for Thee and thankfulness to Thee, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

The Question Box

A.M.B. Q.—There is some confusion as to the correct date of Oscar Wilde's birth. The date given on his tomb in Pere Lachaise Cemetery, Paris, October 16, 1854, is not that given in various books of reference. Please advise.

A.—The date given on Oscar Wilde's tomb at Pere Lachaise is correct. Wilde was born at 21 Westland Row, Dublin, on October 16, 1854, and was baptised at St. Mark's, Dublin, on April 26, 1855. No birth certificate is available, as registration of births in Ireland was not compulsory until 1864; but his baptism certificate, giving the date of his birth as above, has been accepted as evidence in a court of law.

D. F. Q.—Would you please publish the strength of the United States and Great Britain's air force, army and navy?

A.—The peace strength of the two armies is: United States 145,000; Great Britain, 210,000. Great Britain has an air force of 780 airplanes, while United States has already completed 696 planes of the proposed 1,000. The strength of the navies are as follows: United States: 18 battleships, 37 cruisers, 30 destroyers, and 194 other craft; Great Britain, 16 battleships, 4 battle cruisers, 62 cruisers, 159 destroyers and 216 other craft.

The Traffic Officer

If every car owner used Champion Spark Plugs there would be fewer traffic jams due to cars stalling.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive alli-manite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., August 18 (Canadian Press). — The domestic trade in Canadian Western oats was moderately active here yesterday and the values were firmly maintained. However, the demand from foreign buyers for grain was extremely dull and little business was transacted.

The inquiry for spring and winter wacht flour was quiet, but the values were steady.

A good trade was done with United States buyers in all lines of millfeed. The local demand was also fair and prices were firm. Standard grades of rolled oats remained unchanged.

The undertone to the egg market was firm under a good demand from local buyers. The receipts were 1,983 cases.

Trade in imported beans was quiet but prices were unchanged. Car lots of white hand-picked sold at $3.90 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $4.10 per bushel, ex-store.

Little business was done in butter and the undertone to the market continued easy, but there was no further change in prices. Receipts were 2,693 packages.

The feature of the cheese trade was the improved demand that developed from foreign buyers and a moderate amount of business was done. The domestic trade was fair and values were steady. Receipts were 20,030 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, August 18 (Canadian Press). — Confronted by unofficial estimates that the Canadian Prairie Provinces will harvest 531,000,000 to 554,000,000 bushels, wheat price advances yesterday failed to hold well. Buying, which attained considerable volume at times, was based largely on opinion that at present levels the ownership of wheat is not a speculation but an investment.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, half cent net lower to ¼c advance, corn 1 cent off to ¾ cent up, oats ¼ cent to ¾ cent down, and provisions varying from 5 to 7 cents attackto a rise of 35 cents.

In addition to Canadian crop estimates of 118,300,000 to 141,000,000 bushels larger than was harvested last year, the wheat market late in the day had to withstand the fact that export demand for wheat from North America was disappointing, and was limited to a moderate amount exclusively from Canada. Prior to late recessions in price, however, the market had been given good support. With special notice being taken of a statement from the president of one of the largest grain companies in Chicago that the difference in world supplies of wheat this year and last is not so great as to justify any material change from last year's average level.

It was pointed out that Chicago wheat quotations yesterday were 25 to 29 cents a bushel lower than a year ago. Ideas that there is a tremendous world crop, and that wheat should seek an extremely low level were attacked. On the contrary, friends of higher prices asserted that wheat has now reached a level at which it would be reckless to press the selling side in hope of any material profit. Nevertheless, with the Canadian Government crop report due, wheat had a nervous tone in the late dealings, and the close saw gains virtually wiped out.

Corn prices most of the day were firm for the September delivery, but newcrop months were easier on account of favorable weather.

Leading owners of cash corn were out of the market for the time being. Cash corn prices were steady to 2 cents up relatively, with Number 2 yellow selling at 14 cents over September, and corn arrivals in Chicago yesterday totalling only 48 cars. Oats tended lower, influenced by liberal receipts here, 288 cars. September and December oats sold at a new low price record for the crop.

Demand—$4.84¾ to $4.84¾.

The U. S. Patent Office has granted patents to the Hudson Motor Car Company on the "F-Head" high-compression motor. The patent—No. 1,656,051, relating to internal combustion engines—covers the entire arrangement of valves, spark plugs and combustion chamber.

With the new patented design Hudson motors now are built with a compression ratio of nearly 6 to 1—or 20 per cent above the average—with correspondingly high standards of acceleration, fuel economy and power. It is practically impossible to make the motor knock under even the most adverse operating conditions. The motor is the liveliest, most powerful and economical Hudson has ever built.

And it gives the most brilliant performance in Hudson history, far in advance of anything the industry has known.

THE ADVENTURES OF SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS CLUB

One Good Turn

We boys always know when a new family moves into our town. The way I came to know about the Howard family moving here was by Clarence Wilks coming up to me one day—and Clarence was about the biggest sissy that ever joined our club.

"Hawkins," he says, "will you lick a fella for me?"

"Gee whizz, Clarence," I says, "you ask me to do everything for you—why don't you do your own fighting when you get in a scrap."

"All right, don't get sore about it," he says; "I just thought you were a friend of mine, that's all."

"I am a friend of yours," I said, "you know I am. But how the dickens did you get into this scrap?"

"There's a new family moved in our neighborhood by the name of Howard," he says; "they got a boy named Jack who doesn't like me. He says I get his goat. He won't say any more—every time he sees me he runs me home."

"I know a good way to stop him doing that?"

"How?"

"Don't run."

Clarence looked at me out of one eye and says: "Goodnight! If I didn't run he would pound the daylights out o' me."

"Oh, well, I said, "Clarence, you're a big baby—I guess I'll have to do this little thing for you."

"Thanks," he says; "maybe you'll see him tomorrow. If you do, just give him a good beating and tell him it's for me."

Clarence walked away, and I sat down to think. Here was the same old story—every time one of our fellows got his foot in trouble, I was picked to help him out. Here I had to lick a fellow who had never done anything to me. But shucks! I says to myself, Clarence can't fight, he is his mama's boy, he never had a chance to be a regular fellow, he wears Buster Brown collars and silk ties and everything like that. So I got up and took a walk around his house,to see if I could get a peek at the fellow who was running him. I met a boy standin' on the corner, cutting a stick of wood with a big pocket knife. I walked up to him slowly and said:

"Howdy."

"Howdy," he said.

"Are you a new fellow around here?" I asked.

"Yep! My name's Jack Howard What's you'n?"

"You ought to know me. I'm Seckatary Hawkins."

He shook his head. "Never heard o' you," he says, and then he keeps on cutting the stick with his knife. It kind o' made me sore.

"Listen," I says, "you're goin' to know me pretty well before long."

He looked up at me and smiled, and went back to cutting his stick, as though I wasn't even there.

"What you been doin' to Clarence Wilks?" I asked. He stopped cutting right away and walked right up to me.

"Who do you mean?" he asked in a rough voice. "That sissy kid?"

"Well, he might look like a sissy to you," I says, "but he belongs to our club—"

"Say, Seckatary Hawkins, if you bum around with sissies like that, I ain't got much use for you and your club. Get me?"

"Shut up!" I told him. "You can't talk about my friend like that—"

But just at that moment who should come around the corner but Clarence himself. Jack Howard saw him a second before I did, and he took out after Clarence like a hound after a rabbit. I never saw Clarence run so fast in my life. But he got away and ran into his house, yelling "Maw! Oh, Maw!" It made me a little disgusted. I turned around and went home.

* * *

The next day we boys all met in our big tent on the river bank. Jerry Moore got up and made a motion to take a new boy into the club. Our captain asked the new boy's name.

But Clarence Wilks jumped up and said: "You can't take that tough boy into this club—"

I saw there was going to be quite a long fuss, and as I didn't want to have anything to do with it one way or another, I slipped out and went down to the river. There stood Jack Howard, on the bank, as though waiting to be called into the tent to join the club.

"Hello, Hawkins," he says, "do you know where that sissy fellow is? I want to see him."

"Forget it," I says; "what's the use of starting trouble?"

"I just can't help it," says Jack Howard; "I can't stand that kid."

Jack Howard laughed. "What's he good for?" he asked.

That made me sore, so I walked right up and pointed my fist under his nose. "Look here," I said, "you're pretty flip, and I've got a good notion to give you a good lickin' for that sissy fellow, just because he can't do it himself."

Jack Howard looked hard at me for a minute, then he shook his head and said: "I hate to fight a fellow like you, Hawkins—you look like a good kid, but if you want a scrap, take off your hat and roll up your sleeves and pick out a wide open place, because you'll need all the room you can get."

"Don't you worry about me," I said, throwing off my cap and rolling up my sleeves; "I'll give you all you're lookin' for."

Just then I saw six boys coming around the bushes up the bank a piece. I thought they were Pelhams at first. But Jack yelled to them: "Hello, kids, come on down and see some fun."

"Whose gang is that?" I asked.

"That gang," says Jack, with a grin, "is my brothers."

I was so surprised I nearly fell over. I put my cap back on my head quick and rolled my sleeves back down.

"There's not goin' to be any fight," I said.

But I shook my head and walked up the bank and away from them. When I came back into the big tent, Clarence was alone, waiting for me.

"Did you lick that fellow for me?" he asked.

"NO!" I said, "and I'm never goin' to try it." Clarence was disappointed, but I told him the reason. "Listen, Clarence, if you want to fight Jack Howard, you've got to get six more, big husky fellows to help, because those brothers are goin' to stick together. How do you expect me to do it all by myself?"

Clarence sat thinking for a while Then he grinned and said: "We can fix something up on 'em. Suppose we get the Pelhams sore at 'em? They won't want to say around here long after the Pelham gang get through with 'em."

But I shook my head. "No," I says, "that isn't fair and square, and I'm not goin' to do a fine bunch of brothers like the Howard boys that way. I know I can't lick 'em, Clarence, but I sure do think a lot of seven brothers who stick together."

* *

The next day when we came down to our tent, we found the seven Howard brothers in it.

"Hello," Hawkins," says Jack,—"won't you come in?"

"Oh, I think so," I said, "since the tent belongs to us, anyway."

All the Howard brothers laughed. Jerry Moore made up with them right away. But when I saw Clarence Wilks coming down the river path, I made signs for him to go back, but he didn't seem to understand, and came busting right past me and went into the tent. He took one look at Jack Howard, and then turned and ran. Jack Howard started after him, but I grabbed his arm. "Let that boy alone!" I said. And then, believe me, I'm never goin' to forget that punch in the eye he gave me. But Jerry Moore saw him hit me, and Jerry jumped on him. First thing we knew there was the finest kind of a fight going on—the Howard brothers came out of the tent like wild cats, and we boys got the worst drubbing we had in many days. We heard some shouting down by the river, and out of the corner of my eye I could see it was Briggen and his Pelham gang. They stood around and watched the fight. The biggest of the brothers was sitting on me. I says: "Let me up, I give in." But Briggen shouted: "Don't you do it, stranger. Give him a good punch for me." But somehow the Howard boys didn't like the way the Pelham boys were talking, and they jumped off us and started for the Pelhams. Briggen saw them coming, and he yelled for his gang to follow him and he took out for the river where their flatboats lay. The Howards chased them, but they were just too late—the Pelhams were in their boats and pulling away from the bank.

Jack Howard led his brothers back up the bank. "Hawkins," he says, "we boys aren't lookin' for trouble—we see you don't want us around your tent—so we are goin' to let you alone. We are sorry if we hurt you."

Then he turned and walked away, and his brothers followed him without a word. When they were gone, Clarence came sneaking back. I didn't care to talk to a coward like him—none of us knew just what to say to Clarence, so we kept still. It wasn't any fun sitting there, so I went home and sneaked a bucket out of the kitchen and went to get some blackberries.

* * *

All the next day we saw the Pelham boys in their boats going up and down the river, but the Howard brothers had a quiet little camp of their own in a bunch of bushes near the lower bend of the river. We could see the smoke of their campfire from our tent. But we didn't go near them, and they didn't bother us. Somehow or other, I felt that I liked Jack Howard and his brothers very much. I was only sorry that Jack had such a dislike for one of our boys.

On Saturday morning I met Jack on my way down to the tent.

"Have you seen my brothers?" he asked, quietly.

"No," I said; "they're not lost, are they?"

"Well," he says, "we came down here about five-thirty this morning, and I took a rifle and went after a squirrel—I was gone about an hour, I guess. When I came back, the boys were gone. I've hunted high and low—"

"Gee!" I said, of a sudden. "Jack, you remember when you ran the Pelhams the other day? Well, I'll bet they have been up to some tricks on you."

"You don't mean they have taken my brothers?"

"I don't want to say so," I told him, but I wouldn't be surprised." Just then Clarence Wilks came around the bushes on the river path. When he saw Jack, he was going to run, but I said: Come here!" I said it like I meant it, and Clarence thought he would be safe with me around, so he came over to where we stood. I told him Jack's brothers were gone. Clarence got excited at once. I saw 'em!" he says. They were in Pelham boats, tied hand and feet—they couldn't move."

That's enough," I said, come on, follow me." We called the rest of our boys together. Our captain gave orders for each boy to take a different direction and to scout around and see where the Pelham boys were. Off we scouted. Jack Howard came along with me. Clarence ducked off by himself, glad to get away from Jack. We went over to the Pelham side, but the Pelham shacks were empty and all the boats gone. We struck off down the river, but never found a trail. It was pretty hot, and we were tired.

No use, Jack," I said; we've picked a bum track to follow." Jack looked worried.

What will the Pelhams do with my brothers?" he asked.

I don't know," I said, but they might keep 'em prisoner somewhere—"

Will they let them go at night time, Hawkins?"

I'm not sure, Jack; sometimes they 'em up in—"

All of a sudden I jumped up. "I bet I know!" I exclaimed. "We've been fools for not thinking of it before —the old cave in the cliffs—come on, Jack, follow me."

* * *

Down the river bank I scrambled and Jack came after me. We ran as fast as we could. Half way down we met the Pelhams in their flatboats coming back up the river. They laughed loudly at us, but we didn't stop. I led the way till we came to the rocky sides of the cliffs. All of a sudden a big rock came tumbling and bouncing down the cliff side—we saw a bunch of our boys standing below, and they all jumped out of the way. We ran up to them. "Look out, everybody!" shouted our captain. We all shaded our eyes with our hands and looked up to see where the rock came from. We saw a fellow crawling around the edge of the cliff. He moved over to where a lot of big rocks were piled. We saw him pull another one away, and down it came, tumbling and bouncing like the first, splashing at last into the river. Up again we looked, and the fellow was pulling another big rock aside—and there at last he had an opening in the cliff side. We jumped out of the way of the third rock, and when we looked up again, we saw some fellows come crawling out of the hole in the cliffside.

"My brothers!" yelled Jack Howard. "Hooray! There they are, Hawkins!"

But none of us had time to cheer just then, we were looking at the fellow who had pulled the stones away—he slipped—he tried to get on his feet, but when he let go his hand—oh, boy! I thought he would come tumbling down like one of those big rocks—he only bounced down about four steps, and there he hung, like a bag of sand on the edge of the big rock.

"Golly! How will he get down from there?" yelled our captain.

"Wait!" cried Jack Howard. He pulled a tube from his pocket—it wa a folding telescope, and he opened i up and peeped through it. "Yep!" h cried, "they're my brothers, all right.'

"Who's that guy hanging on the rock' asked our captain, excitedly. He watched Jack's telescope move toward the point where the boy hung. Then he gave a low whistle.

"Great Christopher!" he exclaimed. "It's that sissy guy!"

I grabbed the spyglass and looked through it. Sure enough! It was Clarence! But the next thing that happened surprised every one of us—except Jack, maybe. The six brothers away up there on the cliff scrambled down to the second ledge under the rock that held poor old Clarence. Only a moment they stood, then they jumped up, one upon another's shoulders like acrobats, and the fifth one was high enough to reach Clarence, so the sixth one just stood below with the first and held him steady. The top fellow lifted Clarence off the rock, and for a moment I thought the whole bunch would come tumbling down, but oh, boy! it was the biggest Howard brother, Lafe, who stood below and held 'em all up, and he was strong enough. They moved slowly while they passed Clarence down, and when he reached the sixth brother, who stood below ready to catch him, they all leaped down, and we boys went up to meet them. The funny part of it was that when we did meet them, nobody said a word. Not a word was said on our way down. We just helped to carry poor old Clarence—he was unconscious, and we walked slowly to the Howard boys' campfire where we laid him down. We got some water from the river and dashed it in his face. He opened his eyes and said: "Where am I?"

Jack Howard was the first one over to talk to him.

"Say, kid," he says, "I'm sorry I ever called you a sissy—I didn't think you had so much spunk in you. I wonder if you will forget the way I treated you?"

Clarence sat up and smiled. "I found your brothers, all right, didn't I?" The Howard Boys came crowding around him to shake his hand. "You're a brick!" says the biggest one, and he patted him on the shoulder.

* * *

When the excitement was over, we boys started to tell the Howards what fine athletes they were.

"Forget it," says Lafe, the biggest brother; "just show us where those Pelham fellows hang out. We want to get even with them. They caught us sleeping and tied us up—dad-burn-'em!"

But Jack Howard stepped up and said: "Lafe, don't worry about those Pelhams—Hawkins and his pals will take care o'them, won't you, Seckatary?"

"You bet we will!" I told him. "We'll pay 'em back for it, some way, some how, sometime. But why can't you fellows oin our club and help us do it?"

Jack Howard looked at me and smiled.

"Hawkins," he says, "I'm sorry if we fooled you, but we are not going to live in this town, our daddy makes us act in a circus—we are acrobats. you see—and we only got a week's vacation and are staying at our Uncle Ed's up there on the same street with Clarence. We've got to go back to the circus tonight—it plays in Watertown, Monday."

We boys felt pretty bad about losing these fine fellows just when we were getting to know them and like them. But Jack Howard said:

"Oh, cheer up! We might come back here on another xacation, and we won't forget you boys, either. But our vacation is up today, and I still have one dollar and ten cents to spend, so let's all go up to the drugstore and get a soda water before we part."

Which we did.

Dear Club Members:

What do you all do on a rainy day? Now, don't all jump up and say, "Raise an umbrella." Of course, if you go out, you do; but most boys and girls don't go out on a rainy day, and there are a lot of entertaining things to do indoors. Some of us who spend the summer in tents don't like rainy days much; and if it storms and rains and the wind blows your tent down on top of your head—oh, boy!

Well, the subject of your contest letter or story or drawing for this week must be "A RAINY DAY." When you write and ask me to give you suggestions on what to write about, I sometimes think that the titles themselves are the best suggestions. For instance, in this case now, people often speak of a "rainy day" as a possible time in the future when we may need the pennies and nickels that we save on days when everything runs smoothly. "Save for a rainy day" is what the wise man will tell you. And thrift is a wonderful thing, too—something that every boy and girl in our club should strive for.

Now, just think up something of your own to write about—I am sure "A Rainy Day" will be a good title for all of you, and don't get discouraged if you have tried before and failed to win a prize. Buckle down to the job and see it through. You are bound to get somewhere if you keep going. The main idea is to keep going. So, try and try again.

Our Weekly Meeting.

We will open our weekly meeting by announcing the winner of last week's contest—the one in which you were to write a story or letter on "Fair and Square," the Club motto. The prize goes to Lowery McQuade, Omemee.

week and enjoy it immensely. Your motto "Fair and Square" is a very appropriate one.

I hope some other members of your Club will write to me as I am fond of reading and answering letters.

Yours, fair and square,

Dorothy E. Disney (12 yrs.)

228 Rubidge St.,

Peterborough.

It's too bad Dick Carveth missed our radio meeting, but perhaps he will try again. It is certainly nice of him to send the card to little Ed. Taylor. Here is Dick's nice letter:

Dear Seck:

I received your letter the other day and was glad to hear from you. You will find enclosed my card and a 2 cent stamp. I sent a card to Ed. Taylor as you said.

Well, I missed our radio meeting because I tuned in and got WSAL on the wrong night. I like your stories.

Yours fair and square,

Dick Carveth.

* * *

And here's a letter from a little girl who promises to try getting some new members. Good luck, Gwenyth—and I'll be looking for that story of yours. Why not write one about "A Rainy Day," and enter the competition?

Dear Seck:

I have decided to join the Club. By the looks of some of the letters it must be a very wonderful club. I am very anxious to get your picture, so I am going to try and get a new member. I love writing letters. I am going to try and compose a story. I am ten years old. I have black curly hair and blue eyes. I have a musical talent. I have been taking piano lessons for four years. Well I hear you groaning so I will close.

Yours, fair and square,

Gwenyth Boorman.

We are very glad to have Beryl Stenson with us, aren't we?

Dear Seck:

I would like very much to join the Seckatary Hawkins Club.

I am eleven years of age, and live on a farm.

Yours truly,

Beryl Stenson.

WINS A PRIZE

Here is last week's prize-winning letter:

Dear Seck:

This is my first time to write to your page. I suppose you are busy working, i.e., answering letters.

Here is my story—

"John Shows He is Fair and Square."

John is a little boy. One day he was walking along a street. He picked up a little stone. It was a diamond.

He took it to the police station where a man came and identified it.

He gave John $15. John gave him $5, and the police station $5. Thus John showed he was "Fair and Square."

Yours fair and square,

Lowery McQuade.

Box 53, Omemee, Ont.

* * *

And now once more we adjourn this meeting until a week hence, when we will gather again around this page and hear from other members. Get busy at once and start your letter, or story, or poem, or drawing on "A RAINY DAY." The books I give as prizes are well worth winning.

I'll be tickled to death to have a letter from every member this week—so please—

Yours fair and square,

"CORRIES"

If you wish to receive letters or post cards from other members of the club, write me a letter saying so and I will print your request.

The rules are: Every corrie must answer all letters or cards and every corrie must show his mother or father every letter or card he sends or receives.

I have been a member of your club now for some time, and I am going to try my luck at writing to see if I can get a book. My sister, who also is a member and I and mother, too, never miss a meeting over the radio, and we all enjoy them ever so much. Mother said no one ever had a club like yours when she was a little girl and told them such wonderful stories, and one can get so many nice friends through the "corrie" list.

My sister and I have added two of your interesting books to our library. Mine is the Chinese Coin, and sister's is the Yellow Y.

I will not take any more of your time, so will close, trusting to hear my letter over the radio next meeting, I remain, fair and square,

ROBERT S. MUGAVIN,

3890 Isabella Ave., Cincinnati, O.

For those who are just joining this Peterborough branch I may say that a "corrie" is a correspondent. The only rule about being a "corrie" is that you must show every letter you write and every one you receive, to your mother or father.

Let's give the glad hand to Bob Arnold, who lives in Milwaukee, and tell him that we hope he got the dog for his birthday, although we are a bit late in saying it. Here's his letter:

Dear Seck:

I am a member of the club already, and have a badge. I like your mottor "Fair and Square," and I am living up to it, too. I am proud to wear the badge.

I passed to the fifth grade. My birthday was July 5th, and I might get a dog, and if I do I am going to name him "Indian," the same as you named your dog. I want to be the same as you are and do the same as you do.

BOB ARNOLD, 10,

1129 Eleventh St., Milwaukee, Wis.

And look who's here—Virginia Ellis, our little poet from Kenton, Ohio—and she writes her letter in verse, too. How many others in our club can match this letter?

Dear Seck:

I've tried for prizes again and again,
But I've always failed so flat.
But I always shall try again and again,
So I'll be bound to win at that.
Your stories about the Spider Boy
Have always interested me.
Your stories then, your stories now
Are spreading o'er land and sea.
Over land and sea they all know "Seck"
And the stories of along the river.
Are enough to make any one shiver.
Stories of spooks and ghosts and giants

They remind me of the "K.G.S."
That's the school where I used my motto.
Did it do me some good? Yes,
It brought me right to the head of my class,
I tied with a girl who was fair
We divided the honors the whole year through
Because both were fair and square.

VIRGINIA ELLIS, 12,
62 N. Cherry St., Kenton, O.

Now, aren't those nice letters? And can't you write one just as nice? Send it in this week and have it printed.

The meeting will now be adjourned, and next week when we have lots more members we will gather around this page again. You will notice the nice things these boys and girls write about the books I give as prizes. Why don't you try to get one?

I want just lots of new members this week, and I want them all to get new members so I can send my picture.

Bye till next week.

Yours fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

WE GET THIS PASSWORD ON A RAINY DAY

Last week's password was "Comrades True." It was so easy, because the title of our contest was "Playmates," and it naturally suggested itself.

This week we have a password that fits in with the subject of our contest.

SHERUNSTHEWORD

Two words are hidden in these jumbled letters, and if you take paper and pencil and rearrange the letters until you have them all in their right place, you will have something that comes on a rainy day. Try it. It's easy. (Yes, it is.)

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE RATIONALIZE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Anyone can think up good reasons for doing what he really wants to do.

You know you cannot afford that new car at this time but if you want it badly you think up all sorts of reasons why you must have it right away. For example such perfectly convincing arguments that you need it in your business, that it will be an investment in creating greater prestige among the people who count, etc. We do the same for a new expensive dress or a vacation trip or anything else.

No doubt many a criminal justifies his act beforehand. If it is murder he is contemplating he might justify the act on the grounds that he is doing the world a favor by putting such a scoundrel out of the way.

Thinking up reasons for doing what you really want to do is sometimes called rationalizing or rationalization.

We rationalize or justify an act or the motive for the act. Frequently it is a means of easing conscience, and also of preparing arguments for others who might question us about it or whom we imagine might question us. We rationalize to convince the inner self that we are right when all the while we know we are wrong.

The reason we do what we do is primarily because we want to do those things but we often want things that are not good for us or for our reputation or for our conscience: hence the tendency to rationalize. Rationalization means covering up the true motive, dressing up the ugly wish with a nice looking suit so that it looks good.

Many of our motives are decidedly against the dictates of conscience and the social taboos. We dare not allow those things to appear in our lives in their true light. We would suffer loss of pride and self respect if we did. We rationalize as a means of avoiding criticism both from within and from without.

ST. VITUS' DANCE.

A Trouble That Usually Attacks Young Children.

St. Vitus dance is the name generally given to a disease described by medical men as chorea. This trouble usually attacks young children, though older people may be afflicted with it. The most common symptoms are a twitching of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses the twitching takes the form of spasms, in which the jerking motion may be confined to the face although the limbs may be affected. Frequently the patient is unable to hold anything in the hands or walk steadily. In severe cases the speech is often affected. The disease is due to debility of the nerves and relief comes through an enriched blood supply. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been most successful in reaching this trouble through their specific action on the blood, which it enriches and purifies. The following instance proves the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in this trouble. Mrs. Thomas Bowen, Bath, Ont., says:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been in use in my family for years and always with good results. I believe they save the life of my only son. At ten years of age he grew very nervous and the trouble developed into St. Vitus dance. His legs and arms would jerk and twitch, then his speech was affected, and his condition was pitiable. Just then there came to me a little book telling of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to give them to him. By the time two boxes were used there was an improvement in his condition and by the time six boxes more were taken all traces of the trouble had disappeared, and he was well and strong. I have also given the pills to my growing girls, and I know of no better strengthening medicine. I may add that the same applies to grown-ups as well."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHAPTER XLIV
FAILURE

Jennifer and May Innes bought the teashop—at least Jennifer bought it, and it cost her a good deal more than three hundred pounds.

The woman who sold it to her was neither so old nor so philanthropic as May Innes had suggested, and she transacted all her business through a very shrewd lawyer of Hebrew extraction, who piled up a bill of costs, and persuaded Jennifer that for the sake of success it was necessary to take over so many "extras" that by the time they were installed in the "ducky little underground place," Jennifer's balance at the bank was negligible.

Then began what Jennifer afterwards realized was the most horrible month of her life.

The business, of course, was a dead concern, relying on the price of cups of coffee and ham sandwiches with which to pay its high rent and show a profit. Jennifer saw before the end of the first week that she had made a bad bargain.

She also saw that for all her cheeriness and bon camaraderie, May Innes was an impossible person to live with.

She was common and too familiar with the few customers who found their way to the little cafe, with its stuffy atmosphere and faded upholstery.

When, at last, Jennifer ventured to remonstrate with her she only laughed.

"If you want to make money, you've got to be bright," she insisted. "Men like girls who are bright, and don't you make any mistake."

Jennifer had moved from the Bloomsbury Hotel then, and she and May had taken rooms together in a part of Fulham which insisted upon calling itself Kensington.

Jennifer loathed it

She loathed the stuffy life in the underground cafe. She loathed the type of men who visited it, and she loathed the bus ride back to noisy crowded Fulham. After a while she began to loathe May Innes also. May started painting her face and reddening her lips. It was all part of her doctrine of being "bright," and although there was no real harm in her, she got on Jennifer's nerves to such an extent that the end finally came in a violent quarrel, and the discovery that a week's work had resulted in a heavy loss.

"If you weren't so starchy we could have made a do of it all right," May retorted. "Lord, why need you be so stand-offish? That Mr. Lewis who comes in every morning is quite sweet on you. He told me so. If only you'd be a little bright and friendly, he'd give you no end of a good time."

"He's a married man," Jennifer gasped.

"Married! Of course he's married," May said impatiently. "You don't think a man's going to live forty years without getting married, do you? Besides, it's only the men of his age who've got any money nowadays."

Jennifer shuddered

"He wouldn't interest me if he had a million a minute," she said quietly. "He's coarse and middle-aged——"

"Well, you're not such a chicken yourself," May retorted.

"You're very impertinent," Jennifer said.

Whereupon May lost her temper badly and spoke as she must once upon a time have been taught to speak in her native setting, which was a slum behind the Mile End Road.

Jennifer listened quietly at first. The quarrel took place in their third-rate little sitting-room over Saturday's late lunch, for the cafe always closed at half-past two on Saturday, and May's temper rose, and with it her eloquence increased till Jennifer could stand no more.

"Will you go, or shall I?" she asked at last, quietly.

May laughed hysterically.

"I'm going. Don't you worry! and I'd like my wages too, before I go, and don't you say you haven't got them. It's my belief you've got plenty of money. It's my belief you're a bag of mystery, just playing at this game for some purpose of your own——"

Jennifer walked out of the room and out of the house. She had reached the end of her endurance. Afterwards she could not remember how she spent the afternoon, but late in the evening she found herself back at the wretched rooms feeling utterly worn out and ill.

May had gone. Her room was dismantled of its cheap finery and odds and ends, and a note was pinned to the cotton counterpane.

"I'm not coming back. I don't wish you any harm, but I can't live with you. I've taken six pounds from your drawer—I suppose it's stealing, but I guess I want it more than you do. By-bye—May."

Jennifer sat down on the bed and his her face in her hands. It did not seem to matter very much, nothing seemed to matter. She did not even mind about the six pounds. What was money when one had lost everything else?

She felt utterly beaten, but with the desperate feeling that she would suffocate or go mad if she stayed in Fulham, she packed up and returned to the Bloomsbury Hotel.

At least it was clean and comfortable, and it seemed to give her back something of her lost self-respect.

She closed the tea-shop, and put it in the hands of an agent, then with part of the small sum still left to her she paid her liabilities and started once more on the dreary hunt for work. Living carefully, she found she had enough money to keep her for a month. "I shal have found work before then, of course, she told herself and struggled hard to believe it.

It was September—a singularly hot and airless September and London seemed empty and depressing. Day after day Jennifer was turned away from agencies and advertisers.

"But I'm willing to do anything—anything?" she protested. But apparently there was no work of any kind to be done, or else nobody believed her to be capable of executing it.

Lying awake at night, the thought of the future tormented her. More than once the idea of appealing to Chesney came to her overwrought brain, but in the morning she was ashamed of her own weakness and lack of pride. One night she started up from fitful sleep to find herself saying aloud, "Well, there's always the river for unwanted people." That frightened her and made her fancy that her nerve was giving way. Such thoughts were horribly cowardly. She told herself that this was only another bad patch in her life and would pass.

One day, scanning a page of newspaper advertisements she saw the announcement of a forthcoming concert at which Dolores was to appear. It seemed so long ago since she and Dolores had been friends, so long ago that Dolores had been foolish enough to envy her. There was no need for envy any longer. The last eighteen months of her life seemed to have been cut clean away from under her feet, leaving her isolated and afraid.

Even Nicholas who had pretended to love her so faithfully had apparently made no effort to find her. Dolores had been right when she said that no man was worth breaking one's heart about.

She thought suddenly of Dolores' necklace.

It was hidden at the bottom of her large trunk, and she had never looked at it since the day she left Baker Street. She could sell it if the worst came to the worst, but for the fact that she had promised to let Dolores know first if ever she wished to part with it.

Poor Dolores! with her queer hair and her kindly heart.

Jennifer dreamed of her that night, and in the morning when she was waiting in Oxford Street for an omnibus to take her Citywards, in a forlorn hope of obtaining an advertised secretarial job, she came face to face with her.

And Dolores said bluntly: "I'm not a bit surprised. I dreamed about you last night, and I believe in dreams. Mine so often come true!"

"I dreamed about you, too," Jennifer answered.

There were spots of bright color in her pale cheeks and Dolores said blankly: "My lord, don't you look ill! What in the wide world has happened to you? Here, for God's sake don't cry in the middle of Oxford Street——" for the weak tears had risen to Jennifer's eyes. Dolores clutched her arm. "Come and have a coffee, and we can talk. It's months since I saw you." They chose a quiet corner in a teashop and Jennifer wiped her eyes with a trembling hand.

"I'm sorry to be such a fool," she said brokenly. "But I've had rather a bad time."

Dolores was watching her sympathetically.

"Been ill?" she asked.

Jennifer shook her head.

"No, only worried." She tried to smile. "It was worry that killed the cat, you know," she added whimsically.

She pulled herself together with an effort.

"Tell me about yourself. I saw your concert advertised."

"Never mind that. I want to hear about you. What made you run away?"

"What else could I do?"

Dolores shrugged her shoulders.

"If you'd stayed another five minutes everything would have been all right. Chesney was trying to smash your door down half an hour after you left. If only you'd waited, Jennifer, you'd have had him eating out of your hand."

Jennifer shuddered.

"I've done with that part of my life. I never want to go back to it." She hesitated then asked with flushing cheeks: "And—Buddy? How is Buddy?"

Dolores winced as if she had been hurt, but the next moment she was laughing.

"Oh, Buddy and I have quarrelled. No, you needn't blame yourself, it would have happened anyway. I told her she'd behaved like a cad over you, and she boxed my ears——" Dolores flushed scarlet up to the rims of her darkened eyes. "That's the modern girl! It finished me anyway. She's gone on the stage now—front row of the chorus. Some dirty little foreign producer got hold of her, and plummed her up with a lot of lies. Said she was a born actress, danced like Pavlowa, and so forth——"

"Oh, Dolores, I'm so sorry."

"No need to be, my dear. I've come to the conclusion that we must all work out our own destinies. I tried to help Buddy, and I made a mess of it. It's up to her now. I wasn't so philosophical at first I admit. I cried and made a fool of myself. I even went so far as to beg Chesney to try and get her back for me."

"He wouldn't?"

"No, he said quite frankly that as far as he was concerned she could go to the devil. I don't blame him; you see he lost you through Buddy."

"Where is he now?"

"I heard he'd gone abroad, but I don't know. I also heard that he and Gaunt came to blows about you, but don't know if that's true either."

Jennifer had gone very white, and there was a pathetic question in her eyes which Dolores answered by a shake of the head.

"I can't tell you anything about Gaunt. Never see him. He came to my flat once, after you went away, and bullied me. He seemed to think I knew where you'd gone. He was sure you were abroad. I see Edith sometimes, but she never mentions him. One hears all sorts of rumors of course. That friend of Edith's—Joey, does she call herself?—says that Edith's breaking her heart because Gaunt will have nothing to do with her. Joey hates Gaunt. Says she'd have divorced him like a shot if he'd been her husband."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 19, 1928

Unfavorable aspects appear to be strong today, according to astrology. It is a day in which to go to church and thus avoid any unpleasant incident.

There is a rule promising to persons who follow conservative lines of thinking. They may have pleasant experiences in the course of the day. Their counsel may be sought by the world.

Workers should benefit from conferences or meetings today.

The clergy may be inclined to be controversial and tenacious of old doctrines while this configuration prevails. They should cultivate charity.

Under this direction of the stars it is necessary to exercise policy and to refrain from criticism.

Neptune is in a place supposed to encourage intrigue and deceit and for this reason the mind should be kept steadfast where principles of any sort are involved.

While this rule of the planets continues many vagaries of the mind may be apparent for suggestibility to destructive thoughts is likely to be increased.

This is a day read as unpropitious for meeting persons of sex, for it may be difficult to make a good impression and deceit may be more prevalent than under other planetary governments.

Letter writing may be most satisfactory today and all who are inclined to express sentiment should exercise reserve, for love missives may be dangerous.

Universities and all seats of learning continue under the best possible rule of the stars. Professors and teachers will benefit in the next few months.

Canada and the western states probably will enjoy great business activity in the autumn and winter.

Preparation should be made for autumn storms which may do much damage, especially to summer hotels and cottages.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have small vexations in the coming year, but they will prosper. These Leo people are especially well fitted for leaders in public affairs.

Children born on this day probably will rise rapidly in life, for they will have many helpful friends. They are subject to a sign that is believed to insure prosperity while it encourages the greatest independence.

MONDAY, AUGUST 20, 1928

Benefic aspects rule today, according to astrology, which reads in the horoscope many happy promises for dwellers on the Earth.

Under this sway promoters and all who push big enterprises in business should benefit greatly.

The planetary government is most fortunate for candidates of every sort, for it encourages confidences and stimulates enthusiasm.

While women should refrain from any important projects today the configuration indicates benefits through men in their families.

As the day progresses the mind is likely to gain in wise foresights and to inspire action that is wise.

Shoppers will make better bargains in the afternoon, but they should not be afraid to spend money under this direction of the stars.

The evening is favorable to women and their ambitions. It is also a lucky time for entertaining men, especially those who are suitors.

Weddings today have the augury of happiness, for there will be no deceit or selfishness, if the planetary influences are followed.

ROUND WORM HARMS HOGS

IMPAIRS HEALTH

To treat parasites successfully some knowledge of the habits and life cycle of these pests is necessary. It is not the intention here to deal with all the parasites which may be found in pigs, nor is it the intention to treat of the life history in a scientific manner The life history of two of the most common internal parasites found in swine in Eastern Canada will be given so that the reasons for the treatment advised may be better understood and enable the stockman to apply that treatment in an intelligent manner.

Round Worm.

This is probably the most common parasite of swine. A count made at packing plants this spring of certain loads from Eastern Ontario showed that about 60 per cent. of hog intestines contained one or more mature round worms. In one intestine there were thirty-two worms. This seems to indicate that the infestation from this particular parasite is widespread. It should be remembered that when pigs have reached the size and weight desired by the market that they probably have not been re-infested for some time, and that the presence of a few worms at that time must not be taken as the count of the total number of worms which have been in the animal's body.

The round worm is similar in appearance to the earth worm; anywhere from six to fourteen inches in length, cylindrical yellowish brown in color, pointed at both ends and rather stiff bodied. A badly infested sow may distribute as many as five million worm eggs a day. Is it any wonder then that 60 per cent. of the hogs killed at our packing plants are infested?

The eggs hatch out in the soil or in the dirt found in and around a large number of the pig-pens in Eastern Ontario as soon as the proper combination of temperature and moisture takes place. After a few days in this environment the eggs are in an infestive stage and can grow to maturity if they gain access to a suitable host, in this case the young pig at the sucking age. It may be taken in from feed, from grass or simply from the dust and dirt which the young pig, with its usual curiosity, is continually turning over and investigating. The larvae of the round worm bores through the intestine, finds its way to the blood stream, and finally reaches the lung. It stays in the lung six or seven days, during which time it is feeding on the lung tissue and generally making a nuisance of itself to the young pig. Finally it releases its hold on the lung, migrates into the throat where it is either coughed out, often on the feed, or is swallowed back into the intestine. Once returned to the intestine it continues its growth until maturity, or in other words its egg-laying stage.

Its growth has been made at the expense of the small animal. The injury to the lungs is permanent, the presence of the worm in the intestine means that its growth has robbed the animal of food, and that the efficiency of the animal has been impaired by the toxins given off by the parasite.

Lung Worm.

Another common parasite of the pig is the lung worm whose life history is similar in many respects to that of the round worm, with this exception, that it does not leave the lung once it has reached that organ, but goes through its different stages and lays its eggs in that place. The lung worm is from one to two inches long, thread-like and white. It should be remembered that the tissue destroyed in the lung never comes back to its normal function and that the lung is a vital organ, playing a very important part in the growth of the animal.

The outstanding things to be remembered about these pests are: That mature worms of all kinds lay tremendous numbers of eggs; that these eggs are scattered all over the pen or yard in which the hogs are kept; that the young larvae after hatching develop a protective covering which enables them to live for long period (one year, if not more) under adverse conditions. New born pigs have very little resistance to parasites, and once the parasites have gained access to the body and destroyed the lung the damage cannot be repaired.

The ability of worms to lay eggs would be admirable if found in a hen, but in a parasite it makes serious inroads on the profits of the stockman.

Plan to attend the demonstration at Scott's Corners, Friday, August 31, at 1 p.m. For further particulars apply to J. B. Nelson, agricultural representative, Peterborough.

EXPLOSION WRECKS CAMPBELL'S AUTO

Famous Racing Driver Has Narrow Escape From Death To-day.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Captain Malcolm Campbell, famous British racing driver, had a narrow escape from death to-day when his Bugatti car burst into flames on the second lap of the international tourist trophy automobile race. Captain Campbell succeeded in jumping from the car, which was fired by the explosion of the petrol tank.

Air Raid "Destruction" Puzzles Londoners "Magnificent, but is it War?" Skeptics Ask

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The spectacular sham battle between hundreds of bombers and fast pursuit planes attacking and defending London came to a close last night after four nights of combat leaving the public here puzzled. Everybody agrees it was magnificent, but more and more skeptics are asking "Was it war"

To-day the Liberal Daily News will demand that the Air Ministry inform the public what justification there is for the sweeping statements in a section of the press that large sections of the city have been "practically wiped out" and normal life capital "paralyzed."

Not all that has been learned in the practice of the regular air force and reserve pilots will be divulged for a considerable time, and much never will be. The manoeuvres, however, apparently have proven that no matter how efficient Great Britain's defending force may be, it cannot stop every bomber which a determined Continental enemy might send over the capital. Some assailants are bound to leak through and do some or considerable damage.

It is agreed that the Air Ministry was destroyed twice. The Duke of York's headquarters at Chelsea likewise were destroyed. Winston Churchill's country home in the pretty village of Westerham was laid flat by one bomb theoretically released by a joking pilot.

But it has been a strange "war" with London brilliantly lighted throughout the maneuvers, making the capital's every landmark easy to find whereas, in the World War, it is recalled, German raiders seeking the capital frequently got lost miles from the darkened target.

There is a justifiable suspicion that propaganda has tinged the maneuvers almost from the start. There is a tradition in the Royal Air Force of shunning publicity. Normally army pilots, who start a long leap for India or elsewhere, avoid giving the public knowledge of the efforts. In the four days of the "war," however, reporters and cameramen were welcome guests aboard Royal Air Force planes.

But just as the sensation of watching the great squadrons of fighters careening through the sky has dulled in four evenings, so Londoners last night were no longer getting kinks in their necks watching the show, and so, also, doubts have begun to creep in.

RANGERS ENJOY FINE EXCURSION

but for the young men unhampered by family ties it meant time to go in swimming and soon the end of the dock was decorated with a great many male bathing beauties who let their taste for color run riot in selecting bathing garb. On the lawn to the left of the dock and on the deck of the boat, parties were soon formed for the more serious business of eating. In most cases two or more parties combined, and the sandwiches and cakes out of someone else's basket seemed to taste best.

An accident occurred just after dinner. The little son of Sgt. Summers attempted to pet a dog which was roaming about the grounds and was bitten on chin and hand. A doctor from the United States who was nearby dressed the wounds and when the return trip was started, the little lad was feeling much better.

Baseball and strolls occupied the time until two o'clock, when a program of races was run off under the management of Captain Nicholls, with Major Park acting as starter and Lieut. Peryer as clerk of the course, while others present took turns in assisting.

The races and winners were as follows:

Boys, 5 to 10.—Albert Porter; K. Hopcroft.

Girls, 5 to 10.—M. Mycroft; Ruth Irwin.

Young Men's Race.—Seabrook.

Ladies' Race—Gladys Peryer; Marjorie Bogue.

Girls 5 and under.—Ruth Gaskell; Ruby Summers.

Boys 15 and under.—D. Weir; F. Millard.

Blindfold Race.—Mrs. Brown and G. Abraham; V. Peryer and Guppy.

Men's Potato Race.—H. Hodgson; J. French.

Married Men's Race.—E. Abraham.

Relay Race.—A Company.

Rolling Race—T. Cole.

Balloon Race.—Mrs. Chambers.

A couple of spills added to the thrills of the spectators. C.Q.M.S. and Mrs. Chate, the only man and wife to enter the three-legged race (most of the men chose other men's wives as partners) fell half way down the course and could not get up until the handkerchiefs which bound them had been removed. In the blindfold race, in which each man was blindfolded and led by a lady, one runner refused to obey the guiding hand and plunged into the crowd, running into a little girl.

On the way back the prizes were presented by Mrs. Hall, with Captain Nicholls doing the announcing. Supper soon followed, and then the return voyage was spent in much the same way as the downward trip, with music, dancing, conversation, and frequent visits to the booth. The distribution of the few packages of popcorn which remained when the street railway wharf was reached was a red letter event among the little ones, and proved the closing event of a pleasant trip from which all returned tired but happy.

It is only the great-hearted who can be true friends.—Kingsley.

AIRSHIP BUILT AT AKRON

Here is the Blimp "lighter-than-air" ship "Puritan," something new in the non-rigid type of aircraft. The ship is only 128 feet long and has a height of 37 feet. The capacity is 86,000 cubic feet of helium gas. The "Puritan" is of similar design to the Blimps used by the British during the war and was made by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. It averages 55 miles per hour. The new babyairship, just completed at Akron, Ohio, is a successor to the "Pilgrim," famed as the world's smallest successful dirigible. Helium is a remarkable gas which is not only itself non-inflammable, but which actually extinguishes fire. The use of helium has greatly added to the safety of airship travel by practically eliminating the fire hazard.

Mock Pate de Foie Gras

Cook a calf's liver (20 ounces), until very tender; grind in a meat cutter. Moisten with 3 tablespoons melted butter. Work into a paste with the following seasonings: ¼ teaspoon black or white pepper; few grains cayenne; ½ teaspoon ground nutmeg; 1½ teaspoons Keen's Mustard; ¾ teaspoon salt; 3 tablespoons water in which a minced onion has been boiled; ¼ cup liquor from boiling calf's liver. Pack in buttered jars; cover with melted butter. For use as sandwich filling or on crackers.

Write for FREE recipe book on pickles, salads, salad dressing, sandwich fillings, etc.

For Appetising Sandwiches!

Add a little Keen's Mustard to sandwich fillings if you want to bring out their real flavour. Fillings made from cold meat, minced meat, fish, egg or salad taste infinitely better with a dash of this wonderful, tangy condiment.

Campbellford Middle School Pupils Make Good Showing This Year.

SAME STAFF RETAINED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 18. — This year the results of the departmental examinations in the Middle School have reached a new high mark in so far as the local High School is concerned. Ninety-two percent of the students who wrote the examinations were successful in passing. Of these, sixty-four percent. passed with honours and many of these got first class standing.

From the earliest days, this school has been noted for the success of its pupils at the departmental examinations, and it has a long and honorable career. It has always stood for thoroughness in high school training in all the various lines that go to make up what is known as secondary education. Nor does the school cater to town pupils only. There are a number of pupils from distances enrolled in the various grades and adaresses in Keene, Birsdalls, Lakefield, Marmora and other towns are to be found on the students' directory. This year's success includes these pupils as well as the local students, and puts the school among the first in the province.

The building and grounds constitute one of the show places of Campbellford and form one of the most modern institutions in the province of Ontario. It is situated in the north-east section of the town and the grounds comprise practically all of the triangular block bounded by Ranney, Booth and Margaret streets. On the front and back campus, there is ample room for all sorts of outdoor sports and the grounds are equipped for soft ball, tennis and such. A quarter mile race track is to be constructed in the near future.

The building itself is a two storey structure of brick and marble with wide corridors and ample windows for a maximum amount of sunlight. For dull days and evening functions, a scientific electric lighting system is used. The buildings is steam heated and a fan ventilation system changes the air in each class room nine times every hour. Thus the students are afforded plenty of fresh air and proper light during their school hours.

In the building are six class rooms: art room, physics laboratory, chemistry laboratory, library teachers' room, manual training and domestic science rooms, gymnasium and an auditorium which will seat three hundred persons. The library contains more than sixteen hundred volumes and at the Carnegie Library, one block south, special attention is given to the requirements of the students. The science department has two laboratories, one for chemistry, the other for physics. Every pupil does research and practical work in the labs. More or less in connection with these departments is a museum. This has just recently been started and is still in its infancy. From time to time, rare specimens are added to the collection already on hand.

In the commercial room the student is prepared for the business world. The school does not cater entirely to the three R's. There are sports and other forms of recreation to be taken into consideration. The literary society meets every second week in the assembly hall. There are the annual field day commencement exercises. The cadet corps never yet failed to win praise from the inspecting officer. The gymnasium is equipped for all sorts of gymnastics as well as indoor baseball, basketball and tennis. Outside on the back campus there is ground available for football, baseball and tennis. The running track has not yet been constructed.

When school opens for the fall term, there will be the same staff of teachers as last year: E. H. Greig, B.A., specialist in science and physical culture; Kathleen T. O'Shaughnessy, B. A., specialist in physical culture, French and history; Kathleen B. Ferris B.A., specialist in art; E. Stephens, B.A., mathematics; Laura Stafford, B.A., Latin and English; Massie Wheadon, B.A., commercial; Mona Hammond, B.A., physical culture and assistant in general work. These are members of the staff who will begin their duties September fourth and who scored such a complete success in their last year's work.

LODGE RECEIVES NEW MEMBERS

Several Candidates Initiated By L.O.L. 526, Campbellford, This Week.

GRAND CHAPLAIN SPEAKS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 18. — On Monday night a record crowd of Orangemen gathered in L.O.L. 526 lodge room for the purpose of welcoming into the Order a number of new members. This lodge is to be congratulated upon the splendid effort put forth and the type of members secured. It is obvious to all that "Quality" is their motto.

There was present for the occasion R. W. Grand Chaplain of B. A. Rev. A. L. Geen, who delivered an address on the purposes and principles of the Order.

The members were also favored with remarks from P. C. Master and District Master Grills, and other visiting members.

Bro. McGuire of No. 36 then proposed a toast to the new members. This was replied to by Bro. Purdy. After a pleasant and profitable evening, refreshments were the next in order, after which a number of musical selections were rendered both vocal and instrumental. The gathering was brought to a close by singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

NORTH CAROLINA

C. Hardy, Brockville, Ontario, and as all his cattle are recorded and daily records are made from them he found that the Canadian cattle were doing better than those from anywhere else, and he has been buying chiefly in Wisconsin in the past although he has been on a purchasing trip in half a dozen states in the union.

In his herd he has one of the only two bulls in the world with 12 nearest dams producing 30 pounds of butter and 700 pounds of milk in seven days, and this bull was purchased from Senator Hardy in Brockville of Avondale Farms.

A carload of cattle was shipped yesterday from the stockyards of the Canadian National Railways. These were purchased in Peterborough and Victoria counties. He bought eleven from Daniel Murphy and son of Lindsay, two from J. N. Hall and son of Lindsay, one from G. A. Brethen of Norwood and five from the Stella Oriens herd of G. A. McConkey and Reverend J. R. McColl near the Lift Lock in the city.

Mr. Pemberton said that one of the best cows that he had seen was in McConkey's herd but he could not buy it and Mr. McConkey would not sell. The best bull that he had seen in this district belongs to Sandy Matchett of Otonabee, the animal is known throughout the prize lists as King Adbekerk Susie and was the prise yearling last year at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto and will be shown there again this year.

A. McNabb, Peterborough Agent for the Canadian National Railways comes in for high praise by Mr. Pemberton who to put it in his own words says that Mr. McNab is a prince. He has received the best service on this trip that he has ever experienced.

Mr. Pemberton is a member of Rotary Club and attended the club luncheon on Monday. He believes that Rotary is one of the finest organizations in the county.

When The Examiner asked him how he thought the presidential election would carry in the states he said that he believed Hoover would be elected although he would be voting for Smith himself as he was a strong Democrat but that the south was adverse to Smith's wet policy. North Carolina has been dry for thirty years and that the women of the state would not stand for anything else, and they are a stronger voting issue than the men of the state.

The Ku Klux Klan of the south at present is not the same as the old clan, he stated, and he was proud to say that his father was a member of the original clan.

Although wealthy Mr. Pemberton was working like a Trojan with shirt cast aside and intent on his task. He said that the trip would be at least 1,500 miles but that he was going to make a bed of hay on one of the racks in the car and journey down to the south with the cattle. When asked why he did not send a man he said that there was no one that he wished to send, and that he could see that the cattle would get better treatment when he was there. We are allowed to sleep in the caboose but on the main lines this is usually a mile or so behind the car, as the side door pullman is usually behind the engine and it is no fun on a rainy and stormy night to walk on the train to thee attle car.

The trip will take about four days which is only two days longer than by ordinary route and some time during a stop over it will be possible to get some sleep in a goo hotel.

He will get his meals when they stop at some town.

The train pulled out sometime yesterday for Lindsay and then it will be off for North Carolina.

Mr. Pemberton is a typical southerner who is thought very highly of by all those who are working for him in the city, and is very pleasant to meet, although a druggist by profession he is a lover of fine cattle by choice. All the cows on his farm are for milking only and receive the best of care and the farm is worked under the most modern conditions.

Four sisters and two brothers also survive, namely Mrs. John Gilis of Cameron, Ont., Mrs. Bruce Parker, of Millbrook, Mrs. George White, Kinmount, Miss Charlotte Husk, Peterborough, William Henry Husk of Millbrook, and Wesley Husk, of Peterborough.

Wedding Bells

PLUMPTON—SHAW.

WARKWORTH, Aug. 18.—The marriage took place recently of Annie Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Shaw, of Weyburn, to John Plumpton, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Plumpton, of Codrington.

CLYSDALE—MATHEWS.

A pretty wedding was solemnized quietly in the parsonage of the Warsaw United church on Wednesday, Aug. 8th, at 6 o'clock, when Violet Eliza Alberta, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Mathews, of Lakefield, was united in marriage to Milford Grenville Clysdale, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clysdale of Warsaw. Rev. H. B. Herrington performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked winsome in a white georgette gown with trimming of gold with white picture hat and white kid shoes and white silk hose. She also wore the gft of the groom, a necklace of Delta pearls with sapphire clasp.

The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Davis, the latter looking very pretty in a gown of shell pink.

The groom's gift to the matron of honor was a string of pearls and to the best man smoked pearl cuff links.

The young people enter their new life with the best wishes of many friends in Lakefield and vicinity.

AEROPLANE READY

he has marked out, it is the last place where fuel could be obtained before Mount Evans is reached.

The monoplane is standing on the special runway where it landed on Thursday. The runway was built by the city. Special graders were imported and a section of an oat farm, for which the city paid $300 because part of the crop was destroyed, were used in making a landing and starting place for the Greater Rockford.

Almost the entire population of Cochrane was out to see the blue and white monoplane, beside which Hassell and Cramer readily posed for photographers. They have expressed themselves as pleased with the hospitality of the people of this Northern Ontario town, who declared a holiday yesterday and closed up their shops in honor of the airmen—and incidentally to travel to the runway three miles away, to carefully inspect the monoplane.

Cramer predicts that the Canadian Northland will be the main route for aviation to Europe if the Greater Rockford's flight is a success, and that Cochrane may be a stopping place for planes engaged in flying from the middlewest to Europe.

"If we are successful," Cramer said, "our flight will change the air route to Europe. Canada's Northland wilderness will be recognized as the safest trans-Atlantic route, and the far northern posts will soon be the air stations of a new and shorter aerial route to Europe."

Will Fly at Noon

COCHRANE, Ont., Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Last minute details were given attention this morning by Bert Hassell and Park Cramer preparatory to the start of the monoplane "Greater Rockford," on the second leg of the trans-Atlantic flight from Rockford, Illinois to Stockholm, Sweden, to-day. The decision to hop off for Mount Evens, Greenland, some 1,600 miles distant, at noon was made early to-day. If the flight is made without mishap, this will permit landing in the Danish possession in daylight. Weather conditions were reported favorable.

FARM WORK

again mean much to farmers of this district as it has in past years.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OTONABEE, Aug. 18. — Great strides have been made with harvesting this week. All the hay and wheat is now in and oats and barley are being cut. Threshing is commencing here and there. Unfortunately too much rain fell for the potato crop and rot set in in many places. In the village of Lang the potatos are almost all rotten in all the fine gardens the village has. Being near the river the ground is rather low.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

The new neckties give a smart and usually becoming finish to frocks of the sports sort. The woman who is actually playing golf or tennis may prefer not to have a tie. Certainly one of the sort with rather long flowing ends would be a bothersome accessory for the tennis player. But there are charming sports clothes that were never intended for actual sports wear.

One of the most effective sort of ties is made with one end of one color and the other of another. I saw one from France the other day made with one side of black satin and the other of white satin. It was the finishing touch of a pique vestee. It was one of those rather long straight ties provided with a composition ring through which the ends may be drawn and held in place. The shops show all sorts of interesting new ties at this time of year which one may use to give a touch of novelty to a frock or bodice already in one's wardrobe. Possibly you have pieces of silks left from your home dressmaking that might be turned into account in making a number of interesting ties yourself. The tie holders so much worn this season simplify the work of adjusting the tie and prevent wrinking of the sort that comes when a tie must be knotted and tied in a bow with each wearing.

Bow ties are harder to manage but decidedly becoming to most youthful faces. Sometimes they impart a youthful aspect to the face that is not so youthful. The wearing of ribbon or silk ties made into arge bows at the iron ties made into large bows at the front amounts to quite a fad among some of the younger women and the girl who is making plans for her college wardrobe should, I think, include a number of ties to wear with the separate blouses which have such an important role to play in campus attire.

Dietitic Dissertations
(Specially Written for The Examiner.)

WATER

The importance—the necessity of water in the diet is not sufficiently appreciated, perhaps because it, like June,' "may be had by the poorest comer." It forms about two-thirds of the body weight, entering into muscles, bones, blood and tissues. The quantity required varies with the individual; it has been placed at from two to five quarts daily. This may be taken straight or associated with foods. Many foods are, roughly three-fourths water, but we should drink four glasses per day.

In the body water acts as a regulator. It regulates (by evaporation) the temperature, osmotic equilibrium, and the acidity or alkalinity of the blood. It also helps in the elimination of waste and in carry food material.

Too little water in the diet results in:

1.—Withdrawal of moisture from tissues;
2.—Drying of mucous membrane;
3.—Thickens blood;
4.—Overworked heart.

It is also one cause of rheumatism. There is a possibility—though not so great probability—of taking too much. The results of this error are:

1.—Wearing out of kidneys;
2.—Overworked heart;

I have a childhood memory of a "highbrow" guest refusing any beverage while eating. The reason advanced was—water mixing with food impairs work of digestive juices. The profundity of this impressed me then. Now! — Investigations show that, taken with meals, water stimulates flow of digestive juices, and causes more complete utilisation of food and decreased putrefaction and bacterial development.

Because water passes through stomach too quickly for hydrochloic acid to do disinfecting work, its purity is even more important than that of food. In rural districts this is one's own responsibility. If in doubt, get analysis, and, until this is done, boil it. One may have analysis made by the laboratories of the Provincial Department of Health (located at Toronto, London, Kingston, Peterborough, Sault Ste. Marie, Owen Sound, North Bay and Fort William) and sterile bottle for collecting samples may be secured free of charge.

Fruit Punch

½c lemon juice;
½ lb. grated lemond rind;
½ lb. grated orange rind;
¾c sugar.
1 qt. boiling water.

1.—Boil sugar, water and fruit rind five minutes.

3.—Dilute with chopped ice and ice water or carbonated water.

THE WHATNOT
A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

WHEN I met an acquaintance the other day I complimented her on how well she looked, but my honest appraisal of her appearance did not please her at all. Instead, she became quite peeved and insisted on telling me how really miserable she was and how unhappy she was over the unsympathetic attitude of her family and friends. I presume I was one, because I expressed the opinion she looked well.

• • •

Needless to say, her pettish tale convinced me of only one thing, and that was that this particular person had nothing more than an obstinate case of self-pity. If it were chronic, I should not mention it here, but I know the lady very well (probably so do you), and I hope that by the time this gets into print she will be able to laugh with me.

• • •

There are lots of times when we don't feel well, and don't feel like trying to look happy. Who would not rather be admired for bravery than abolished behind their back for being chicken-hearted?

• • •

A lot of folks do "look pleasant" under all circumstances. They are the proud folks, the folks that are too big and generous to vent their feelings on those around them.

• • •

They are like "Crossroads" whose letter came to my mail box this week, quietly suffering in silence and endeavouring to make a brave face for the world. But in "Crossroads" case I think the unhappiness can be cured, and in that case it is foolish to suffer.

• • •

Just to forestall argument over what I am going to write about next, I admit here and now that I am not a housekeeper. I can't write for a newspaper and do housework too. But, just as an unmarried woman is often first to give advice about caring for baby, so perhaps I, as an onlooker, can give some ideas about housework.

• • •

My plea is that there is no more reason why housework should not be systematized than there is why I should not have system in my writing. If families are any more exacting in their requirements than editors and linotypes and monotypes, I'm willing to apologize and call off the discussion right here.

• • •

Perhaps if I tell you about my simple little system for running this page you will appreciate better what my point is. And right here I want to admit that it often goes astray. It's a poor system that is not flexible enough to give way before some pressing need.

• • •

I have a little chart prepared with spaces ruled for every day for three months. Across the sheet the other way are lines for "Whatnot," "Mail," "Short Story," "Favorite Recipe," and all the other items that make up the Women's Page. When I finish this Whatnot for to-day I'll put a little mark opposite it under to-day's date. I have enough letters on hand for three days of next week—and they are all ticked off on my chart. The short story is ready for five weeks ahead, ticked off, and I know when I look at my chart that I don't have to worry about THAT item until September 22.

• • •

I do the same with all my items, so I don't have to chase around every day wondering if I sent in the recipe to be set, or whether I have a Whatnot to do for Tuesday. It saves my time, and the time of the machinists, and leaves my mind free for real work.

• • •

But women steadfastly refuse to plan to-morrow's meals to-day—and when they get up in the morning they don't know what they will give the family to eat. The result is that usually at least one meal a day is a scramble of anything that happens to be in the refrigerator.

• • •

Am I right?

• • •

And when hubby calls for his socks, does wifey know that on the day after ironing day she darned them and put them away—or does she have to stop whatever she is at to go find them and mend them?

• • •

No schedule can be like the laws of the Medes and Persians, that cannot be altered. For instance, I usually do quite a lot of writing at home over the week-end, but by the time this is printed I shall be on my way up north to pick berries—and my typewriter will miss my caressing hand until Monday when I get back.

• • •

I planned the trip a week ago, and it is very satisfying to look at my chart and see that I don't have to worry, because I'm "caught up ahead."

• • •

Your Monday schedule may be all upset when junior falls on the sidewalk and skins his knee, losing half an hour of your time. And just try to hurry your seven-year-old boy when he is tidying up the play room. He will linger lovingly over every treasure as if he were about to part with it for ever. Start twenty minutes earlier than you would require to do it yourself.

• • •

A well-balanced schedule is worked out on a liberal basis of time for each operation; any meal plan should admit of quick addition from a reserve store in case of unexpected visitors. But just because a time schedule can not be followed exactly, is that any reason for ignoring plans altogether and going at this business of housekeeping haphazard?

• • •

Now pan me all you like for my temerity—but try working on a plan for just one week. Then tell me how you like it.

• • •

At Chemong last week I noticed a practical little dress on a Miss of about six. It concentrated all its style at the front, having a plain back. The yoke was cut in one piece with a wide centre panel and a plait on each side of the panel. Separate shorts were worn. The sleeves were of the long bishop style.

• • •

In a George street store is shown a coat that will delight the heart of some fifteen-year-old girl on her early appearance at Peterborough's new Collegiate. It is of straightline single-breasted cut, with saddle shoulders and a new long collar faced with fur.

• • •

Great discretion is required in placing screens in living rooms. I noticed one in a farm house near the city that just fitted into its surroundings perfectly. The room was beamed and there were lattice windows. The screen was of oak, richly carved and almost black with age.

• • •

In another little modern house on Weller street there was a gay Japanese affair, all flowers and gay birds. It was as much at home in its setting as the old oak screen was in the farm house. But fancy them transposed! And yet we have seen equal travesties, haven't we?

• • •

In a States car this week I saw a lady wearing an inexpensive buckram hat covered entirely with tiny artificial flowers and leaves overlapping one another. It was really pretty, and just right for car travel.

• • •

And, by the way, if you have not yet obtained instructions for trimming your fall hat, or for that charming coolie coat, the offer is still open.

ENTERTAINING GUESTS
A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

The Shower.

Almost every season of the year, whether it be autumn, winter, spring or summer, there is always someone leaving your circle of friends and you feel that you would like to give a farewell party or shower. This can be done in many different ways, showers may consist of many different things, according to the position of the person for whom it is being given—whether she is being married, taking a position in a distant city, or just going on a trip.

One shower for the engaged girl which I heard of recently sounded rather odd but was quite interesting—a kitty shower. The girl was very fond of pussy cats and her girl friend decided this sort of a shower would just suit her—beside being something out of the ordinary.

Invitations were sent out in verse form, and the bride-to-be suspected nothing when she was invited to a kitty luncheon at the home of her chum.

The table decorations were of pussy willows, yellow tulips and black cats pasted on parchment shades. Place cards were tied to a china cat with a yellow ribbon. The menu was yellow throughout.

Upon rising from the table it was announced that "pussy was in the well," and a large waste-basket trimmed with pussy willows was brought in and set before the guest of honor, who was requested to pull kitty out.

With a dawning understanding of the meaning of this, the bride-to-be reached in a drew out one by one the "kits" from the basket, each one being tied with a yellow ribbon and a black cat.

The gifts were all very clever. There was a traveller's kit, a small blacking kit, a wee laundry kit for motoring, a handy kit containing baggage tags, rubber bands and etc., an emergency kit with safety pins, and thread and needle for her handbag, a guest towel with a kitty worked on the ends, a cream and sugar bowl with a kitten border, a quaint kitten door stop, and a cretonne bag with Puss-in-Boots pictured on it.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in pussy contests, and that old favorite children's game of puss-in-the corner.

I will continue next week with another "shower."

FAVORITE RECIPE

BLACK CURRANT JELLY

Let your currants be thoroughly ripe and quite dry, strip them clear from the stalks, and put them into a large stew pot. To every ten quarts of currants put one quart of water. Tie paper close over them, and set them for two hours in a cool oven. Then squeeze them through a very fine cloth, and to every quart of juice add a pound and a half of loaf sugar broken into small pieces. Stir it gently until the sugar is melted, and, when it boils, take off the scum quite clean. Let it boil quickly for an hour over a clear fire, and then pour it into pots, cover them with brandy papers, and keep them in a dry place.

• • •

(Contributed by "Rosamund.")

Take some of the finest scarlet strawberries, gathered when they are full-ripe, pick the fruit from the stalks, put some juice of strawberries to them, beat and sift their weight in double-refined sugar, and strew over; put them in a preserving pan, set them over a slow fire, boil twenty minutes, and skim. Then put in glasses, and when cold put brandy-papers on them.

Mother Remembered
By Percy Williams

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 18.—Amid all the stress and bustle of his preliminary preparations and training here just prior to leaving for the qualifying trials at Hamilton, Percy Williams, hero of the Olympiad, thought of his mother—and how best to surprise her on her birthday with a birthday present.

On the last mail before the Dominion Day holiday Mrs. Williams got a letter from Percy. After expressing his regret that he could not be there in person to wish her many happy returns, he requested her to go up to his bedroom and in a certain designated place she would find a sum of money which he had hidden there for that purpose.

"I want you to take it and buy yourself a birthday present, mother: use it all. I only wish it were more." In the place designated she found $20.

How Many Peas In the Quart Jar

The Examiner's Contest to be held on the Merchants of Peterborough

Twin Dollar Day

Friday and Saturday Aug. 24th and 25th

These Estimating Contests are very popular. A person can easily make a very close estimate by taking a quart sealer, filling it with peas and counting them.

This is the first occasion on which a TWIN DOLLAR DAY (Friday and Saturday), August 24th and 25th, has been held in August, and interest will no doubt be even greater than in former years on this account

The Examiner's Special Twin Dollar Day Contest.

The Merchants' Treasury Box will distribute $150.00 in Cash Prizes and THE EXAMINER, as usual, will offer independently $35.00 in Cash Prizes, to be distributed as follows to the persons making "the nearest estimate of the number of peas in the Quart Sealer in THE EXAMINER Window:

First Nearest Estimate	$10.00
Second Nearest Estimate	5.00
Third Nearest Estimate	4.00
Fourth Nearest Estimate	3.00
Fifth Nearest Estimate	2.00
Sixth Nearest Estimate	1.00
	$25.00
Our Special Prize of	10.00
	$35.00

How to Estimate

For every dollar paid into THE EXAMINER on DOLLAR DAYS, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, AUGUST 24 and 25, for an account for Printing or Advertising, a Subscription to THE EXAMINER at $6.00 delivered or $4.80 by mail per year, or THE WEEKLY EXAMINER at $1.50 per year, we will give Estimating Blanks for our own contest of $35.00 and for the Merchants' Treasury Box of $150.00, and we are also offering a Special Prize of $10.00 extra if the person winning the Merchants' Treasury Box First Prize of $50.00 secured the Estimating Blank through "EXAMINER" Office.

It is possible then for a First Prize winner who has secured EXAMINER Estimating Blanks to earn:

Merchants' Treasury Box Prize of	$50.00
Our Own First Prize of	10.00
And Special Prize	10.00
A Total of	$70.00

Every person who pays an account of $5.00 or more for Subscription, Advertising or Printing will get a Complete Safety Razor Outfit—Razor Strop and Blade.

WOMEN'S PAGE

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

MOUNT PLEASANT

The first Women's Institute was organized in Saltfleet, Wentworth County on February 19, 1897, with a view to meeting the expressed desire to acquire information which would insure greater efficiency on the part of the women of the rural section in the various responsibilities resting upon them in the home and as citizens. The class is now known as the Stoney Creek Institute.

Aims and Objects.

The aims and objects of the Institute are most comprehensive. The object of the Women's Institute shall be the dissemination of matters relating to domestic economy, with special attention to home sanitation; a better understanding of economy and hygienic value of food, clothing, and fuel, and the more scientific care and training of children; with a view to raising the general standard of the home, of the people and in the consideration of any problem and for carrying on of any line of work, which has for its object the betterness of the home, and conditions surrounding community life.

The women of the Institute have greatly enlarged their vision and field of activity since the Institute was first established and it is recognized clearly that the most important development is an ever-increasing desire for knowledge which will better equip girls and women for the responsibilities of mature womanhood. A spirit of service among the members and the ability to plan and carry on community work; the readiness with which the members express themselves, in discussion, addresses, and papers at the regular meetings. The annual convention is noteworthy. The Women's Institute is looked upon as an effective channel through which various forms of activity in the best interests of the whole people can be carried on in the rural districts. The health education and service, child welfare, school service improvements, libraries, community centers and any other understakingsare made effective through the co-operation of the various departments of the Government of the Institute. The motto adopted by the organization conveys in a word its lofty aim. The field of activity is unlimited and the strong compelling force in the Institute is a general desire on the part of the members to improve the lot of all in the community to do them and afford those opportunities through united action which cannot be very well be accomplished or provided through individual effort. While the present generation is benefited by what has been accomplished through the Institute succeeding generations will reap ever-increasing benefit through the splendid service which the women of the Institute are giving from day to day, month to month in the interests of the child. The home women and the mother, the men of the rural districts and the rest of, the members of the Women's Institute are developing a keener sense of responsibility in regard to those problems which affect the whole people, especially education, health and social condition.

EAST DURHAM BRANCH

Although at the organization meeting of the "East Durham Women's Institute" at Millbrook, on March 22, 1901, there were but twelve ladies present, when a special meeting was called on November 16 of the same year the attendance was approximately fifty, Miss Laura Rose, of Guelph, being the departmental speaker for the occasion.

According to the secretary's minutes: "A paper on "Different Ways of Cooking Potatoes," was prepared by Miss Brand, of Port Hope, and read by Mrs. (Dr.) Hassard. A paper on "Success in Growing the Freesia," was read by Miss Needham, and another on "How to Grow the Daffodil" was read by Miss Reid.

The first distribution of bulbs took place at this gathering, the directors in charge being Mrs. J. R. Eakins, and Miss Alice Vance. The giving of plants in the spring, and of bulbs in the fall, used to be a regular feature of Institute activities in the local branch, but this practice has been abandoned in recent years, for some unexplained reason. A number of the other branches of the district, when reporting at the annual meeting last June, stated that plants and bulbs for the members are regularly supplied. At the meeting when this practice was inaugurated here the members each received seven bulbs; usually an extra supply of both plants and bulbs was on hand, in the respective seasons, and the members might purchase more than the organization if they so desired.

It was in the evening that Miss Rose spoke and the secretary notes: "At the evening joint meeting (with the Farmers' Institute) the Hall was full, and Miss Rose delighted the audience with her talk on "Difficulties in Dairy Farming, and How to Overcome Them." There was not enough time for her other topic, 'A Chat on Housekeeping,' and the room was so cold. Something went wrong with the electric light and we were soon in the dark."

At that time the village had a limited electric light service, the plant being privately owned, and rather frequently failing to live up to contract and supply any lights at all. It was not an uncommon thing for the power to fail and lights to go out in the midst of a public meeting.

WARSAW

It might be interesting for readers to know and realize the growth of the Women's Institutes. In 1897, three Institutes were formed in the Province of Ontario. The first one was at Stoney Creek. Mrs. Hoodless, who because of a sad bereavement, wanted to prevent such things in other homes, never dreamed of the world-wide spread of her idea.

In Ontario:

Year	Number of branches	Membership
1897	3
1900	33	1,602
1905	208	7,018
1910	612	16,104
1915	892	29,046
1920	925	28,970
1925	1001	34,259
1928	1097	40,000

The idea has spread throughout the Dominion, and there are now over 2,200 W.I.'s in Canada. England has nearly 4,000 branches, Scotland has 500, Wales has a good number, Belgium has over 700, Ireland has 21 district organizations, each having several branches, Poland 500, Finland 399, New Zealand 12, Queens'and, Australia 40, New South Wales 50, East India 150. The work is also wel established in Africa.

What the Institutes Have Secured and Introduced

Among the advantages being enjoyed by rural Ontario as a result of the introduction of Women's Institutes may be mention the following: Rrural school medical inspection, systematic instruction through classes organized by the Women's Institutes; additional equipment for community activities — community parks skating rinks, libraries, etc., the leadership of women in community work, the establishment of classes for grown-ups as the regular monthly meetings of the Women's Institutes have been named; an increase volume, a wider distribution and better utilization of literature of interest to women and bearing chiefly upon health matters, food problems, clothing housing, lighter forms of agriculture; discovery, utilization and development of local talent; the creation of a more general desire on the part of the teen-age girls for information bearing upon the responsibilities of womanhood; organized philanthropic service seasoned with neighborliness.

The Activities of the Women's Institutes

Women's Institute activities cover a large field beyond those everyday household matters to which so much attention was devoted in the early days of the Institute; but home interests have never been lost sight of nor neglected. In later years, the general program or Institute work might be outlined under the heads of Home Economics, Agriculture, Education and Better Schools, Health Immigration, Legislation, Relief, Community service. Standing committees for these lines of work have been appointed for the province, for each convention area, for many Institute districts, and in a number of branches; so the general work throughout the province is becoming more uniform and definite and the field of interest in each local Institute is broadening.

Along home economics lines, one of the most important features is the demonstration lecture courses in nutrition and cookery, home nursing and first aid, sewing and millinery. These courses are given by teachers sent from the Department to classes of Institute members and other women and girls in the community, the classes being organized by the local institute. At the time the Institutes do not fail to make use of their own members in giving addresses and demonstrations along home making lines. A phrase of home economics training for junior girls has recently been introduced in the way of "Girls' Garment Making Clubs," the Institute finding a local woman to act as sewing teacher to a group of young girls of the neighborhood.

Some of the agricultural projects undertaken by the Institutes are the bringing to the community of expert help and advice along lines of agriculture in which the members are actively interest, such as lectures in dairying, fruit growing, beekeeping, horticulture, poultry and poultry culling demonstration. The beautification of home surroundings, establishing community parks and athletic grounds and caring for neglected cemeteries are popular features of Institute work.

In the way of school work, sanitary conditions have been improved and equipment provided, such as drinking fountains wash basins, first aid kits, gramaphones, etc. Hot lunches have been provided in many rural schools during the winter months. Institutes have been instrumental in securing medical inspection of school children, helped to maintain school nurses and assisted them in caring for poor children. They have also contributed to the education of the whole community in establishing public libraries, and in arranging such educational recreation as debates, concerts and dramatics by local talent and university extension courses.

While the supervision of the health of school children has always been one of the Institutes' main health projects, they have made their public health work felt by practically every class in the community through the distribution of health literature the organizing of baby clinic and dental clinics and the support of local hospitals. Where a hospital was out of reach, they have frequently provided nursing care for patients in poor families.

Be friending to the new comer, whether of British alien or Canadian birth is an everyday feature of Institute work. Children from Institutions, adopted into foster homes in the community, have also felt the special hospitality of Institute women.

In places where there are new Canadian families, the local Institute has frequently been a definite influence in absorbing the women into the life of the community.

The Institute is a non partisan organization, but through the work of the committee on legislation the members are studying national and civic problems in a way that can only result in broader and more responsible citizenship.

Program planning will further indicate the broad field and importance of the work carried on. The Institutes are much appreciated as a social factor in the life of rural Ontario and as an educational factor along practical lines for grown ups; their value cannot be overestimated. Through the united action of the members, most valuable philanthropic work is being done and as a community builder and director the Institute has proven its worth.

In so far as the mothers and daughters and sisters of a community can direct and encourage and assist in entertainment and amusement for the locality, so far may the Women's Institute be considered as a safeguarder of the best interests of the social life of the community.

Cavan

The annual convention for the Institutes of Central Ontario will be held in Toronto November 27, 28, 29. Institutes need to plan early to send delegates in order that they may bring back new ideas new plans and new enthusiasm for the winter work of the local Institutes.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:
I am 20 and married. We have a baby boy 8 months old. My wife is 18 and likes dances. I don't. But if I don't dance, it makes her mad. What shall I do?

W. B."

Why W. B., that's simple enough. Let her go to dances and you go out with the fellows and play cards or something. Take an evening off from each other's society once in a while.

Tell her you trust her to be a good kid, and have all the fun she wants, but to remember she is married to you and has a baby boy at home. Take her yourself to the dances, and bring her home. Let her slip off with her cousin, or your cousin, or somebody else's cousin, or go with her girl friends and dance till she's had enough of it.

My Dear Marion,
I hurt my friend's feelings in my last letter to him. I didn't mean to, really, as I dearly love him. How can I get over it and tell him I'm sorry?

Laura."

The whole secret of a delightful letter is to put into it the essence of yourself. Let it be spontaneous. Let it be simple and sincere. If you are sorry for an unintentional hurt to someone's feelings, say so, and explain how it happened.

Tell Aloysius or Leander as the case may be, that what caused you to write as you did was:— (1) Your evil temper; (2) A fit of indigestion; (3) An attack of jealousy, which is, after all, a kind of compliment; (4) A misunderstanding of something he said or did; (5) A piece of tactlessness which you can't account for except on the grounds of temporary insanity; (6) A desire to see what his reactions would be—an error in taste for which you are darned sorry and will take good care never to repeat. If it was caused by none of these things, come out with the real reason and say in simple words that you are sorry, that you are ashamed, and that you hope he will continue to like you, even with all your faults, which you are counting on him to correct little by little.

That ought to get him!

* * *

"Dear Marion:
I don't know how ever you have the patience to write all that you do. It must take you simply hours to write the Whatnot," let alone answer all those letters. It's no wonder you are up at all hours of the night!

I made three of the pickles for which you sent me the recipes, and they are delicious. Please send me the instructions for the coolie coat.

Yours faithfully,
Another Marion."

Indeed, my namesake, I just love this writing, and especially answering my mail. I don't do all my work in the office, and some nights I don't go down town at all. Now, for instance, I'm writing this in the living room, with a wood fire burning and my little portable typewriter on my knee. It's really not so bad!

I'm glad you liked the pickles, and I'm sure you will just adore the coat.

Crossroads: Your letter contains so much that is personal that I am not printing it. It did not in the least bore me, and I found it very interesting. You have certainly had a life with much tragedy, but I believe that your lack of health has been at the bottom of much of your personal unhappiness. There are many people in Peterborough quietly suffering—heroes in their own small way.

I'm glad you are feeling better now, but I believe there's a lot yet for you to learn. The depression you have felt all these years and your aversion to meeting people has probably been due largely to your physical condition. It works the other way too. Your blueness affects your physical condition. If you could only make yourself cheer up and be jolly! Very likely one thing you need is exercise in the open air. Could you manage that? And do it regularly? If you can get a book called, "The Conquest of Fear," by Basil King, I wish you would do so and read it. You may not have an inferiority complex, but I think you have worried about yourself too much, and dwelt on your imagined shortcomings. And you haven't "stuck" to things. Why not start out again with a clean sheet—and write to me from time to time how you are getting on.

* * *

"Dear Marion:
I want to take up toe-dancing, but my parents don't want me to. Do you think this is fit for me to take up? Would it be wise to study it?

Blondy."

If your parents object, Blondy, I think it would be better for you to give up your idea of toe-dancing, and get interested in something else. It requires much study and a lot of hard work to become a dancer; then there are so many toe dancers now that you would have a lot of compeittion. It would be a long, hard road to success. Then, too, you would have to leave home to rise in that art, and I think you are better at home. Tell me more about the situation. What age are you? Have you lots of money to pay for lessons? Are you already good at dancing? On what grounds do your parents object?

* * *

"Dear Marion:
I think your page is simply wonderful, and I enjoy reading every word of it. I liked "Gossip and Grumbles" or "Grumbles and Gossip," whichever it was. Are you going to write any more?

Gossipy."

Thanks, Gossipy, for your good opinion. It is only once in a while that one can write anything so foolish as that "Gossip and Grumbles," but I have a few more crazy ideas I may work in yet. Why not try one and send it to me?

* * *

Johnny: There are several good proprietory preparations for the trouble you mention. Send your name and address, with a 2-cent stamp, for a personal reply. I can't mention the names here, because all those I didn't mention would be peeved.

* * *

Zowie: You can't catch me like that. Try again.

Marion

Social Amenities

Eager: When you go to dinner, on which side of the plate should you put your napkin?

2. When a girl is introduced to a boy, should she shake hands with him?

2. A girl isn't "introduced to a boy," dear girl. A man is introduced to a woman. And usually she bows and says, "How do you do?"—and doesn't shake hands. Of course, she may offer her hand if she wishes but she usually doesn't. Especially if the introduction is a casual one.

REGINA WOMAN HIGHLY HONORED

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 18 (CP).—Mrs. T. Guild, Regina, convener of the committee, of Home economics has had a signal honor paid her according to the Women's Institute Publicity officer, Mrs. J. W. Price. She has been appointed by the Interior Tree, Fruit, and Vegetable Committee of Direction of the British Columbia Government as the woman representative of the prairie provinces consumers, to obtain first-hand information concerning British Columbia fruit, in order to promote the interprovincial market.

The purpose of this committee, which functions under the British Columbia Produce Marketing Act, is stabilizing of conditions for the producer and the consumer, also the encouraging of a greater consumption of Canadian products by Canadians, especially those living nearest this market.

Mrs. Guild has been addressing meetings, and through the press has been keeping the prairie women informed as to when to expect cherries, apricots, tomatoes, etc., their prices, conditions that have retarded the various crops, the best time to buy, etc.

BORROWED PLUMAGE
By Marjorie Amee.

Once more Jean read through the letter which had arrived to find her in a mood of despondency most unusual. Like a gleam of sunshine it had brightened the gloomy prospect of a Christmas away from home. To be sure, living with one's step-aunt didn't make much of a home, but even that was better than the dismal, deserted campus and the empty dormitory whose walls still echoed with the jolly laughter of departing girls.

"My Dear Miss Gray:
"It will afford us the greatest possible pleasure to have you spend the holidays with us. We are entertaining most informally and will expect you Christmas Eve.

"Cordially yours,
"MARJORIE HOLDEN."

"Most informally!" Jean's brow clouded. Instinct told her that those two words had been inserted to intimate that her hostess did not expect her to come equipped with evening gowns and opera capes. Only—Jean had so much less than that!

"I—can't—go!" Jean winked back unaccustomed tears and stared hard at a picture on the wall in front of her. As her vision cleared she became aware that she was gazing at the group photograph taken after the last Dramatic Society play. What fun she had had! For one brief evening she had been a "star" and worn truly becoming clothes.

If only—Jean sat suddenly upright with eyes that sparkled. "I'll go to Mrs. Holden's and wear those clothes!" she cried ecstatically. Jean's inspiration was born of the fact that the Dramatic Society had issued a recent edict. Clothes worn in the annual plays were to be purchased and become the property of the organization and so be always available for future performances. Jean was property mistress and held the key to the wardrobe that contained them.

"If Mrs. Holden had not been abroad when we gave 'Nancy's English Cousin,' this little stunt might have been impossible," mused Jean as, the following day, she folded and packed the smart little serge dress she had worn in the third act. Three changes there had been, noted respectively by the stage directions as "a one-piece serge," "a simple party frock" and "a striking outdoor costume." Jean took all three.

Late Christmas eve found Jean sinking blissfully to rest, prepared to dream of the coming good times with the jolly crowd which had met her so hospitably at the station.

But the following morning at the gay, holly-decked breakfast table Mrs. Holden unsuspectingly turned Jean's happiness to ashes. "My brother, Jean, who came after you had gone upstairs last night. Why, you know each other!"

"Of course, we know each other!" smiled a singularly attractive young man. "I coached the play in which Miss Gray played a demure little English girl—and well do I remember her in the part!"

Yes, it seemed that Cary Endicott, who had made "Nancy's English Cousin" the success it had been, was Mrs. Holden's brother. Jean had known him simply as the popular young assistant professor from a neighboring boys' college. And he remembered her well in the part. So, of course, he would remember the "one-piece serge" and the "simple party frock," to say nothing of the "striking outdoor costume!"

In the days that followed the girl tried not to imagine that Cary watched her with a perpetually quizzical expression. It seemed to her that she could read his very thoughts; could imagine him saying, "Ah, yes, the young lady took advantage of the fact that the girls were away to tog herself out in stage properties. How did she expect to get away with it?"

Yet these suspicions were unjust. Whatever the young man's inner thoughts, his outward attitude was one that any girl might have approved.

On one of the very last days of vacation the crowd set out on snowshoes across the hills. Cary had managed matters so that he and Jean lagged far behind the others. Suddenly, in a snowy but sheltered hollow, as the rest topped a distant summit and disappeared, Cary turned right about face and held out his arms. "Jean, darling, will you be my wife?" The abruptness of his words did not rob them of effectiveness.

Assistant Prof. Endicott's face expressed nothing beyond utter mystification. Then he shook his head. "I'm afraid—maybe I'm dense, but—"

When she had finished Cary just stood for a moment regarding her ever so gently, ever so tenderly. Then, "Didn't you know, you funny girl, that men can live with clothes year in and year out and never notice them? It's the people that wear them that count."

INTERNATIONAL MATCH FOR GOLF FINAL

AT SUMMERLEA COURSE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—C. Ross "Sandy" Somerville, of the London Hunt Club, and W. K. Lanman of Columbus, Ohio, meet to-day in the 36-hole final for the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship over the well-trapped Summerlea course. Not since 1914 when Brice S. Evans of Boston was beaten by the veteran, George S. Lyon, in the event at Ottawa, has a United States player reached the deciding round and never in the history of the championship has the title gone across the border.

Besides the international aspect to the final there is an inter-collegiate touch. Lanman graduated this year from Yale, where he was a member of the Eli golf team. The achievements of Somerville while an undergraduate at University of Toronto are still very fresh in memory. Somerville established a remarkable record as an all-round athlete while at college. A star golfer his first fame in competition came as a result of his prowess as a rugby football halfback and a goal-scoring hockey player. He has been a cricketer of note.

Had Decisive Victories

Both advanced to the final by decisive victories in the semi-finals yesterday. Somerville triumphed over F. J. Hoblitzel, Lambton, Toronto, 3 and 2, though Somerville's superiority was more pronounced than the margin indicates. For the greater part of the 34 holes played Somerville led by four or five strokes. He was five up at the 27th, but after making the turn in the afternoon with a five-hole lead, he eased off and Hoblitzel pruned the count against him to 3 and 2 before conceding a putt on the 34th green for a half and giving Somerville the honors.

Lanman advanced over Jimmy Mountfield, the stylish young player from Edmonton, Alta., who went out of the tournament 10 and 8 when, down nine at the turn in the afternoon, he conceded the match to his United States opponent.

Somerville played sound, steady golf to defeat the more spectacular and erratic Hoblitzel. The Lambton player frequently outdrove Somerville from the tee and he played a splendid short game. But for the greater part of the combat Hoblitzel located trouble for himself. He was frequently off the line, making excursions into the rough and into the bunkers and traps which abound on the course. Some of his recoveries were sensational, enabling Hoblitzel to turn what seemed a certain lost hole into a win or at least a half. But many of his wide forays were extremely costly as Somerville was playing his usual golf of around 74 for the 18 holes and mounted a comfortable margin in holes won. Somerville's only weakness seemed to be an occasional lapse on the greens, a few three-put greens making the small difference between par golf and his actual score. On the other hand Somerville gave sparkling exhibitions of putting, particularly on those occasions when he was called upon to sink the ticklish ones of from three to eight feet for a half or a win. His approach putts from the edge of the greens were faultless.

Won First Hole

Somerville won the first hole, but the match was squared at the third, Hoblitzel going one up at the fifth, a three-putt green for Somerville. But it was the only time in the match that the Lambton player led. Somerville came out of a trap at the sixth better than Hoblitzel and squared the contest, going one up the seventh when Hoblitzel started his day's exploration of traps. Hoblitzel jumped a stymie at the eighth for a half, but another excursion into sand on the right on the ninth left him two down to Somerville at the turn.

Somerville went three up at the 10th when Hoblitzel topped from the tee and, after losing the 12th which Hoblitzel won on fine iron play, regained the three-hole margin at the 13th with a birdie two, sinking a 20-footer for his win. The 14th, which has been none too kindly to Somerville in the tourney, brought his margin up to four. The next two were halved. At the 17th Hoblitzel played perfectly for his three, Somerville requiring a four. But Hoblitzel promptly proceeded to investigate the trap midway along the 18th fairway, missed a putt and Somerville went four up at the 18th.

They halved the first four holes in the afternoon. A birdie three on the fifth put Somerville five up, but another of his three-putt greens at the sixth round reduced his lead to four, while Hoblitzel, off the green to the left, chipped up and sank an 18-fotter for a three. On the short seventh Hoblitzel went over the green. He chipped back and laid Somerville a partial stymie, which "Sandy" negotiated, winning the hole 3 to 4 and going five up. There he remained as the next four holes were halved. Hoblizel was making a plucky fight, though he faced certain defeat. He won the 12th, Somerville being unable to get around a dead stymie that faced him once again. Only a smart recovery by Somerville prevented Hoblitzel from winning the 13th, but he won the 14th, a worrying hole for Somerville, after a beautiful shot out of the rough, which carried him over the green, but which left him a chance to get back for a win while Somerville was messing about in the trap on the left of the green.

The 15th looked like a win for Somerville and the end of the match when Hoblitzel missed his putt, but once again Somerville was up against a dead stymie. He plade it safely for a half.

The match ended on the 16th, the 24th of the contest when Hoblitzel conceded Somerville a two-footer for a half and the match.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, so far as the Petes is concerned the Central Ontario League race is a washout. Wed. saw the lads tumbled outa the running when Oshawa trimmed them 8 to 3, and thus eased themselves into a position to take a couple on the chin from Belleville. When I 1st glimpsed them Motorists back in the spring I couldn't see them getting into no play-offs, and even yet I can't see how they made the grade, but their there and we're not, and that's that. Anyway the Petes had a chance to fight themselves into the money serious after a terrible slump early in July, and although they made a good stab for it, winning 4 in a row, their downfall come Wed.

Looking at it after it is all over, mebbe a mistake was made in the pitching selection for that battle, but it's easier to see them things after than before, and if Mister Hardill had had any luck in his comeback, the Petes woulda been in good shape for the second game with Oshawa. However, the Motorists managed to stick in 3 triples in the 1st 2 frames just where they'd do the most harm, and it was all over after that, even if Mister Heckman did hold the winners tight for the resta of the game. Considering the Petes has rarely been able to field the same team twice in succession and that sometimes they had trouble getting nine men out for some of their battles, they have made as good a fight as could be expected. The opposition was always at full strength, and the Petes seldom was and, take it from me, that's some handicap to overcome.

For next year what do you say? Write your own ticket, Mac. Right now everybody sez they're through, but they won't all make it such it ain't likely. The Petes will soon be able to put a married man's team in the field. Mister Rose is the latest addition to the double harness class, and in the case of 1 or 2 more, it won't be long now. Anyway, they won't be no Kingston trips for next year's team to make. The Ponies is about as popular as a small-pox placard with the rest of the Central teams.

The play-offs brings Belleville and Oshawa together. We took 4 outa 6 from Belleville and dropped 4 outa 5 to Oshawa, and yet, Mac, if I had to bet my winter's coal on the result, I'd play Belleville right across the board. The Railroaders look to be the class of the league, Mister Sporting Editor. They's a lotta good fellows on both clubs though, Mac, and whichever wins the worst luck I wish them is that they knock off the Ont. championship.

Round home they has been oodles of baseball. It's a lucky thing the Attorney-General didn't hear about the East Peterborough play-offs or he mighta jumped on the league like he did on the marathon dance promoters, saying it was a endurance test. Anyway, Mac, it got so any day the Raybestos lads didn't play a game they complained that the long lay-off was taking the edge off. The Royals and the Kiwanis is still in the running in their own classes, and even if the Petes has laid their uniforms away there's still lots of baseball left.

Anyway, Mac, it ain't going to worry me none for the next 2 weeks. Let the fish do the worrying, I say, for I'm going after them, and I don't mean likely. Like Babe Ruth, I'm out to smash my last year's record, and if I catch me 1 lunge in the next 14, 15 days I'll be ahead of 1927. Well, they can't put a fellow in jail for trying, can they, Mac?

If I'm not too busy dropping the fish a line next week I'll drop you 1, just to say howdy to the customers.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

FALL WHEAT YIELD IS GOOD

Threshing Commences in Hastings District; Oats Cut.

600 BUSHELS OF WHEAT.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, August 18.—Threshing commenced in this district on Wednesday. E. Fleming was the first farmer to thresh, having done more than six hundred bushels of fall wheat. It was of good quality and yielded good, as Mr. Fleming was one of the few who had his wheat drawn in before the wet eather of late.

Several of the farmers are now ready waiting for machines to commence operations. A great deal of the oats and barley is now cut and in the barns or in stacks, as the farmers have taken full advantage of the fine weather this past week.

Personals.

Mrs. D. E. Scriver and son Byrant and Mr. Russell Learmouth have returned after a visit to Acton, Hamilton and other western points.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil McDonald and daughters have returned after spending the past two months in Hamilton. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald both underwent serious operations while there, of which they are improving wonderfully.

Mr. Harry Chapman was taken to a Peterborough hospital on Wednesday to undergo treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Doughty, and daughter, Irene, of the Star Office returned on Tuesday after spending their vacation in Toronto and points west.

Mr. Walter Whitred is spending a few weeks' vacation at the home of his brother, Mr. Cecil Whitred, in Hamilton.

The annual picnic of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held on Wednesday at Birdsalls Beach.

The Ontario Amiesite Co. has comenced operations toward laying the new pavements. They are building new culverts and repairing the road in preparation for the paving which is to start in a few days.

GIANTS GAIN ON CARDINALS

Defeat St. Louis 3-2 in Opening Game of Three Day Series.

PIRATES WIN DOUBLE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—The Giants reduced the lead of the Cardinals for the National League flag to two and one-half games by winning the opening engagement of the three-day series, 3 to 2, at St. Louis. Fred Fitzsimmons weakened in the eighth when St. Louis scored its runs and first Jim Faulker and next Larry Benton rushed to the rescue. The veteran Clarence Mitchell received his first New York defeat since coming to the Cardinals two months ago.

Pirates Win Double

Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia in both games of a double header 10 to 3 and 9 to 1. The Pirates collected a total of 32 hits and outclassed the Phils in both contests.

Pie Traynor was the outstanding player of the afternoon, the Buccaneer third baseman making seven hits and two sacrific flies. Three of his drives were three-baggers and one a double.

Kremer and Willoughby worked the entire first game and Brame went the route for Pittsburgh in the second. Philadelphia used Sweetland, Milligan and Walsh in the nightcap.

Doug McWeeny bested Sherriff Blake in a hard-fought pitchers' battle at Chicago, and Brooklyn took the opening game of the series from the Cubs, 1 to 0. For eight innings the teams battle on even terms but in the ninth, Flowers opened with a single to left, reached second on Herman's sacrifice, and scored the lone and winning run on Bressler's one base drive to centre.

McWeeny was wild, issuing six passes and hitting one batter, but he was invincible in the pinches.

Rixey and Greenfield pitched shutout baseball for eight innings at Cincinnati. In the ninth inning the Braves scored what looked like the winning run but the Reds came back with two in their half and won 2 to 1. Rixey limited Boston to three hits. It was one of the best pitchers' battles of the year here.

SENATORS WIN FROM TIGERS

RED SOX WIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Pitcher Jack Russell of the Red Sox won his own game in the opener with the White Sox at Boston by driving in Todt from second base with a single in the eleventh inning. The Red Sox won 4 to 3. The games was marked by fine fielding with the opposing second baseman contributing brilliant plays.

A triple by Ruel in the eighth inning which scored two teammates enabled Washington win by a 3 to 1 score the series opener from the Detroit Tigers at Washington.

The game up to the eighth had been a pitchers' battle between Hadley and Whitehill. The Detroit hurler struck out eight Senators.

Other games were rained out.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Harrison and K. of C. will open the Softball League program on Monday night at Confederation Park.

The Royals and Kiwanis will play-off their tie games to-day, one at Belleville and the other at Port Hope. The Royals have every chance of winning their end and the Kiwanis, while not so good, can be counted upon to put up a tidy battle to retain the honors.

Raybestos are not playing a first-round game with the Oshawa District winner to-day, but are enjoying a rest, thanks to the failure of the Lakeshore group to return a winner.

* * * * * * *

Two weeks ago, the East Peterborough League took this very point up with the O.B.A.A. secretary, who in turn handed the matter over to the O.B.A.A. sub-committee. From this body went forth the very definite order that no league would receive an extension of time, and that first round games must open on August 18.

* * * * * * *

After the E. P. L. playoffs were rushed to a conclusion, the convener at Oshawa was notified, but he was unable to give any definite information on the Lakeshore winner. Another attempt was made yesterday without success. It seems that the result of a game played on Thursday tied three teams for first place.

* * * * * * *

It is probable that Raybestos will get a game on Wednesday.

* * * * * * *

Harrison's are still in the City Softball League running by reason of their 5—0 win over the Lockworks last night. A good game was played, but the North-Enders who have fielded a strong team all year were fortunate enough to come out on the long end of the count.

Andy Taylor, prospector of Timmins, Ontario, was found Tuesday in the Northern Manitoba bush after he had been lost for 448 hours. He was almost famished and his clothes were torn to shreds. The above map shows the area over which he had wandered aimlessly and the region near Burntwood Lake where searchers discovered him.

ATHLETES RETURNING.

Canadian Olympic Athletes Receive a Hearty Send-off As Liners Sail.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press Cable).—Two parties of Canadian Olympic Athletes started from here to-day on the liners, Laurentic and Montcalm. The girls especially were given a great send-off and were showered with candies and flowers. Officials of the team and the athletes praised highly the reception they had received and stated they returned home with the warmest regard for all with whom they had come in contact.

Growth of liquor drinking in France has been more pronounced among women than men since the war, surveys show.

RAYS HAVE STRONG TEAM

Squad of Capable Ball Tossers Will Represent Peterborough in Play-offs.

WERE ONCE UNDERDOGS.

Congratulations are being received by Raybestos, the new champions of the East Peterborough Baseball League. Time was when the Rays served the purpose of a sponge to absorb regular beatings, when the O.G.E. Intermediate champions were at the heighth of their glory. Practically every club walloped the Rays. They fared better after finding a berth in the East Peterborough loop but were trodden underfoot by the Cognawagas when operating in the county series. Those were tough days in the city circuit, but the foundation was laid for success that had to come. Scotty Maudsley, then pitching for Stuffy Mahood's Royals also took some fine wallopings, due largely to his erratic efforts to locate the batter and the plate. But this season finds Raybestos rewarded. They are a squad of capable ball tossers, forming a strong team to represent Peterborough in the O.B.A.A. And the greatest of these is Scotty.

That the victory of Raybestos is popular was in evidence on Thursday evening when one of the largest crowds of the season, saw the 1928 championship won in the final game against Hastings. This on top of the Raybestos win in Hastings. With the knowledge that the fans are behind them the champions will do well in the race for Ontario honors. The team stands high in fielding and batting and has three dependable pitchers. And manager Art. Primeau, with his experience, should be able to help the team over the rocky places.

Cognawagas and Crescents went down with colors flying. Crescents won the honors last year, and there were many fans pulling for the Cogs to land the flag this year. It is a good thing for sport that the crowd places its sympathy with the underdog. This season, the Cogs always had to battle to stay in the race while Rays enjoyed a comfortable lead throughout the league schedule. But some of the fans have overlooked the fact that both Crescents and Cogs have won the League championship and have taken part in one or more rounds of the O.B.A.A. semi-finals. Raybestos are but getting their due. And among their best supporters are the members of the teams but recently vanquished.

A MESSAGE TO THE MAN WHO DOES NOT RUN A CAR

How much are you missing?

YOU, who do not own a car, are missing many pleasures that you might enjoy—the convenience of swift, easy travel from place to place—the comfort and privacy of trips free from track and timetable—the thrill of roads flying beneath you like never-ending ribbons—the fresh, cool breezes of the great outdoors.

You are missing all these—and more. And you are missing them needlessly—you, who do not feel you should spend the price of a new car! For surprisingly few dollars all of these pleasures may be yours.

A good Used Car, sold by a responsible dealer, offers you all of them, and at a cost so low as to be an obstacle no longer.

We have a variety of good cars which owners have exchanged for "Bigger and Better" Chevrolets—cars that hold thousands and thousands of miles of enjoyment and convenience. And the prices are the lowest we have ever known.

Do not go on missing things you can enjoy! See these good Used Cars today. C-18-8-28

WHEN SHOULD WE USE MILK?

Milk forms about as perfect a food as can be devised for infants up to about two years of age. While the mother's milk is best for human babies, cow's milk may be substituted, but in this case it is advisable to add an occasional feeding of orange juice, since cow's milk is deficient in some of the elements which are required.

Milk must be considered as a solid food, and not as a drink, for such it becomes as soon as the hydrochloric acid of the stomach acts upon it. Milk has very nourishing qualities, the solid matter being composed of protein, fat and sugar. In using milk, which is a protein, one should follow the protein rule of food combinations.

Milk is best eaten with some acid fruit, or with the non-starchy vegetables with which it forms a perfect meal. It should not be combined with meat, nuts, fish or the starchy foods. Milk may, however, be combined with bread or cereals that have been thoroughly toasted.

Curdling is the first process of the digestion of milk, and the smaller the curds the more readily the milk is digested. If acid fruit is used in this combination, the milk curds will be broken up into very small particles. This makes a very good lunch, and solves the lunch problem very satisfactorily. Bread must not be eaten with this meal or a bad combination will result.

It is better not to take milk between meals or with regular meals but to use it as an entire meal by itself, with either the acid fruits or raw non-starchy vegetables.

Milk is a valuable food in any noncatarrhal disease. Children who do not like the taste of fresh milk may use buttermilk or some kind of cheese. Cottage cheese or cream cheese, being protein, may be used in place of either eggs or milk, but being of such a concentrated nature, they should always be used with a salad or with some of the cooked green vegetables.

Cheese and milk are often considered constipating, but this is only because they do not form bulk in the intestines but are practically all absorbed in the process of digestion. This constipating effect is entirely overcome if the bulky vegetables are used at the same time.

No doubt the best kind of milk to use is that which is fresh from a healthy cow. Many dairy companies prepare this milk under the title of 'certified milk." Because of the extra care required to make this milk comply with the legal standards, it is usually necessary for dairies to charge more this than for the regular pasteurized milk.

It has been found that pasteurized milk is the safest plan for large communities because of the danger of contaminating milk because of much handling and transportation. This is especially true where the laws regarding raw milk are rather lax. While pasteurization cannot make the milk clean, it adds an element of safety in the use of the milk which has been thus treated.

I sometimes advise an exclusive milk diet during the cures of certain diseases, especially stomach ulcers, and I will be glad to send these directions to anyone who is intere ted.

Questions and Answers.

Question—Mrs. O. D. writes: "I have a brother who has been sick with tuberculosis for over a year. He has been in a sanitarium for six months and still is no better. In fact, he is getting weaker. What would you suggest for him to do?"

Answer: It would be unwise for me to attempt to advise you about your brother's case, as of course I cannot examine him or diagnose his case through the columns of this paper. My theories about the treatment of tuberculosis are very different from those practised in the average sanitarium. For example, he has probably been kept in bed and stuffed on too much food. My plan would be for him to take light exercises, such as walking, and decrease the quantity of food, using only those foods of the finest quality, with no effort being made to increase his weight. I have written a great deal on this subject, and will be glad to send you any literature you wish if you will only send me your name and address.

Question—G. H. asks: "Is stale bread easier digested than fresh? If so, why is this so?"

Answer: The reason why stale bread is digested more readily than fresh is because it requires thorough mastication and insalivation due to its dryness. There is no less starch in stale bread, however, and if one is attempting to avoid so much starchy food it is best to toast the stale bread completely through in order to dextrinize every part.

Question—K. L. J. asks: "Is there any remedy to stop a white coating around the eyes every morning? Seems to be caked on the lashes."

Answer: Use some good eye wash two or three times daily, and have your eyes examined by a competent optometrist.

HE'S A HEFTY BRAW LAD WITH THE GOLF STICKS

To-day brings to a glorious close the thirteenth annual Canadian amateur golf tournament, held this year at Summerlea, Que. As usual, it has drawn a galaxy of stars from all over the Dominion and foreign points as well.

Though this goes to press before the final results are known, there is one towering amateur, whose consistently high level performances in the last few years have signalized him at all leading tournaments, and placed him close to the top of the list of Canadian ranking players. He is Ross ("Sandy") Somerville, the silent Scot of the London Hunt Club, who has come within an ace of the championship twice in the past, and actually captured it once. In 1924 he was nosed out in the finals by Frank Thompson; in 1925, at the Royal Ottawa, he suffered the same disappointment at the hands of Don Carrick, who is this year upholding Canada's honor as a boxer at the Olympics. But the Scotch are nothing if not persistent, so the year 1926 saw Sandy firmly enthroned at last as champion.

Somerville is one of the outstanding all round athletes of Canada. He was a superlative punting halfback of Toronto Varsity rugby squad. As a cricketer he was good enough to make the eleven which Norman Seagram took to England on a visiting and playing tour several years ago. At hockey, too, he shoots a dangerous puck. He has tried his hand at tennis, squash racquets, baseball and soccer. So far, we regret, there is no record of his accomplishments at lawn croquet and parchesi.

Long may he keep the sport writers busy, and continue to burn up valuable newspaper space with his achievements at home and abroad.

RILEY & HICKEY'S BUSINESS GROWS

When clothiers are able to satisfy the most exacting demands of men, and young men who dress well, then it must be acknowledged that they have reached an enviable position in their business. Such is the case with Riley and Hickey, 337 George street, who have reached a high peak of popularity in this city and county.

A growing list of satisfied patrons are recommending that clothes from this shop are satisfactory in every particular and made of the best materials. The most exclusive patterns and mixtures are included in their complete stock and the most stylish and correct designs of the season can be found here at very reasonable prices. Riley & Hickey feature standard brands of men's clothing, and no matter what priced material is selected you get satisfactory fitting, which is a distinguishing feature of this store. They give the wearer the air of distinction natural to the well dressed man, but which is so had to attain.

Through very commendable methods they have marked their business career, and have thus built up a reputation that extends throughout the district, and which adds to the volume of their business each season.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

BRILLIANT CAST AND DIRECTION MAKE "THE STOLEN BRIDE" A CINEMATIC KNOCKOUT. COMING TO THE REGENT, MONDAY

A well-balanced cast, headed by one of the screen's most striking personalities, brilliance of direction and wealth of story, setting and atmosphere combine to make "The Stolen Bride," the feature Monday and Tuesday at the Regent Theatre one of the outstanding pictures of many months.

Introducing gorgeous Billie Dove to the screen as a star in her own right, this First National Picture is ideal as a vehicle for the beautiful actress, and her dramatic and moving performance more than confirms the judgment of the producer in advancing her cinematic position. In every scene of the picture Miss Dove's personality impresses itself forcefully upon the audience and she demonstrates that she is not only one of the most beautiful but one of the leading dramatic actresses of the screen.

With its locale in the intriguing atmosphere of Central Europe, in the days before the World War threw that portion of the continent into chaos, "The Stolen Bride" is filled with the glamor and romance and intrigue of the Old World.

Korda Directs

Alexander Korda, long noted as a European director of prominence, makes his bow as an American film maker with this picture, and with it immediately takes rank with the leaders of his profession. The direction throughout is deft, smooth and effective and shows everywhere a keen balance of drama and comedy.

The story itself, written and produced for First National by Carey Wilson, provided the director with excellent material. It is essentially drama, but drama handled with sophistication and a sense of humor.

Beautiful Billie Dove

"The Stolen Bride" is rich in production value. The costumes of the Hungarian officers, the native garb worn by the villages vie with the striking gowns of Miss Dove in picturesque appeal.

The supporting cast is an unusually well-balanced one. Lloyd Hughes plays the masculine lead opposite Miss Dove.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE ICEMAN

The iceman's a nice man,
Or so it seems to me.
When we are hot the iceman's not.
At least he shouldn't be,
For he sells ice, you see.
And yet he wipes the wet away
And says, "I'm surely warm today."
Although an iceman shouldn't be,
And that's a mystery to me.

The iceman's a nice man
In such a lot of ways.
The ice he brings makes lots of things
To drink on summer days,
As long as summer stays.
Just think of all the lemonade
And other things that Mother made
To keep us cool on summer days—
And then he's nice in other ways.

The iceman's a nice man,
And I will tell you why:
Unless he came, the doctors claim,
The babies all would die,
No matter how they try.
When all the world is full of heat
He keeps the baby's milk as sweet.
I always smile when passing by
The iceman—that's the reason why.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY GOES SKATING.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Now be careful where you go today," said Uncle Wiggily's wife to him one morning as he came down stairs to breakfast in the hollow stump bungalow. "You know the other day you fell asleep in the hay and see what a lot of things happened to you."

"Indeed I had many adventures," said the bunny gentleman. "I fell in the hen's nest and broke the eggs. My pongee suit shrunk so I couldn't wear it after the rooster washed it. And only that I was wearing a cloak of green leaves the Fox and Wolf would have seen me."

"That's why I tell you to be careful what adventures you have to-day," said Mrs. Longears.

"Well, I am not likely to have many adventures," spoke Uncle Wiggily with a jolly twinkle of his pink nose.

"Why not?" squeaked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, who was wrapping a warm woolen blanket around a cake of ice that the polar bear gentleman had just left. "Why won't you have adventures to-day, Uncle Wiggily?"

"Because I am going to stay safely here in my hollow stump bungalow," spoke the rabbit.

"Aren't you coming to the picnic with us?" asked Mrs. Longears, for this was the day when she had arranged to take the forty twelve little rabbits, including Baby Bunty, to the woods for a good time.

"You hop along by yourselves and have fun in the forest," said Mr. Longears. "Yesterday I was lucky and I don't want to spoil my luck and let one of the Bad Chaps catch me, by hopping out. I'll stay in the bungalow."

"Then we'll go the picnic," said Mrs. Longears.

So she and Nurse Jane took all the little rabbits to the woods with baskets of lettuce, carrot and cabbage sandwiches, ice-cream cones and the like.

Uncle Wiggily, left to himself in the hollow stump bungalow, went from one room to the other trying to keep cool. But he only seemed to get hotter until at last he said:

"I'll go upstairs and take a bath. That will cool me."

He splashed in the tub of water and splattered some drops on the floor of the bathroom. Then he dropped the cake of soap and he laughed as he saw it slide across the wet room.

"The soap is skating!" chuckled Mr. Lonears. "Ha! That's what I'd like to be doing now—going skating. I would be cool enough then. But the only thing that can glide around in summer, except roller skates, is a wet cake of soap."

After his bath, feeling a little cooler, Mr. Longears went down stairs again and he was turning on the electric fan to make a breeze when, all of a sudden, in through the open door came the Bob Cat. The bad chap, with his silly little tail, had seen all the family except Uncle Wiggily leave the bungalow.

"The rabbit is home all alone," snarled the Bob Cat to himself. "This is my chance to catch him!" So he sneaked in and he was going to grab Mr. Longears and nibble his ears when, all of a sudden, Uncle Wiggily said:

"Would you like to see me go skating?"

"On roller skates?" asked the Bob Cat. "No, indeed! I'm not going to let you put on roller skates and run away."

"I don't mean roller skates," said Uncle Wiggily, thinking of what he had seen in the bathroom. "I'll skate without them. Come and see me." While the Bob Cat watched, Uncle Wiggily sprinkled some water on the kitchen linoleum. Then the rabbit tied a cake of soap on each hind paw and soon was gliding around on the slippery stuff just as if he had on ice skates. "How's that?" asked the rabbit.

"Pretty kippy!" howled the Bob Cat. "Let me try!" But when he put on the soap skates and tried to glide around the wet kitchen floor the bad chap slipped and fell and bumped his nose so that he got angry and howled. He pulled off the cakes of soap, threw them at Mr. Longears and ran away. But the bunny didn't care. He had fooled the bad chap.

PRINCE GEORGE CROSSES OCEAN

RETURNING TO DUTY.

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—His Royal Highness, Prince George, youngest son of King George, who arrived here to-day on the Empress of Australia, was welcomed to Canada by the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, Hon. Narcisse Perodeau, Admiral Hyde, commander of H.M.-A.S. Australia, and Col. Pope, representing the Military District of Quebec.

The Prince, who looked well and happy after his ocean voyage, expressed great pleasure on being once more in Canada, and stated his only regret was that he would not have time to renew the many friendships made during his visit of last year.

The Prince, accompanied by an equerry, boarded a private car here and will proceed direct to Vancouver, where he will go aboard his ship, H.M.S. Durban. Newspapermen today learned he had not been appointed to the Durban as interpreter as previously reported, but as a full lieutenant.

FLIGHT HELD UP.

Rain Stops Cramer and Hassell at Cochrane.

COCHRANE, Ont., Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—Rain interfered with the plans of Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer to leave here this morning on the second leg of their trans-Atlantic flight by the northern aerial route and the take off for Mount Evans, Greenland, set for an early hour was postponed.

Heavy rain fell during the night and conditions were still unsettled.

FINANCIAL NEWS

Ticker Talk
By H. O.
(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 18.— A strong tone was in evidence on both the local and New York markets yesterday, with International Nickle one of the outstanding features. The stock sold up to a high of 102% in New York during the noon hour, but subsequently reacted somewhat on profit taking.

The opinion seems to be general that the directors of International Nickel at their meeting to-day will announce the offering of rights. It is stated that these rights will have a market value of close to $5.00. Should this be the case, it is reasonable to assume that the directors will decide to issue 200,000 shares at $50, which would work out to be equivalent of 1 new share at $50 for each ten held. On such a basis the rights would have a market value of close to $5, taking to-day's quotations as a basis. The amount of new money coming in would total $10,000,000 which would be sufficient to take care of operations at the Frood for some little time.

Persistent rumors are heard in the Street that shareholders of Imperial Oil can expect something very favorable before the end of the year. This, it is stated, will come in the form of a stock bonus. Those who are promulgating this rumour point out that the company this year has experienced a very large increase in sales and earnings and the company's treatment of shareholders in the past has been liberal. Imperial Oil's current dividend rate of $1 regular and 50 cents extra per annum only affords a return of about 2½ p.c. and it is reasonable to assume that the management will augment this small return.

Quite an extensive Canadian following has developed for Columbia Gas which is listed in New York. Interests in Wall Street who have been optimistic on the stock have not changed their attitude, despite the recent action of the general market. They maintain that earnings last year were not representative, because a full benefit from large property expenditures had not been realized. Results for 1927 were $5.28 a common share, whereas in first six months of this year, net was $4.28 a share, against $3.17 in corresponding period of last year.

Since July 1st, there has been further improvement in earnings of Columbia Gas and estimates are made that between $9 and $10 a share will be shown for the year. The most important part of the company's business consists of sale of natural gas. Electricity provides about 20 p.c. of revenues. Minor activities include oil production and operation of street railways in Ohio.

There has been a disparity of about 4 points between the shares of British Columbia Fishing and Packing and British Columbia Packers, the former selling around 18 and the latter around 14. As the comon shares of B. C. Fishing are exchangeable for stock in B.C. Packers, on a share for share basis, it is obvious that both securities have a like value and the difference in the price, therefore, is not warranted. The explanation advanced in certain quarters to account for this is that a substantial market for B.C. Fishing common is in process of being filled and due to the scarcity of the stock at the present time, on account of most of it being exchanged for new stock, B.C. Fishing & Packing is selling higher than B.C. Packers.

Mining Briefs
A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 18.—It is understood that Amity's vein is proven for 7 feet in width carrying a good grade of copper ore, and that assays will be available to-day. Mr. Scrivens left last night for the property.

On the holdings of the Alexandria Gold Mines Limited in Marshay and Shelly Townships, Sudbury district, a vein running east and west has been traced for 120 feet to the edge of swamp on one claim, where 600 feet of trenching has been done. It is believed that the main ore body lies at depth. On two other claims trenching has been done to the extent of 1,050 feet and a number of test pits have been sunk. Highly optimistic reports have been coming down. One is that a six-inch vein has been uncovered. The mineral is running heavy in copper and nickel.

Although the recent developments at Wright-Hargreaves at the 1250-foot level are considered to be the most important so far encountered, officials still remain reticent.

The long crosscut from the south drift at this level on Wright-Hargreaves is completed, and the vein where cut is more than coming up to expectations. Only a few rounds have been taken out so far but the deposit has shown a drift width of high grade ore. With the cutting of the vein at the 1250, sinking operations in the north shaft encountered the downward extension of the north zone, which also showed high grade ore. No lateral work will be commenced at the horison until the shaft has been completed to the 2,000 foot objective originally planned.

Grimston-Porcupine has had large gangs working on the property sinking two shafts 1000 feet apart, which are now down to 45 feet. The ore is reported heavily mineralized and assays hold out at $15 to $16 a ton. The government road in within ½ a mile of the property, and will be finished in a few weeks.

Surface diamond drill hole put down on Bidgood's extension of the Moffatt-Hall vein is reported to have cut through sections assaying $6 to $7 a ton. Owing to the heavy overburden on this section, the work has been found to be extremely difficult, but more holes will be put down.

Assays are reported to have run as high as $131 to the ton on the Mint Ore in a pit to the south of the main showings, in the contact between quartz and granite.

News From the Mnies

WRIGHT-HARGREAVES.
TORONTO, August 18. — Recent consistent strength in Wright-Hargreaves may be attributed to the fact that the long cross-cut from the south drift at the 1,250 foot level has been completed, and the vein where cut is more than coming up to expectations. Although only a few rounds have been taken out, the deposit has shown a drift width of high grade ore. Almost simultaneously with the cutting of the vein at the 1,250, sinking operations in the north shaft encountered the downward extension of the north zone. This also showed high-grade ore. It is believed no lateral work will be commenced at this horison until the shaft has been completed to the 2,000 foot objective originally planned. Although officials continue to be conservative, these recent developments are considered to be two of the most important so far encountered. Production continues at the rate of 700 tons daily, with mill heads running around $9.00 a ton. In view of the very favorable developments, the next quarterly report should show a very substantial increase in earnings.

BIDGOOD.
Activity and strength in this issue yesterday was no doubt due to reports of recent excellent results on the 500 and 600 foot levels. Ore is being opened up of a grade similar to that on the higher levels. It is officially noted that the structure is more compact on the 600 foot level than on upper levels, and likewise more characteristic of the Kirkland Lake producing section. A surface diamond drill hole put down on Bidgood's extension of the Moffatt Hall vein is reported to have cut through sections assaying $6.00 to $7.00 a ton. More holes will be put down in this section, which so far has been found extremely hazardous owing to the very heavy overburden.

MINT ORE.
Present operations at this Woman Lake property consist of sinking a test shaft to at least 50 feet through a gossan capping. It is reported this test shaft is now down about 15 feet and it will be some time before the objective is reached. It is also intended to drive a tunnel into the "big dome" at the north end of the vein. The "big dome" is a quartz zone which the manager is reported to have said is 190 feet wide and has been traced for a length of 1,200 feet. In the centre this narrows down to 43 feet but widens out again to 84 feet. In a pit to the south of the main showing in the contact between the quartz and granite, assays are reported to have been as high as $131 to the ton. This was in zinc blende and included quite a silver content.

Recent developments on Mint Ore have made it appear that this showing may connect up with a showing described as high grade on the southern part of the property. This latter is a quartz and porphyry zone of considerable width. Values are obtainable in both the quartz and porphyry and we understand that high assays have been obtained. It is the management's belief that these quartz veins will come toegther at depth.

Wheat Prices Decline As Harvest Progresses

CHICAGO, Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press.) — With harvest weather in Canada auspicious, wheat prices here averaged lower to-day during the early dealings. The relative firmness of Liverpool wheat quotations tended to bring about rallies.

Opening at 5-8c. decline to 1-8c. advance, wheat later kept near to the initial range. Corn developed strength, starting unchanged to 1-4c. higher and then easing a little, but subsequently showing upturns all around, with September in the lead. Oats were easy. Provisions advanced.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 112½, December 117 5-8. Corn, September 88¼, December 73¼. Oats, September 36 1-8, December 39¼.

SHOP PICNIC HELD.

The Fitzgerald and Company shop picnic was held to Wallace's Point on Thursday afternoon when about 35 employees and their friends enjoyed a most delightful outing. A program of sports was run off in the afternoon followed by a baseball game. Supper was served on the large tables under the trees and the evening was spent in dancing at the pavilion. The prize winners were:

CAMERAS PERFORM SURPRISING FEATS

Decide Lawsuits, Record Lightning and Reveal What No Man Can See.

In a California court the other day, Capt. W. B. Sellner, State Fish and Game Commissioner, accused a man of trespassing and dumping garbage on his property. Vigorously the other protest his innocence. The court was puzzled.

"One moment, Your Honor," said Capt. Sellner. "I can show you first hand evidence." With the court's permission he tacked a bedspread on the wall and produced a roll of film made with a home movie camera. A second later, judge and culprit saw a movie of a man caught in the act of dumping garbage—blissfully unconscious that an all-seeing camera was focused upon him, recording every movement. "Guilty!" said the judge.

Many a law suit has been decided as in this case, by a photograph, such is the reputation of the modern camera as an eye that sees every detail and does not forget. But today's camera can do more than that.

Science and industry alike know it as an ally, write Elsworth Bennett in the September Popular Science Monthly. It can photograph things that no human eye can ever see. It can picture lightning, study the explosion of blasting powder slow up for human eyes the crash of an airplane into a concrete wall. So fast are cameras that they can capture and record an event that is over before you realized it was going to happen. So sharp is the camera's eye that it can peer through solid metal.

To-day anyone can buy a camera that will take a photograph in the incredibly brief time of a thousandth of a second, and "freeze" into stark immobility racing automobiles and leaping athletes. Specially built cameras perform wonders greater than these, and catch the jagged forks of a streak of lightning, the speeding flight of a rifle bullet, or the flying droplets of a splash of water.

For instance, no bolt of lightning is fast enough to escape the swift camera that J. W. Legg, research engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, designed and built. Its two revolving shutters take 2,000 pictures of electric flashes in the laboratory each second. With it he has found for the first time that lightning actually travels not in zig-zag or in straight lines, but in spirals. He has caught real moving pictures of the corkscrew-twisting sparks.

Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, who has arrived in Canada on his annual visit to the Dominion.

$250 IS GIVEN TO MEMORIAL

The North Monaghan council held their regular meeting on Monday, August 13th, at 2 p.m. All the members of the council were present, Reeve Rye presiding. City Solicitor J. Wearing submitted a draft agreement re sewer connections in the township. This matter was left over until the next meeting.

A resolution was passed that the township give a grant of $250.00 to the war memorial fund in the city and county of Peterborough. A letter was read from a resident of McGill street notifying the council that certain people are riding their bicycles on the sidewalks and are menacing the safety of pedestrians. This matter was left in the hands of Mr. Bourns to have county constable Pratt or Provincial Constable Thompson take action and to prosecute all offenders for riding bicycles on the sidewalks in the township.

The following bills were passed for payment:

James Laing, Board of Health meeting, $3; H. B. Rye, Board of Health meeting, $3; Dr. Morgan, Board of Health meeting, $3; Thomas Ruth mower repairs, $1.55 Kingan Hardware Company, supplies $3.75; Brown Hardware, shovels, $4.60; Arnold Bidgood, cutting weeds $3; W. J. Grady, gasoline, $21.05; John Carter, cutting weeds, $3; M. Maudsley, cutting weeds, $3.70; Sawyer-Massey Company, balance due on side feed conveyor, $100; Dowe-Pearson, envelopes, $6.15; Kingan Hardware supplies, $3.65; Imperial Oil, oil and gas, $45.81; Bruce Johnston, telephone and telegraph, $6.26; Peter Hamilton Co., repairs to mower, $5.65; D. Belleghem and Sons, $3.00; Davidson, groceries, $9.62; W. J. Byres, groceries, $4.16; H. B. Rye, telephone, $1.15.

The meeting then adjourned. The next regular meeting will be held at the Court House on Monday, September 10th at 2 o'clock p.m.

REPORTS FAVORABLE.

Bulletin Confirms Optimistic View of Western Harvest.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Favorable crop reports are confirmed in a bulletin issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to-day. It gives no estimate of the yield but states that harvesting conditions are excellent throughout practically all of Western Canada.

Wedding Bells

ELLIOTT—CAMERON.

A very pretty house wedding took place at four o'clock this afternoon at 708 Stewart street, when Mary Barron, daughter of Mrs. Cameron and the late Alfred J. Cameron, O. L.S., was united in the hold bonds of matrimony to Vega Elliot, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Elliott. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. Bright, M.A., B.D., pastor pro tem of St. Paul's Presbyterian church. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, who also played the accompaniment for her pupil, Miss Jean Cameron, singing "Beloved, It Is Morn," during the signing of the register. A beautiful setting for the ceremony was afforded by a banking of ferns and gladioli at one side of the drawing room.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Roderick Cameron, wore a lovely gown of shell-pink chiffon, large matching hat of mohair, pale pink satin slippers and silk hose. Her arm bouquet was of Madam Butterfly roses.

Mr. Frederick Northwood, of Toronto, acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a reception was held and a buffet luncheon served. Mr. Elliot and his bride left later for an extended motor trip through Canada and the United States.

shoot,' but the foreigner ran behind the car in the ditch and opened fire at once.

"My father was standing between the car in the ditch and the car that had just pulled up. The first shot struck him full in the throat. He staggered a few steps and then fell to the ground. I ran over to him. He was dead.

"The foreigner kept on firing. The second bullet went through Laird's arm, but he did not stop. All three men jumped for the foreigner and another was struck by a bullet. Laird reached the robber and struck him a blow with the monkey wrench. Another blow knocked him senseless.

"They held the foreigner on the ground and then one of the men went for the provincial police at McKeller. They came at once and handcuffed the man. He looked sulled and swore but said little else."

Joseph Parks, C.P.R. telegraph operator at Parry Pound, said over the long distance telephone that two men were on the train and the third was apparently waiting for them when they got off at Parry Sound.

Mail Clerks Unarmed

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18.—"Our three mail clerks were held up with their backs to the wall of the car while two bandits looted the mails," said A. M. Gibson, District Superintendent of Railway Mail Services, after he had received a report of the robbery on the arrival of the train here. Mr. Gibson said the distance between the point where the robbers entered the car and where they made their exit was about thirty miles. He was unable to state the amount taken

The department is conducting a thorough investigation. It is understood the men in charge of the mail car were not armed.

Gordon Duff, aged 14 years, of Toronto, pluckily saved the lives of Mrs. Shinbang and Miss Hilda Speicher of Kitchener from drowning in Germania Lake, Muskoka.

J. Akey's Horse Breaks Track Mark at Pembroke Races.

Jack Abbie, owned by J. Akey of Peterborough and driven by Eddie Jones, recently broke the track record at Pembroke. In the Free-for-All race, which he won in three straight heats; his time was 2.13, 2.11½, and 2.10¼, the time of the last race making a new record. At the meet Eddie Jones was presented with a floral hroseshoe by the racing committee for being the best-dressed and best-behaved driver during the meet.

Armadale, owned by Arthur Johnston, Peterborough, took third money in the same race.

OSHAWA LEAGUE IS HOPELESS TANGLE

The Raybestos, after their rush all week so that they would be able to meet the winners of the Oshawa district, are idle to-day simply because the Oshawa group failed to live up to the orders of the O.B.A. Oshawa and Cobourg appear to be playing off for first place, but nobody seems to know how they stand. The Examiner attempted to get the standing of the league to-day but was told by The Port Hope Times that the standing was a hopeless tangle with nobody seeming to know just where they stand.

Oshawa was to play in Cobourg on Thursday night, but failed to make an appearance and wired that their officials were coming to explain but the officials failed to arrive. The two teams are again scheduled to play off to-day to decide a winner which in all probability meets the Raybestos next Wednesday.

OBITUARY

MRS. E. R. SHOREY

The death occurred at the Private Patient's Pavilion of the Toronto General Hospital on Thursday of Mrs. Eliza Rebecca Shorey, widow of the late Rev. S. J. Shorey, D. D. For a number of years Mrs. Shorey has been a resident of and was well known in Eastern Ontario, where her husband was prominent among the clergymen of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Prior to their retiring to Picton Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Shorey resided in Port Hope where Dr. Shorey was pastor of the Methodist church almost 10 years ago. Dr. Shorey at one time was pastor of the old Charlotte Street Methodist church and he also occupied the George Street Methodist church pastorate for a term of years.

From Port Hope they went to Toronto, where Dr. Shorey was pastor of the Sherbourne street Methodist church.

The remains will be taken to Picton for interment in the United Church cemetery there.

Bass Bites Hand of Girl in Canoe

An unusual story filtered through from the Kawartha Lakes to-day. It seems a young lady who was being paddled through the romantic solitudes of the northern waters on a recent moonlight night was moved to trail her hand in the water. A huge bass jumped at it and bit it severely before being shaken off. This adds a new terror to wearing diamond rings on these occasions. Some account for it however, by the spoon.

IN MEMORIAM.

Just when his hopes were brightest,
Just when his days were best,
God called him from amongst us
To his home of eternal rest.

—A Friend.

IN MEMORIAM.

LEESON—In loving memory of our dear son, William J. Leeson, who departed this life August 18, 1927:

Deep in our heart lies a picture
Of a loved one gone to rest,
In memory's frame we will keep it,
Because he was one of the best.

Our life cannot speak how we loved him,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say;
God only knows how we miss him
In a home that is lonesome to-day.

Son, dear, we think of you,
And think of the way you died.
To know you could not say good-bye
Before you closed your eyes.

—Inserted by his loving father and mother.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad and loving memory of our dear brother, William J. Leeson, who departed this life, August 18, 1927:

He bade no one a last farewell,
He said good-bye to none,
The heavenly gates were open wide,
A loving voice said come;
His loving voice is silent,
His true heart ceased to beat;
We miss his well known footsteps,
And the face we used to greet.
We often think of the days gone by,
When we were all together;
A shadow o'er our lives is cast,
A loved one gone forever.
August brings back sad memories
To those who loved him best;
Peacefully be your home, dear Bill,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name.
Sadly missed by his loving sisters and brother.

H. A. GILROY SCORES GRAIN POOL ATTACKERS

Pool Sale Of Grain Upheld

H. A. Gilroy Says Those Attacking New System Fear Loss to Themselves.

PRICES STABLE.

The contents of a special despatch from our Toronto correspondent in which was embodied an avowed interview with John Kennedy, Chairman of the Grain Section of the Toronto Board of Trade, dealing with the Ontario Grain Pool and appearing in our issue of August 9th has brought a reply from the Pool Management in Toronto.

"The interview is misleading," says H. A. Gilroy, a Director of The United Farmers Co-operative Co., which organization has sponsored the Pool in this Province. "If it is a genuine interview it no doubt is a deliberate and studied attempt on the part of the old order of the grain trade to discredit the Pool. It might be well to look for a moment as to who John Kennedy is and what his connections are in the grain trade. I understand he is a flour broker, that is, one whose business it it to sell flour of the various smaller mills wherever he can, thereby earning a commission on the transaction and it is quite within the possibilities that Mr. Kennedy's flour trade was somewhat interfered with last year on account of the readjustments found necessary by many of the mills in marketing their flour. Those of us who have worked to establish this new system of grain marketing in Ontario know that there still are members of the established trade who look askance at any co-operative marketing effort because they feel that is succeeds some of them will lose a fat job. Fortunately, however, there are many in the grain trade and the milling industry who recognize in the Pool a marketing system that will serve Canadian citizens and Canadian business to better advantage than did the old competitive business.

"Take one statement in the interview. Mr. Kennedy pretends to make the official announcement to Pool members admit that the cost of selling wheat through the Pool is seven cents a bushel. The actual Pool cost was 1½ cents, the balance being made up of a more than liberal allowance of 5½ cents to local

FARM HANDS STILL SCARCE

Demand For Harvest Workers Continues—Skilled Men Wanted.

FOR MANY TRADES.

"FARM HANDS" in large letters on the window bulletin board of the employment bureau is significant of the fact that there is an urgent need for help throughout the country. The last two weeks have been excellent harvest weather but the farmers are handicapped, the previous two weeks by rain, and these two weeks by the lack of help, according to thel atest reports from the bureau.

Just at present it seems that good men are scarce. The list for skilled help remains practically unchanged from the last visit made by The Examiner to the office. Still there are WANTED—farm help, hood and wheel stripers, body stripers, wood pattern makers, setter for steam set saw mill, edgerman, trimmer, granite letter cutter, mechanical draftsman, diemakers, linemen, riveters, and hotel help.

TEAM RUNS AWAY.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Aug. 20. — Robert Vansickle narrowly escaped serious injury on Saturday afternoon when his team bolted with a new threshing machine owned by his nephew, Harry Vansickle which he was moving from the C.P.R. freight shed. The horses took fright when the machine struck them coming down the incline in front of the shed and they ran down Ottawa street, striking and breaking off the telephone post just west of the station.

Hoover President By Small Margin

Smith's supporters among the visiting American tourists were outdone this morning, when a large sedan car from Ohio parked on George street displaying on the spare tire cover on the rear of the car, Vote for Hoover and a large picture of the candidate, in white, against the black background of the cover. There have also been noticed several smaller plates fastened under the license plates of other U. S. cars for Hoover. By taking the census of the enthusiastic tourists in favor of each presidential candidate, Hoover wins and is president of the United States at the next election by the majority of several supporting cars.

REFORMER OF BRITISH ARMY PASSES AWAY

Viscount Haldane Dies After Long Illness at Age of 72.

FORMER WAR MINISTER.

Changes He Introduced Made Expeditionary Force of 1914 Possible.

CLOAN, Perthshire, Scotland, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Viscount Haldane of Cloan, equally famous as philosopher and statesman, and former War Minister, died yesterday after a long illness. He was 72.

Dr. Haldane was credited with the reorganization of the British army that took place between the years of 1905 and 1914, and permitted Great Britain to send a strong expeditionary force to France within a few days after the Great War began.

It was his initiative that brought about a revision of the British general staff and the creation of a new army of "territorials."

Richard Burdon Haldane, created first Viscount of Cloan in 1911, was born in Scotland in 1856 of an old Scotch family. He was educated in Edinburgh University and later studied philosophy at Gettingen, Germany, where he first acquired his eagerness in the pursuit of German thought. Lord Haldane was possessed of ample means, but early entered the law, where he made his name distinguished as an advocate and jurist and in politics.

He entered the British government in 1905 as Secretary of State for War in the ministry of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and retained that portfolio until he was named Lord High Chancellor of England in 1912. His early love for German scholarship told against him after the war commenced, and despite his record in creating a new army, he was excluded from the coalition ministry, formed in 1915. That virtually closed his career in politics, although he remained a judicial member of the Privy Council and in 1924, forsaking the Liberal party, entered the Labor ministry of Ramsay MacDonald as Lord Chancellor.

Despite his age Lord Haldane enjoyed excellent health until early this year, and predicted that he would live as long as his mother, who died a centenarian a few years ago.

He was taken ill in March, but recently seemed to have improved. A few days ago his illness again manifested itself and on Saturday became critical. He died yesterday after a severe heart attack.

RADIO CALLS TO AID FLIERS

Government Stations Vigilant—Hope Successful Landing Made.

24 HOURS OVERDUE.

OTTAWA, Aug. 20. — (Canadian Press.) — Government stations in Canada will exercise constant vigilance for news of the missing plane Greater Rockford, in which Hassell and Cramer are attempting a flight from Cochrane, Ontario, to Greenland More than twenty-four hours overdue, the fliers are now looked for somewhere along the south-west coast of Greenland if they have made a successful landing.

In the hope that they have met with no worse disaster than a forced landing short of their destination, the Canadan Government is sending out long and short wave calls from the Belle Ise Strait, Port Burwell and Wakeham Bay stations.

MAH. TRAIN REACHES TORONTO.

At 4.30 Saturday morning C.P.R. Vancouver train No. 4 was boarded by bandits at a station near Sudbury, and the mail car robbed The bandits then left the train at Parry Sound, without any of the train crew except the mail car clerks knowing of the holdup. When their car, which was stolen, went into the ditch, the bandits asked Thomas Jackson, a farmer residing near Parry Sound, for aid, and while he was so engaged a car containing pursuers arrived. One of the bandits shot and killed Jackson. The other men captured the man alleged to have done the shooting and recovered $1800 of the loot. The photographer shows above (1) the train pulling into the union station when it was met by Superintendent Gibson; (2) the crew unloading the mail; (3) the mail car; (4) the mail crew leaving the station.

CRIPPLED PILGRIMS ARE HELPED BY PRAYERS AT FORT STE. MARIE

Girl Walks Without Crutches For First Time in Many Months.

HUNDREDS ATTEND.

Giving her crutches to her companion, a crippled girl walked from the priests' house to the church at Fort Ste. Marie yesterday. The foot that limps from the hip disease that has crippled her for many years did not straighten itself out, but it touched the ground with newer confidence and she walked, for the first time in a year, unaided by crutches. There were tears in her eyes and in the eyes of those who went with her.

Over at the priests' house, the small grey stone cottage that stands near the church, a young man prayed in response to the prayers of the Jesuit father who stroked with swift fingers the two knees stiffened and useless from rheumatism. Then he also, the wooden supports holding him, made his way to the church. "He hasn't walked as well as that for months," eagerly proclaimed a friend who watched him.

They were only two of the many who were helped yesterday after making the pilgrimage of Old Forst Ste. Marie. They came, the lame, the halt, and the blind, the neurotic, the cancer-ridden, the sufferer from the White Plague of lung trouble, and they added their petitions to the prayers of the hundreds who joined them. In wheel chair, a man and a woman sat through the services, facing the high altar, pathetically hoping for relief from the pain that chains them to a crippled life, while the prayers went on.

Yesterday saw the third annual pilgrimage of the Diocese of Peterborough to the Shrine of the Canadian Martyrs, the church at Fort Ste. Marie erected within recent years by the Jesuite fathers of Canada, designed to commemorate the martyr's death of those early members of their Order who left their homes in France to journey to a new world and plant the cross of Christ in the wildnerness.

From 1639 to 1649, Fort Ste. Marie flourished as the central residence of the Jesuit missionaries laboring along Georgian Bay. But it was harassed by the ferocious Iroquois who descended again and again upon the blackrobes and their Huron friends and put them to death. In 1650, the country was abandoned by white men and all traces of human occupation disappeared until the settlement of Simcoe County in the first quarter of the nineteenth century, when the ruins of old Fort Ste. Marie, covered by vines and shrubbery, were restored to life and preserved to this day, a precious relic of a heroic age.

CANADA'S WATER POWERS HER MOST VALUABLE ASSET

Rotarian B. L. Barns Tells Club of Developments Due To Power.

CHEAP AND PLENTIFUL.

Available in Largest Quantities Where Coal Is Scarce. He Points Out.

Water Power in Canada was the topic of Rotarian B. Lee Barnes' interesting address containing a wealth of information as far as this country was concerned in its past, present, and future development along these lines, given to the Rotarians at their regular luncheon in the Empress Hotel this noon.

"It is my purpose in attempting to discuss this subject," said Mr. Barnes, "to preesnt only the more important facts in connection with what has already been done and future possibilities in water power development and to point out some of the outstanding effects of water power upon our national development.

"From an industrial viewpoint, Canada's water powers are one of her most outstanding and valuable natural assets. Apart from the human factor, water power has been a force most vital in Canadian industrial development. It is available in every province but it is a remarkable fact in those parts of the country where there is little or no coal, the greatest water power resources are found. The provinces of Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec contain 80 per cent. of the available water power in Canada and it is a coincidence that these provinces have practically no known fuel resources while the other provinces possess the fuel wealth of the nation.

"The influence of water power upon the trend and expansion of Canada's industrial development is becoming more and more evident and there is little doubt that the Dominion's future progress is assured by this abundance of low-priced power. We cannot fully appreciate the real value of our water powers from a statement that the known resources amount to say 33,000,000 horse-power, impressive as that statement is. The greatest value of this resource for our national development is in the fact that it is comparatively evenly distributed from coast to coast, so that it can be economically distributed for industrial and agricultural uses.

"The low cost at which this power can be made available is a very important element. The lower the rate at which it can be supplied the greater and more widely diffused will be its economic benefit to the people for power is essentially an instrument to be used for development of other resources, for the production of manufactured goods, for the transportation of persons and goods for the lightening of the farmer's labor and for the physical well-being and comfort of mankind in the homes.

"Water power has enabled Canada

Children Enjoy Outing With Kindly Friends

While up the lakes over the week-end The Examiner ran across one of those acts of kindness which are always being done but of which little is heard. A Peterborough couple with no children of their own had known of a family in needy circumstances whose youngsters never had a holiday. Borrowing three of these children the couple packed their car and all left for the lakes. Here they pitched their tent and the kiddies were given the key to the spot. They had their choice to sleep in the tent or car and they were undecided as to what to do. In the evening they were given a marshmallow roast and in the days to follow everything was done to give these youngsters the best time of their life. Everything was planned to give them a real vacation.

WILL YOUR HOME BE REPRESENTED?

The committee appointed by the citizens of Peterborough at a public meeting to undertake the supervision and erection of Peterborough's War Memorial felt sure that every home in the city would desire to make some contribution to the fund. Organizations and private subscriptions amounted to $26,000, leaving only $6,500 to be raised by general subscription.

A letter and full information has been sent to every household and while many subscriptions have been sent to the treasurer, G. H. Thompson, many expected subscriptions have not been received. It would be very gratifying to the committee to have every home send in a subscription of $1.00 up and where it can be spared larger amounts, so that as many as possible will have made a contribution.

If you send in your subscription this week it will be greatly appreciated.

White Leghorn Hen Lays 4-Ounce Egg

An egg 3¼ inches long and 2 inches in diameter, which looks like a duck's egg but is the product of a white leghorn hen was brought to The Examiner by J. J. Dips Pail In Creek; Gets 7-Inch Trout BAKERSFIELD, Cal., August August 13. — Imagine the astonishment of Ralph Hunter, thirsty Bakersfield contractor, when he dipped a pail into a creek near his cabin at Balance Rock and caught a seven-inch trout. The fish story is verified by the keeper of the Balance Rock store, who saw the fish in the bucket before Mr. Trout was returned to the stream, because, even though an extraordinary feat, catching trout in a bucket is against the law. But it was none of Hunter's doing; he just went down to dip out water and Mr. Trout, who probably had turned down hundreds of costly flies, swam right into the bucket.

FAIR OPENING THREE WEEKS FROM TO-DAY

Preparations Being Speeded Up To Get Everything in Readiness.

BETTER THAN EVER.

Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, Will Be Present.

Three weeks from to-day the major annual event in the life of the Electric City—the Peterborough Exhibition—will be launched, and for the ensuing week the grounds at Exhibition Park will take on a gala appearance. In those three weeks there will be a general speeding up of preparations, with the result that the grounds and buildings will be ready to handle the thousands of city and country people who come to see the best Exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa.

Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, will be the guest of the Exhibition Board on Thursday afternoon, when he will inspect the grounds and all the exhibits. According to the showing made on that day will depend whether the Board will get a grant from the Ontario Government. It has been suggested that the stores of Peterborough close on Thursday afternoon so that the employees may attend the Exhibition. In former years the stores have always remained open, with the result that the employee always had to attend at night.

"Is the Exhibition going to be good?" "Will it be any better than last year?" "Will there be anything new?"

These are the questions that are most frequently heard on all sides.

Well, to begin with, Cervonne's crack band that created such a favorable impression last year, will be back in better form than ever to render two concerts daily. According to William Knox, managing director of live stock, the classes will be filled and there will be much stronger competition this year than last. New classes have been opened up and much of the best stock in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec will be on exhibit. Then there will be the jumping horses from Toronto which entertained so many last year.

Music will be one of the features. In addition to Cervonne's celebrated band from Pittsburgh, assisted by Miss Winnifred Joyce, soprano soloist, bands have been engaged to present programs both afternoon and evening on the band stand inside the George street entrance. Bert Caldwell, Toronto's famous baritone, will also present popular song num-

FIRE DESTROYS BARN AND CROP

Albert Carroll of Downeyville, Loses Heavily This Morning.

THRESHER BURNED.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOWNEYVILLE, Aug. 20.—A fire which totally destroyed the barn and season's crop broke out in the barns of Albert Carroll, about eleven o'clock this morning. The men were threshing alsike at the time, and it is believed that a spark from the mill was the cause of the sudden outbreak. So fast did the flames spread that the alsike mill was destroyed, and Mr. Carroll was scorched when he saved three bags of alsike from the flames. These bags of alsike were all that was saved from the fire. Some insurance is carried.

This blaze recalls memories of several years ago, when Mr. Carroll suffered a similar loss by fire.

Searchers Fear Men Away

Belief Spreads That Bandits Have Left District and Crossed Border.

BONDS RECOVERED.

Police Now Incline to Opinion That Robbery Was Two-Man Job.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Aug. 20 (Special to The Examiner by Staff Reporter, Copyright).—Bonds stolen by the bandits who robbed the mails being carried by the C.P.R. Vancouver to Toronto train on Saturday, were found near here.

Inspector Alex. Gibson of the post office and his men are at the spot where the bonds were found, but he has smade no statement as to the serial numbers or value. It is understood that the bonds were found yesterday.

The belief is spreading about the district that the hunted man, or men, are no longer in the bush but have escaped and are already across the border. Police admit that this is possible.

Seven reports have come into police headquarters from different sections of the district that the bandits have been sighted. Police have been rushed out on each of these calls, but so far without success.

This afternoon a report that may have foundation came in from Gull Lake, several miles northwest from the scene of the Jackson shooting, to the effect that suspects were spotted in the bush there. Inspector Putnam dispatched two men at once. No word has come in from there yet.

It is possible for a man to live for weeks in the bush near here. Berries of all kinds are to be picked in abundance.

Several Theories

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Reinforced by additional men and armed to the teeth, Provincial Police continue to search for the bandit or bandits at large in the rough country near Waubamick, who took part in the mail robbery on the C.P.R. trans-continental train near here Saturday morning. John Burowski, a Pole, is held by the police in connection with the robbery and the murder of Thomas Jackson, who was shot when the robbers were cornered after the stole near in which they fled from this city went into a ditch.

Several theories are held by the police, who now think that the robbery was engineered by only two men. It is though possible that the men parted when the car went into the ditch after a dispute as to which route should be taken.

Claude and Allen Jackson, sons of the slain man, are among the most assiduous searchers.

CAR UPSETS; TWO INJURED

Peterborough Women Hurt When Rim Comes Off Car Wheel.

NOW IN HOSPITAL.

PORT HOPE, Ont., Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. S. Dunn and Miss Lillian Nokes, of Peterborough, are in hospital here, suffering from injuries received when their car turned turtle on the Provincial Highway two miles west of Welcome, at six o'clock Sunday evening. The rim came off one of the rear wheels of the auto.

Mrs. Dunn is suffering greatly from shock and many minor cuts and bruises. Miss Nokes is severely cut about the knees and elbows. Mrs. Nokes is suffering severely from shock, and A. N. Nokes, who was driving, and W. Cross, also of Peterborough, escaped injuries. The car was badly smashed.

Girl Injured.

A young lady was taken to hospital as the result of the turnover of the automobile in which she was riding with four other people on Saturday night. She was unconscious on entering the hospital, but no serious consequences are expected.

The accident happened when the car turned completely over on the Chemong road about eleven o'clock.

STABLE BURNED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Aug. 20.—The stable on H. Falkner's property on Concession street was slightly damaged by fire on Sunday afternoon. The cause is unknown but the blaze started from the outside. Through the generous response to the fire alarm and the prompt arrival of the chemical engines very little damage was done.

MILLBROOK MAN DIES SUDDENLY

H. R. Armstrong Is Found Dead In Berth On Train.

NEAR SUDBURY.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Aug. 20. — Word was received by Reeve W. T. Wood from North Bay on Sunday evening, stating that H. R. Armstrong, a prominent and life-long citizens of this place, had been found dead in his berth on the train while returning from a trip to his property in the West.

As Mr. Armstrong failed to appear on Sunday morning, when all the other passengers were on hand for the day, the conductor went to his berth and found he had passed away during the night, heart trouble being evidently the cause. Mrs. Armstrong had expected her husband's arrival home on Monday. He was apparently in his usual good health when he left on his western trip less than a month ago.

Surviving are his widow, and seven children, the youngest only a few months old; his mother, Mrs. A. T. Armstrong, who made her home with the deceased; one brother and four sisters.

Dr. H. A. Turner wired the railroad superintendent at North Bay receiving information that the body would be taken off the train at Chapleau, and prepared for burial; from there it will be sent by C.P.R. to Cavan station, reaching here probably by Tuesday evening. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

Mr. Armstrong was about fifty-five years of age; he had conducted a music store here for several years, and was the local ticket agent for the Canadian Pacific Railways. News of his death came as a great shock to the entire community.

REST OF PRIZES ARE AWARDED

GARDEN LIST CLOSES.

Three of those whose flowers were broken in the fall when a shelf gave way under the weight of part of the gladiolus exhibit, brought other spikes to decide second place in Class 13. All were well worthy of a prize, and the award was finally made to a handsome pink spike, shown by Mrs. N. Andrews. To the other two were given a special by the judges, which takes the form of a 50 cent value in plants of iris or peonies, given by Mr. J. H. Callender. The owners of the spikes were Mr. East and W. Mantell..

In Classes 10 and 14, owners of the winning spike were: Class 10, W. Mantell, and in Class 14, N. Andrews. All entries in the lawn and garden competition must be in today, as the list closes to-night. They may be left at or mailed to Secretary, Horticultural Society, 139 Simcoe Street.

BELIEVED LINER IS LOST AT SEA

PANAMA CITY, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press). — Reports that the steamer William S. McKinney was lost with 14 men during a storm off California coast, gained credence here yesterday when the motor ship Santos, of the Johnson line arrived and reported losing Second Officer Karl Tsachon, who was washed overboard during a heavy sea encountered off the California coast.

The accident occurred on August 9 about midnight and the second officer's presence on the deck, while the storm was raging was unknown to the others of the crew and he was not missed for some time.

The fury of the elements was so great the captain said, that the ship's engines had to be stopped, as the Santos drifted helplessly until the storm abated the next day.

LADIES' AID HOLDS SOCIAL

Many Branches From District Take Part in Affair.

AT WARSAW.

WARSAW, Aug. 20. — (Examiner Correspondence). — The United Church Ladies' Aid pot luck social on Tuesday afternoon on the church lawn was quite a success. Carmel aid was not represented but Zion, Bethel and Warsaw were. The afternoon's entertainment started by the singing of several folk songs. There were several games, among them, shoe races and French tag. The pot luck tea took a good deal of time and caused much merriment.

The regular meeting of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid was held at Mrs. Henry Clements' home on Thursday afternoon. After the usual opening excices there was knitting and sewing. Mrs. Clements served a dainty lunch and those present enjoyed a pleasant social half-hour.

Mr. MacIntosh spent Wednesday with friends at Fenelon Falls.

SHOWER IS GIVEN AT HALL'S BRIDGE

Social Evening Held In Honor of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Wilson.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HALL'S BRIDGE, Aug. 20.—A delightful social evening was held in honor of Mrs. Aubrey Wilson (nee Lorrine Pearson) at the home of her brother, Mr. Howard Pearson, Sixteenth Concession of Smith Township, on Friday, August 17. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson returned from their honeymoon, which they spent in Oshawa, to attend the party arranged in their honor, and which took the form of a shower.

The number of guests present was about one hundred, and the affair was one of the largest which has been held in this vicinity for some time. The newly-married bride and groom were the recipients of many handsome and useful and practical gifts.

Friends of the bride, the Misses Irene Northey, Genevieve Armstrong, and Margaret Northey, prepared an address to be read to Mrs. Wilson, which read as follows:

To Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Wilson.

Dear Lorrine and Aubrey,—It is with the heartiest feeling of goodwill and congratulations that we, your friends and acquaintances, have met here to-night. As neighbors we have been reminded many times of your spirit of kindness and helpfulness.

We felt that we could not let you set out on this greatest of all undertakings without reminding you how much you will be missed in our little community.

You, Lorrine, have always taken an active part in our Sunday School, our league and our choir, as well as the part you both have taken in our community life.

In conclusion, we ask you to accept these gifts as a tangible proof of the high esteem and appreciation of your work and services amongst us.

These gifts as you use them, will be the means of linking you in loving association with the givers, and may serve as gentle reminders of pleasant associations in the past.

We all join in wishing you a long, happy and prosperous journey through life and may God's richest blessing be the crowning success of your lives.

Signed on behalf of the community,
Irene Northey,
Genevieve Armstrong.
Margaret Northey.

Among those present were: From Hall's Bridge—Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson, Messrs. Mac and Carl Wilson, Miss Alice Wilson, Mr. James Irwin, Misses Claire and May Irwin, James Fulton, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dever. From the Sixteenth—Misses Greta and Algine Trude, Grattan Nicholls, Miss Mary Nicholls, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Junkins, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Sage, Mr. and Mrs. John Northey, Mr. and Mrs. Cy. Bluett, Misses Irene and Margaret Northey, Miss Genevieve Armstrong, Mr. John Pearson. From Lakefield—Mr. Donald Dever, Mr. and Mrs. J. Crapp. From Lakehurst—Mr. Fred Clarkson. C.G.I.T. GROUP HOLDS SOCIAL

GAMES ENJOYED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, August 20.—Mrs. H. A. Earle and her two daughters, the Misses Marian and Martha Earle, were hostesses for a most enjoyable social gathering of the Wide Awakes C.G.I.T. group on Thursday afternoon, when more than thirty of the members and their friends met for the outing.

The wide lawns of the hospitable home on the Fourth Line, Cavan, made an ideal gathering-place for the young people, and though the extreme heat rendered any strenuous exercise uncomfortable until the later hours of the afternoon, the social side of the outing was one of its most enjoyable features. There were two new members to be welcomed to the group, daughters of the parsonage, the Misses Frances and Beatrice Jones, with their guests, the Misses Opal Walkey and Ina Bowen, of Warkworth; and others of the girls had visitors also.

Gathering under the shade of the trees, and taking advantage of any wandering breeze that drifted by, the group listened to a story, "How Miss Margret Was Kept" read by the leader, the tale carrying its own lesson and taking the place of the Bible talk which usually features any C.G.I.T. meeting. The regular meetings do not begin until September, and it is hoped to have the next outing in the form of a bacon supper at the Grove within the next two or three weeks.

Games of various kinds, that did not demand too strenuous exercise, were played, and a number of snap shots taken of the group, before the tea hour, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. W. W. Jones, Misses Elsie Spence and Marian O'Brian assisting the hostesses in preparing the meal.

The table for tea was laid on the lawn at the side of the house, late summer flowers being used as floral decorations, and the menu containing as one of its outstanding items a big freezer of ice-cream, freshly made by the hostess, and decidedly appreciated by the hungry guests.

After supper a game of softball took place in a field near the house, and races were run off on the lawn, a game of 'musical chairs' in the big living-room being the concluding item in a delightful afternoon's program.

The formal vote of thanks to Mrs. Earle and her daughters, was moved by Miss Wilma Fallis, secretary of the group, and seconded by the 'herald', Miss Dorothy McDowell, the resounding applause showing appreciation of the other members of the jolly crowd. Mrs. Earle replied briefly, extending an invitation to again visit her home at another date.

FORD PLANE OUTPUT WILL BE TRIPLED

DETROIT, Aug. 20. — Production of tri-motor Ford airplanes will be tripled in the near future, the company announced.

The present production schedule is one plane a week. Orders have been so numerous recently that increased production is necessary, the company stated.

Last May the production was increased from two planes a month to the present schedule.

A tri-motor plane costs about $50,000.

89-Year-Old Woman Looks After 'Spuds'

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Aug. 20.—Mrs. John Hughes, now in her eighty-ninth year and the oldest resident of Sharbot Lake, has always had a fondness for the potato patch. Since living in this village for the past three years with her niece, Mrs. Robert Bruce, she has in each season, dug potatoes in the latter's garden and also done a share of the peeling. Seeing that a potato stalk was shooting up outside the back kitchen door, Mrs. Hughes decided to apply the discard of the daily peeling to the roots with the result that the stalk has reached the height of sixty-six inches and is still growing. Mrs. Hughes also declares that this potato water induces growth of pot plants.

'BOSSY' GILLIS IS WRONG AGAIN; FACES 90 DAYS IN JAIL AND FINE

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Aug. 20.—"Bossy" Gillis, Newburyport's redoubtable mayor, Saturday faced the possibility of jail sentences totalling 90 days and fines aggregating $340 for operating his gasoline filling station without his city council's okeh.

He has been summoned to appear next Wednesday on charges of illegally storing inflammables, unlawfully digging up sidewalks, and unlawfully changing the grade of a city thoroughfare.

All these charges, and several more scheduled to be made, were based on "Bossy's" action in establishing a filling station earlier last week without awaiting an official permit.

Although no official announcement has been made, it was rumoured Saturday that Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner might investigate the situation which "Bossy" has created by defying the city council. The attorney-general was understood to be studying the case.

"Bossy," who would rather fight than eat, showed ill-concealed elation when he learned that the summonses had been issued.

For two hours he waited impatiently at his new gasoline station for the summonses to be served. Finally he despatched a mayoral emissary in an automobile to give the summons-server a "lift." After the papers, demanding his court appearance, had been served, "Bossy" said:—

"This jam is going to bust somebody high, wide and handsome. Maybe it'll be me. Maybe it won't. Anyhow we'll damned soon see."

RESCUED FROM NORTHLAND

Andy Taylor, Timmins, Ontario, prospector, was rescued from the shadow of death when searchers found him Tuesday near Burntwood Lake, Northern Manitoba, exhausted and almost starving after having wandered for 448 hours in the densely wood country north of The Pas. Taylor was prospecting with two companions seven weeks ago when he left camp to go to a creek for water. When he missed his way back, and his companions were unable to find him, the terrifying ordeal was begun which ended when Fred Coleman, a Cobalt prospector, and Captain Kenyon, pilot of a search plan sighted him in his struggle through the woods. The aeroplane carried Taylor to The Pas. This photo was taken some years ago. Photo copyright.

THE WEATHER

METEOROLOGICAL OFFICE, Toronto, Aug. 20.—Pressure is fairly high over Saskatchewan, also over the Great Lakes with a trough of low extending from the Lake Superior district to the Southwest States. The weather has been fair and cool in the Western Provinces and moderately warm from Ontario eastward with showers in the Maritime Provinces.

NOTHING HEARD FROM AVIATORS

No Reports Heard From Monoplane Attempting Flight To Greenland.

STATIONS ON LOOKOUT.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—No news had been received at six p.m. from the Hassell plane which is attempting a flight from Northern Ontario to Greenland. Federal Government radio stations at Wakeham Bay, Port Burwell and Belle Isle Strait have been listening in for some news of Hassell and his companion in the plane Greater Rockford for many hours. The Belle Isle station, which is the logical point to get news from Godhavyn, has transmitted no news to the government station here, yesterday afternoon. The Department of Marine and Fisheries late yesterday was trying to get in touch with Julianhaab, on the southwest of Greenland, in the hope that the fliers may have come down in that vicinity. The wireless station at Wakeham Bay, which works on short wave lengths may be able to get in touch with the fliers or with somebody in Greenland during the night. The plane, flying without mishap, should have been in Greenland some time yesterday morning.

Woman Supervises Erection Of Home

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Aug. 20.—Initiative is shown by Mrs. M. Long, of Toronto, a former resident of Havelock. She came to Sharbot Lake about two months ago to arrange for the erection of a home there, and decided a month ago to take upon herself the supervision of the erection of a bungalow cottage upon plans drawn up by herself. Daily she appears on the scene to give instructions to the workmen employed by her. She expects thus to save considerably the cost of erection by contract.

Have You Contributed To the Memorial Fund?

Subscriptions Coming Daily, But Hundreds Expected Still To Come.

With work progressing satisfactorily on the Citizens' War Memorial in the erection of the granite, the bronze figures now at the station, the completion of Peterborough's handsome memorial is in sight within the next few weeks.

A large number of subscriptions to the fund have been received from citizens who were thankful for the opportunity of contributing, but hundreds of subscriptions expected have not been sent in which no doubt will come in due course. In order that a personal canvas is not necessary it is hoped that subscriptions will come in readily during the next week.

Any subscription is welcome from one dollar up. It was felt that every home in the city would care to contribute something in recognition of the faithful discharge of duty by hundreds of our boys who went overseas never to return.

Will you please be kind enough to send in your subscription during the coming week.

The house that advertising built

You've seen it. It's not large. Nor is it small. It's just comfortable. Every line of its architecture shows the hand of a master. It is built of splendid, lasting materials. From cellar to attic it is perfect. It is completely equipped with modern labor and time-saving devices—oil burner, washing machine, vacuum cleaner, electric irons, electric fans, etc. Everything needed to make living a pleasure is there.

It's the house that advertising makes possible. Everything in it from the asbestos shingles on the roof to the concrete foundation blocks is advertised—even the plan itself, made by a famous architect, can be bought for a nominal sum. And because so many people read the advertisements for the different things going into this house—because so many buy them—the price of this house is well within your reach.

TO HONOR THOSE WHO FELL.

Eleven years ago to-day (how long ago it seems!) the tremendous struggle for Hill 70 was in full swing, with the Canadians taking the leading part in scaling "unclimable" heights, blasting "impregnable" strongholds and defeating an "unbeatable" enemy.

It was a great victory, but Canada paid the price in flesh of her flesh left sleeping in the cemeteries that flank Lens and Loos, and in the bodies of her sons that will never be found amid the debris of double crassier and fosse eight. Can Canada ever forget?

To-day, eleven years afterward, Peterborough is nearly ready to complete a memorial to those brave fellows who stormed the heights and swept the valleys. Nothing can be done for them, nor can any power of money or prayer bring them back—would that it were not so!—but their memories can be cherished by a grateful citizenry and kept alive so that their sons and daughters and grandchildren, their parents and those who loved and lost, may proudly point to the civic emblem of that sacrifice.

"IF IT IS A GENUINE INTERVIEW."

With the Ontario Grain Pool The Examiner has no quarrel.

On one day recently a news dispatch from Toronto told the opinion of a prominent Toronto man on this pool as it was proposed to organize it in this district. That man is the chairman of the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade—a position sufficiently exalted to warrant his being heard on a question which so vitally affects the farmers of Peterborough district.

Then, in order to be fair to both sides in the controversy, The Examiner sent a reporter to interview the local organizer of the pool, and printed his statement in rebuttal of the Toronto dispatch.

On the front page to-day there is published a further declaration from the Grain Pool in which there is one statement which, while it has no merit as an argument against those who oppose the pool, is an insult levelled at the intelligence and good faith of the press.

"If it is a genuine interview" is the phrase objected to. The implication is, of course, that The Examiner, for those mysterious "ulterior motives" sometimes charged against newspapers, fabricated the interview in an effort to make news.

The plain truth is that The Examiner believes its readers are intelligent enough to choose their allegiance on any issue when both sides are placed before them. The Examiner does not seek to dictate their policies or business deals or religion or politics.

A few weeks ago several articles appeared reporting the great success of the pool in this district. Then a prominent man gave his opinion of the pool's worth to Examiner readers—which is the other side of the shield that the readers are entitled to see.

For the benefit of others who may be tempted to follow this mistaken idea of thinking news fabricated, The Examiner wishes to assure its readers that such unethical procedure is not thought of. The reporter would be hooted out of his profession who attempted such a thing, and the newspaper manufacturing news would quickly pass out of existence.

AN OLD IDEA COMING BACK.

There is to-day growing up in Peterborough, in common with all the rest of the civilized world, a new consciousness of the worth of an old truth. Service clubs such as Rotary and Kiwanis have their foundations sunk deeply into it; public men are recognizing its cumulative value; merchants are incorporating its spirit in their advertising.

It is the Golden Rule.

To many the idea of doing to others what they would like others to do to them is still nebulous. It sounds all right as an ideal, but they cannot see how it can be put into practice. It seems to them to be something modern, of which to beware. They might get into deep water in endeavouring to carry it into effect. And yet . . . .

Centuries before the Christian religion was established in the life of Christ the Golden Rule was already old. The Hindu declared, "The true rule is to guard and do by the things of others as you do by your own." The Buddhist said, "One should seek for others the happiness one desires for oneself." To the Zoroastrian it read, "Do as you would like to be done by." The Confucian enunciated it thus, "What you do not wish done to yourself, do not to others." The Mohammedan read in his Koran, "Let none of you treat your brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated." The Jewish version is, "Whatsoever you do not wish your neighbor to do to you, do not unto him."

And in the Christian world we say, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

How universal in its acceptance as a precept, and how exceptional in its practical application! The Golden Rule stands as an ironic monument to the unchangeability of an ideal through the ages, and to the changing nature of men who profess to follow it.

But hope is not lost. The Golden Rule is still imbedded in the mighty foundations of Christianity. Changes fit changing conditions, but foundations and fundamentals endure through all such evolutions. A leaf here, a leaf there, give evidence that the root is still brisk with the sap of life.

And some day there shall burst forth such a wealth of foliage that the world cannot withhold its surprise, in spite of the fact that those who will be most astonished by the success of the gardener are the only persons who can cultivate the tree.

IT IS A MATTER OF GOOD SENSE.

Almost all of us want to buy in Peterborough if we can do so without being penalized for our local patriotism.

There is no particular joy about buying out of town, where adjustments are hard to get and doubt always arises as to whether after all we have done well in our shopping.

It can be confidently stated that it is now not only possible to buy in Peterborough without loss—in price or quality—but even to buy to better advantage than elsewhere, if only we are willing to exercise proper discrimination.

The merchant with the old idea that business consists of getting as much and giving as little as possible is passing away. That is a losing game in competition with progressive dealers who are willing to sell at small average profits and trust to larger volume of sales to make it pay them.

Not because we are a newspaper, but because we believe in the logic of the statement, we state the conviction that the buyer cannot do better than patronize the merchant who advertises. That merchant is more responsible than the non-advertiser, because what he says about his goods is likely to criticism by so much wider an audience. Then, besides the increased dependability, there is a lowering of prices, due to the larger turnover of goods induced by advertising. This is a difficult proposition for the man on the street to understand, but an example will make it clear. Suppose a merchant invests $10,000 in stock, and sells the $10,000 worth of goods, he has had a one-time turnover. If he seeks 6 per cent. net profit on his capital, he must add that 6 per cent. to every individual sale.

If, however, with the same original investment of $10,000 he advertises to so good advantage that he sells $20,000 worth of goods in a year, he has had a two-time turnover, and in order to make 6 per cent. on his investment he need only add 3 per cent. to every individual sale. The result is a saving to the consumer.

Peterborough has hundreds of stores run by merchants who are progressive and honest. There is a wide selection offered the shopper for any article, and courtesy of those who handle the goods makes shopping here a pleasure.

It is not a question, therefore, of "supporting Peterborough stores," but a clear matter of common sense to buy wisely in Peterborough.

THE MUSIC OF THE HARVEST.

So many hazards have now been overcome that it is almost taken for granted that the Western wheat harvest will this year constitute a record by a considerable margin. An increase of 2,000,000 acres seeded would require a major setback to bring anything but a record; still, the colossal undertaking of the Western farmers must always face serious dangers and only when these are past is rejoicing in order.

The latest news is all favorable. Wheat is in head everywhere and is coloring; in a day or two the binders will be at work in all directions. Grain is too far advanced to be in serious danger from rust. There have been local hail storms and regional wet stretches, but, as a whole, the conditions have been excellent, and the talk is of a crop of 500,000,000 bushels of wheat, compared with 440,000,000 last year, and with 473,000,000 in 1923, the year of the greatest previous production.

Marketing problems will soon occupy the minds of leaders. Weakness of wheat for the past month gives some concern, and leads to fear that lower prices may be expected for the new crop. A difference of 10 to 20 cents per bushel is no light matter for the producer. At the same time, the wheat pool is strongly entrenched, even in world markets, with Canada the largest exporter of wheat among the nations. Experience and confidence should bring a good return through the selling organization which controls 60 per cent. of the crop.

The harvest as it becomes a reality is like music for the West, the golden stream of grain bringing enormous new wealth whose influence is felt everywhere. The farmer has the needful for all his purchases, his interest on borrowed money, something for payment on past debts, if any, perhaps something for luxuries before Christmas. Tradesmen feel the current of new money in bills paid, middlemen clip a fraction here and there and plan new expenditures. Manufacturers foresee enlarged markets, distant cities will realize increased employment. It is as a genial vitalizing fluid running through the nation's veins, for the wheat crop will represent about one-fifth of the new wealth of the entire Dominion from primary sources for the year. No Canadian can be indifferent to it.—The Globe.

AN OLD MAN'S AGE.
(London Free Press).

This is talked of as the age of young men, but, after all, there was never an age when the man of years was so much in evidence. On Wednesday Lord Balfour celebrated his 80th birthday. He is still hale and hearty and his word goes further than any man in the British Empire. In the last 18 years, since he reached 65, his achievements have made his reputation as one of Britain's great statesmen of history.

Clemenceau is 83, and "The Tiger" still largely sways French opinion. He was nearly 70 when he stepped out of retirement to save France at the most critical period of the war. Hindenburg was 80 when he was elected President of the German Republic. His ability and his driving force have done much to re-establish the Fatherland.

In Canada also, we are not without our elder statesmen. Sir George Foster celebrated his 80th birthday last year by touring the Dominion on behalf of the League of Nations. He spoke in London and addressed the Canadian Club at noon and a two hours' meeting in the interests of the league at night.

These lively, golf-playing old men of to-day have revolutionized ideas in regard to age, which, after all, is largely relative. The man of 40 is often older in reality than the man of 70.

LETTERS FROM AN OLD BANDSMAN

Through the courtesy of The Examiner, I was able last week to voice my opinion with regards to the formation of a Citizens' Band.

I would like to state my reasons, why I do not think a band of this description could materialize.

In the first place, and one of the most important items we must bear in mind, have we got the support of the various heads of our several factories here in Peterborough, and have we the support of our businessmen and council of this city? This support, I maintain, is very essential to the formation of such an organization and especially to the music-loving public of Peterborough. I am of the opinion as well as many others, that this city could furnish a band that the citizens could well be proud of, and I feel sure there would be no reason for sending to the States to furnish a band for our Exhibition.

Of course, there is another side to the question, and that is in the musicians themselves. There are a certain few who seem to think that because they are musicians and members of such a band as this, that they can negelct their work, and so put their superiors to a lot of inconvenience by staying away from their work and, as in other cases, the innocent have to suffer for the guilty. I am only speaking from past experience, and I do not see why we can expect the support and backing from these heads of factories if this sort of thing is allowed to go on. I think it is very hard on the bandmaster who wants to rehearse a particular program for some occasion to be told or phoned at the last minute to say his main soloists cannot get away from their work because their superiors are sick and tired of them losing time. Now this sort of thing can be remedied, and you would see that in the near future the support and backing would be forthcoming and, without the slightest doubt we could have one of the finest bands in Ontario and be able to take their stand in front of grand stand.

The Question Box

Constant Reader: Q.—Will you please tell me what books are used for tenth year at Montreal High School for Girls; also what subjects are taken up? Also for ninth year.

A.—For the information you require, write to Miss Lillian H. Hendrie, Principal, Montreal High School for Girls, University street, Montreal.

Enquirer: Q.—What is the origin, or who is the author of the following lines: "No pent-up Utica contracts our powers, for the whole boundless continent is ours?"

A.—The correct lines are:—

"No pent-up Utica contracts your powers,
But the whole boundless continent is yours."

They are a quotation from the "Epilogue to Addison's Cato," which was written for the performance at the Bow Street Theatre, Portsmouth, N.H., by Jonathan Sewell, (1748-1808), an American writer, lawyer and judge.

E.D.C. Q.—Is Sir Percy Girouard still alive? If so, where is he located?—

A.—Yes. He is residing at Holborough Cottage, Snodland, Kent, England.

Q. C. J. T.—If a team playing ball wins the first and every other game does it win consecutive or alternate games?

A. If you mean "every other game" in the sense of losing one and then winning one, the team wins alternate games. If you mean "every other game" in the sense of "all the rest", that is consecutive games.

Q. When did Lloyd George initiate the unemployment insurance scheme in Great Britain? Old Country.

A. In 1911.

A Thought

DRAGGING IN PAST TROUBLES

How easily we recount and how distinctly we remember the singularity unfortunate things of life.

Our early days were days of struggle. Later came some failures. Then a son blunders or a daughter is unhappily married. If we permit our minds to dwell on these past unpleasant situations, we naturally begin to get gloomy, and, in our depressed mental state, more miseries appear in anticipation.

We suffer from the past and we get morbid over the future, and by and by we wonder what this life is all about.

We forget our past joys, happy happenings, or pleasurable hours, but always place our old miseries in moth bags fearful lest they will be destroyed.

A good plan in life is to have a desire to remember to forget and an inclination to forget to remember.

It is to live twice when we are able to enjoy our past pleasant hours, and it is to die a lingering death when we drag into one present hour all the miseries and misfortune that have been experienced over a period of many years.

On the anvil of affliction, suffering shapes our sympathies as it smites.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ill., August 20. — Canadian Press. — Railroad forecasts that the September movement of domestic grain in the northwest will be the largest ever known led to lower prices on Saturday for wheat. The traffic officials were quoted as saying the northwest wheat movement to terminals has begun to start in earnest, and that two of the leading lines expect to haul a total of 240,000,000 bushels.

Closing quotations on wheat were ½c to 1-8c net lower, with corn at 1-8c to 1⅛c advance; oat unchanged to 3-8c off, and provisions varying from 15c decline to a rise of 8c.

Increasing the downward tendency of wheat values was news of auspicious harvest weather in Canada. More over advices at hand said that the United States wheat crop, the harvest of which is now virtually complete, except in the extreme northern and northwest sections has turned out better than expected, although some damage in the shook has been done; and in the for northwest high temperatures have caused more or less harm. On the other hand relative firmness of Liverpool wheat prices Saturday and increasing strength of the corn market were a sustaining factor at times to whether lowest prices of the day in the wheat market were reached. Speculative selling and dearth of general demand were much in evidence. Notice was taken, too, of slackness of export call for wheat from North America. Total purchases of wheat to be shipped to Europe amounted to only 500,000 bushels and included no United States wheat beyond a small cargo to go by way of the Gulf of Mexico. Meanwhile the Argentine government officially estimated the 1928 Argentine wheat acreage at 20,254,000 acres, compared with 19,706,000 acres in 1927.

Prices for September delivery of corn displayed notable strength and ran up at one time more than 2½c above Friday's finish, but then sagged off about 1c from th top as a result of profit taking. Chicago arrivals of corn to-day totalled only 66 cars and there were practically no country offerings of old corn. New crop months were somewhat responsive to the action of September and there were Nebraska complaints of widespread need of more moisture.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 20—(Canadian Press).—Wheat trading was extremely dull on Saturday's grain market and with practically no buying interest existing, the market eased off slightly. A range of about 1⅛c was seen in both the October and December futures and there were long periods when not a single trade was recorded. Final quotations were 1¼c to 1⅛c lower.

The absence of any export buying and the continued favorable news on new Canadian crops were the main bearish factors.

Official exports of Canadian wheat and flour for the year ending July 31 were 333,603,000 bushels or some 40,000,000 bushels more than were exported in the previous 12 months.

The Canadian Government report on crop conditions in Western Canada issued Saturday was just about what was expected by grain traders and farmers of the west. If the weather continues dry it is expected that threshing will commence at a number of points early next week.

With only a very small business done on the cash wheat section, no change was shown in spreads from the previous close. Trading in the coarse grains was also dull and except for some transactions in barley a small volume of business was transacted.

Barley prices were a fraction firmer.

Rye, oats and flax held stead.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 20. — (Canaian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:—

Demand—$4.84⅝—13-16.
Cables—$4.85⅝—3-16.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 20. — (Canadian Press). —Extreme dullness marked the export trade in grain here Saturday but a moderate amount of business was worked with local buyers in Canadian Western oats at steady prices.

A fair trade was done in spring and winter wheat flour and prices for all grades were well maintained.

The trade in all lines of millfeed was active under a good demand from local and United States buyers. The undertone to the market was firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were quiet and unchanged.

The undertone to the butter market continued easy and the trade was dull. Receipts were 3,615 packages.

The foreign and local demand for cheese showed a slight improvement and prices were firm. Receipts were 12,361 boxes.

Prices for all grades of eggs were well maintained under a fair inquiry. Receipts were 1,225 cases.

THE WOMAN SIBELLA - By FANNIE HURST

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"

THE Court was profound and benign about it. In such cases, there was not much argument. The woman, Sibella, was so obviously unfit to be custodian of a young daughter. The child herself, fantastically named Peola, by her fantastically-named mother, was, of course, the last one of all to comprehend what had befallen her. To Peola, aged eleven, thin, elfish, fleet, it would have been an abnormal world which did not contain a mother whose moods could range from the fondly idyllic to the satanic and stormy.

At eleven, Peola knew the whole strange octave of her mother's drug-crazed mind. She had even ferreted out with her elfish, nervous, eager eyes the furtive secrets that lurked behind pillows and pin-cushions and curtains in the dark furnished room they shared. Peola knew, without being able to name them, the sinister significances of the small glass phials and syringes and bottles of colorless liquid and strange, sweet smells.

SIBELLA was a mother of a thousand moods. She could be beautiful and languorous and caressing and seductive. She could be fierce and terrible and, it must be admitted, even abusive.

That was one of the troubles. The Children's Society had detected red marks along Peola's smooth little cheeks and black-and-blue pinch-spots on her arms. It is true that Sibella, in a vicious mood, had imprinted them there, but it is just as true that Sibella in seductive mood could kiss them away; could caress them away; could endear them away.

That was the Sibella who more than atoned to Peola for those brief moods of fury when the mother became something strange and terrifying and outside of herself.

Sibella was a mother of delightful possibilities of entertainment and diversion. Of understanding and imagination and intuition. A mother who, in her lucid minutes, hours, days, could captivate and hold her child's adoration; who, even in her moods of fierceness and cruelty, had Peola's loyalty and affection.

But to the Court, one major circumstance was obvious. Sibella was not the proper mother for her child. And Sibella, sitting crouched and frightened and heart-wrung at the sentence, feared to raise her panic-stricken voice, because she knew the truth of the indictments against her.

Peola sat with her feet dangling and her large, mournful eyes fixed on the adored figure of Sibella. In her fluttering little heart she knew that something terrible was happening. Something that tore at the very roots of the fascinating life she shared in the dingy room with her exotic and exciting mother. Something terrible had befallen these two. Sibella and Peola were about to be torn apart by the wise, the omniscient, the terrific hand of the law. The Court had decreed.

PEOLA was to be placed in a home, a benign institution created for just such exigencies as this, and Sibella was to be allowed to visit her daughter from time to time, but never again to subject her to the furies, the irascibilities and even the cruelties of a parent whose habits, whose appetites and whose morals had made her an unfit custodian for the child of her own being.

Sibella, in whose heart claps of thunder were reverberating, knew the righteousness of this verdict and dared not lift her voice. She knew the truth of her own unfitness, in her hours of malaise, to rear Peola. She knew she dared not trust herself, and that to struggle against this verdict would be cruelty to the child she loved far better than she loved her own distorted and fantastic life. So, out of the little back room, there passed Peola into the benign enough environment of the Institution.

What this change wrought in Peola was beyond even the child's own understanding. New defiances lifted their heads. She became capable of strange, uncontrollable tempers. She would cry half through the nights until the nurse in the ward she shared with a dozen other little girls carried her upstairs to what was known as the Infirmary, where the sounds of her weeping could not disturb the others. She became a creature of moods, of nostalgias that kept her sullen and irate.

Whatever ravages the week might have made into the resolves of Sibella, on that day she managed somehow to keep her mind clear and her eyes unfuddled. She continued to arrive on schedule with gifts for Peola.

It might literally be said that over a period of six years, here were two people eating out their hearts for one another.

EVEN on those days when her mother came to visit her at the institution, Peola was like a wild, shy young thing toward her. Afraid, suspicious, distrustful.

She was fearful lest this parent of hers for whom she hankered with a nostalgia that was as acute as a physical pain, might detect some of these yearnings. The craving and the loneliness that Peola experienced during the first month of this estrangement, even when she became a little accustomed to them, were like scars against the very substance of her heart.

When Peola awoke at night and began to cry in the darkness of the ward she shared with the other little girls, she was sobbing out her grievance against society; against the scheme of things which had made possible this separation between human beings united by the bonds that tied Peola and Sibella.

And on her part, it always seemed to Sibella that she was pressing her starved and haggard-looking eyes against a window pane; peering through the transparent barrier that divided her from her child. In her lucid moments, she realized only too well that the Court had been just and right in its decision; in her lucid moments, Sibella fought against the cravings and the appetites and vowed to qualify to be the mother of her child.

Sibella had a somewhat vague and hazy picture of the Future—a future that was to bring her and Peola together again. She would determine, over and over again, to make herself a fit guardian for Peola. Over and over again she would vow that she would leave alone the phials and paper packets that, she knew, had led to the necessity for the Court's decision.

Yes, in her lucid moments Sibella made brave determinations to qualify herself as a fit mother for Peola.

BUT the lucid moments became more and more fleeting and as the years marched on and Peola became a part of the institutional life of the asylum, the mother, who never once had failed the hours allotted to her for visiting, became more and more a haggard, a remote and almost a fearful creature.

Thursday was the visiting day and whatever ravages the week might have made into the resolves of Sibella, on that day she managed somehow to keep her mind clear and her eyes unfuddled. Somehow she continued to arrive on schedule with gifts for her daughter. With tearful anecdote, with hopeful plans for their future.

Every little garment that Peola wore was stitched by hand by Sibella during those furtive six days that elapsed between their meeting. If ever a shrine was set up in the heart of a human being, there was one in the heart of Peola for her mother and the mother's heart for Peola.

It might literally be said that over a period of six years, here were two human beings eating out their hearts for one another and yet, in the eyes of the law, Sibella was not fit to be a mother.

It is true that Peola was not an easy child to handle. She was wayward, sullen, moody and probably had some of her mother's tendencies toward the erratic. There was never a time in her early girlhood that she was not combatting forces that seemed stronger than herself; combatting them just as surely as her mother had fought off more sinister dangers.

When Peola was seventeen, she had acquired the trade of millinery and was ready to step out and earn her living. The dream that had somehow held the hearts and souls of the mother and daughter together was about to fructify. Peola was on the verge of becoming of age and the law could no longer keep them apart.

IT was about then that Sibella was found dead one morning in the dark little room she had occupied alone for so long, one of the dreadful glass phials in her hand.

So Peola emerged from the Institution alone; a dark, fiery, nervous, rather beautiful girl, who was, later on, to succeed in the wider aspects of her life.

There were within her cross-currents to be fought, bitter passions to be laid, struggles to be won. There was a perilous period in Peola's life after her emergence from the Institution when almost anything might have happened. Rebellion and turbulence and heartache were deeply rooted in her; years of separation, segregation and isolation in a crowd had left their stamp.

Even after Peola was old enough to realize the sorry tale that had been her mother's, that rebellion flared on. In time she was to conquer it. In time the normal fruits of a happy marriage were to be hers. And yet, in those years when her realizations were most complete and the home she had created about herself was one of sweetness and and light, Peola in her heart knew that in her life there had been one saving and motivating influence.

This influence was the woman who, after those six bitter years of separation, had died one morning in the back room of a lodging-house with a glass phial in her hand.

Building To Cost $50,000 To Be Put Up at C.G.E. Plant.

TO BE READY NOV. 1.

A building permit was taken out on Saturday afternoon for the erection of a paint shop building at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant by R. Sheehy and Sons. The new building will be known as Number 15, and will be 111 feet by 108 feet. It will have a basement and be one story in height. The basement will be 10 feet below ground and four feet above. The foundation will be concrete, 14 feet high and 11½ inches thick. The walls will be brick and steel, 23 feet high and 13 inches thick. Gypsum roofing will be used. The estimated cost is $50,000, and the date of completion is about November 1st.

CROSSES U. S. IN 19 HOURS

Art Gobel Makes Non-Stop Flight From Coast To Coast.

BREAKS RECORD.

CURTISS FIELD, Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Art Gobel landed here at 11.26 o'clock to-day after a non-stop flight from California which broke the existing record by almost six hours.

Gobel's time was 18 hours and 58 minutes. The best previous time was 26 hours and 50 minutes, made in 1923 by Lieut. J. A. MacCready and Oakley Kelly in an Atlantic to Pacific flight.

CLUB BUILDING IS RE-PAINTED

Painters Aplying Final Touches at Peterborough Club To-day.

Seated on their scaffold secured to the roof of the building by two large hooks, painters are rapidly finishing the painting of the Peterborough Club premises, corner of Simcoe and Water Streets. Within the past few weeks, re-shingling has been in progress as well as other repairs, and now the final coats of paint are being applied. With two tones of green covering, the upper woodwork, window sills, etc., and cream colored paint on the main brick parts, the building presents a refreshingly clean appearance.

SOCCER NOTES.

LAKEFIELD BOYS SECOND IN RACE

Don Fitzgerald and Clayton Ridpath Paddle in 20 Mile Race.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 20.—Word was received in Lakefield late on Saturday afternoon that Don Fitzgerald and Clayton Ridpath, who entered the 20 mile marathon double paddling race in Toronto, had won second place in the race. The boys are real Lakefield boys and are carrying on the fame of the village as the home of experts in aquatic circles. We recall among others Bruce Ridpath, Reg. Blomfield and Braden Blewett, and a host of others who have won name and fame with Canada's own favorite craft and the roll of honour includes these young men who have done so well.

Campbellford

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20.—Dr. and Mrs. Earl Kingston and son Jack of Niagara Falls, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Kingston's mother, Mrs. James Dickson, Bridge Street.

The Rev. and Mrs. George Marsh of Wells River, Vermont, called on Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Diamond and other friends in town on Saturday. Mrs. Marsh before her marriage was Miss Jean Turnbull, and was a citizen of this town. During the war she served overseas as a Red Cross nurse, and later volunteered and was accepted as a medical missionary for work in Armenia. The Rev. and Mrs. Marsh are touring in Ontario this summer, and from here will start their return journey via Hamilton and Niagara Falls. They will arrive in Connecitcut in time to be present at the wedding of Mrs. Marsh's sister.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Patrick and family have returned to their home in Niagara Falls, Ont., after spending a two weeks' vacation with Mr. Patrick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Patrick, Bridge Street.

Miss Ethel Catherwood, who broke the world's high jump record at the Olympic Games, Amsterdam, is related to the great Ned Hanlan, famous sculler, to whom a statue was erected in Canadian National Exhibition Park at Toronto. The high-jumping queen's father was a cousin of Ned's and himself a great athlete. Miss Catherwood's brother is also well-known in sport as 100-yard champion of Saskatchewan. When she returns home from the Olympiad Miss Catherwood will visit her parents in Saskatoon for about three weeks and will then return to Toronto to complete her business course. She will likely take a position in the office of Teddy Oke, mining broker. ABOVE is the most recent picture of the Saskatoon Lily, taken at Amsterdam, and Ned Hanlan's statue. Joe Wright, Olympic oarsman, now overseas, posed for this memorial to Hanlan.

CHAPTER XLV

BRIEF RESPITE

Jennifer said nothing—there seemed nothing to say. She felt as if she were listening to stories of people whom she had known long years ago and almost forgotten.

Then Dolores asked, "What about yourself? What are you doing?"

Jennifer tried to laugh.

"Oh, I'm working again. I'm one of those people who cannot be idle, you know."

Pride would not allow her toadmit the truth; she felt she could not bear Dolores to know her position.

"And where are you living?" Dolores ked.

"Do you mind if I don't tell you? Don't think I'm not pleased to see you—I'm ever so pleased, but——"

"You're afraid I might tell Gaunt?" Dolores asked bluntly. "Well, perhaps I might. If you'll forgive me for saying so, I think you're a fool. Lord above, isn't life short enough any old way? And if you care for one another, who's to blame you if you make the best of what you can get?"

She glanced at her wrist watch.

"I must go. I've got an appointment in ten minutes. You don't mind me running away, do you? We must meet again!——"

"There's just one thing I want to ask you," Jennifer said hurriedly. "I hope you won't mind, but . . . your pearl necklace—you asked me to let me know if I ever wanted to sell it."

"Do you want to sell it?" Dolores asked sharply.

Jennifer's colour rose.

"It's not much use to me now. I don't go out a great deal, and I might lose it. If you would like to have it back——"

Dolores was silent for a moment, then she asked bluntly:

"Look here, are you hard up?"

"Of course not, it isn't that, but . . ."

Dolores gave a sigh of relief.

"I'm glad, because now you've mentioned the necklace there's something I must tell you. I'm ashamed I didn't tell you before, but I knew you'd got plenty of money, and at the time I was in a desperate corner. It was Buddy's trouble, not mine, and I had to help her. Jennifer, those pearls aren't real."

Jennifer stared.

"Not—real?" she echoed faintly.

"No." Dolores was defiant, although her eyes were ashamed. "It was a rotten thing to do, but I didn't know where to turn. They're just a copy. I sold the real ones years ago. Buddy's father gave them to me. Don't look at me like that, Jennifer. I'll pay you back the money some day, honest injun I will, but I can't now. I haven't got it."

Was there nobody true or honest in all the world?

"It doesn't matter. It's quite all right," she said with an effort. "I'm glad you told me. I'll keep them till you want them, of course."

Dolores rose; she looked greatly relieved.

"I must fly. Come and see me. I'm still in the same place. Goodbye. So glad to have met you again."

And she was gone, leaving Jennifer staring down at the check for the two coffees which the waitress had laid on the table.

For a long tme she sat there with a dreamlike sensation of unreality. She had been robbed of her only asset, even Dolores, whom she had called her friend, had played her false.

She paid for the coffees and went out into the street. She had forgotten all about the advertised job in the City.

A dilapidated looking old woman in an unspeakable hat followed her along the road holding out a box of matches in one thin hand and whining for money.

"I haven't had a cup of tea or a bite all day, lady. S'elp me, Gawd——"

She wondered whether perhaps some day she herself would be as poor and defeated, and then back came the insidious thought that there was always the river for unwanted people.

"Coward! you're a coward," she told herself contemptuously, but the taunt did not whip her to fresh courage.

What did it matter if she were a coward or not? Life had defeated her. In the morning she sent the pearl necklace back to Dolores in a registered parcel.

But for a few days longer she struggled on, meeting only with fresh rebuffs and disappointments, till one desperate night, after paying her hotel bill for the week, she realized that but for three pounds and a few shillings, all her money had gone.

She had some trinkets which could be sold, and her clothes, and after that——

"There's always the river," she told herself again, and now the thought brought no sense of shame with it, only comfort.

She had eaten no food all day and she had not slept properly for nights. Her head ached with a dull, nervous pain, and every pulse in her body seemed labored.

"What can I do, what can I do?" she asked herself feverishly, and always there seemed but one reply—the river!

She dared not go to see Dolores, although half a dozen times since their meeting she had passed close to the flat, driven by sheer longing for sympathy and companionship, but always at the last moment her courage failed her and she could not go in. In spite of their past friendliness, she felt that Dolores would have but little time for her if she knew the whole truth of her changed circumstances.

Dolores worshipped success and prosperity, or at least their semblance.

And then one night the thing happened which she had most dreaded. She saw Nicholas Gaunt.

It was a warm evening in early October, and the dread of her own companionship and the stuffiness of the Bloomsbury Hotel had driven Jennifer out of doors. London was waking up from its summer lethargy, people had returned from their holidays.

The trees in Bedford Square had already begun to shed their leaves, and the damp, acrid scent of autumn was in the air. There was a red carpet and a striped awning stretched across the path from the door of a brilliantly lit house, and as Jennifer drew near a big car glided up to the curb, and Nicholas Gaunt got out.

He was in evening dress and the light from a street lamp fell full on his face as he turned to give his hand to his wife, assisting her to follow him.

He did not glance towards Jennifer, and she stood with her heart in her eyes, staring at him, her hand pressed to her lips as if to keep back the stifled cry that seemed to rise from her very soul. He had not changed, so she told herself with a pang. No doubt his life was going on in just the same way, without a thought for her. Edith was wrapped in a soft grey coat of some fuzzy material, and beneath it the sheath-like folds of a silver frock flashed in the light as she went on into the house followed by her husband.

Jennifer's straining eyes followed them till the door opened and closed again behind them, then she walked on.

She went back to the hotel, undressed and crept into bed, but sleep would not come.

All her thoughts were of Gaunt and with him. When she closed her eyes she seemed even more clearly to visualize his face and his figure. The way he brushed his hair back from his forehead, the line of his cheek and chin. The breadth of his shoulders, and his loose-limbed careless walk. She knew them all so well, and for hours she lay there in silent torture, fighting the desire to go back to him, trying to persuade herself that it would be worth any cost, any sacrifice to know his love again.

But he had not tried to find her, apparently he had not raised a hand to try and discover what had become of her.

In the end she made a weak compromise with herself.

"If nothing comes for me in the morning, I will go back to him. Even if we are only happy together for a little time it will have been worth while. If nothing comes for me in the morning, I will go back to him."

But in the morning there was a letter from one of the many agencies to which she had applied so many times offering her a temporary post to travel to Switzerland with a delicate child, and to stay there for the winter.

"If you will call at this office tomorrow at eleven o'clock, Mrs. Webber will be here to interview you."

Jennifer almost laughed as she read the letter. At the eleventh hour her luck had changed; at the eleventh hour when she had promised herself the happiness she craved.

It was with no hope of success that she climbed the dusty stairs to the office of the agency; she was sure that only fresh disappointment awaited her.

Twenty minutes later she heard herself being engaged.

"Of course, subject to satisfactory references."

Jennifer flushed crimson.

"I am sorry. I can give no references. I have never done this sort of work before." There was a tragic appeal in her eyes and in her voice. "But I give you my word of honour that I will do my utmost to please you, and to take every care of the little boy."

Mrs. Webber was a careless woman, and she was not the child's mother, but only an aunt, and as she was tired to death of interviewing people who expected better references from her than she did from them, she wavered and was lost.

"Of course, I can see you are a lady, and . . . most truthworthy. If I ca

Tears rose to Jennifer's eyes.

"I assure you, you shall never regret it," she said, and was thereupon engaged.

The little boy whom she was to look after was the only child of parents in India, and had been sent home on account of his extreme delicacy.

"His mother has lung trouble," Mrs. Webber told Jennifer carelessly. "And the child takes after her. He was unwanted, too, by the way."

Jennifer's heart went out to him from that moment. She knew what it was to be unwanted.

"There's plenty of money, so you will travel everywhere in comfort," Mrs. Webber also told her.

She did not seem to mind very much what became of her nephew so long as she did not have to devote her time to him.

So Jennifer took Timothy Webber to Switzerland.

She left London without telling anyone, and for three months they lived up in the mountains above Lucerne, in a tiny Chalet Pension with only the wonderful air and the clouds, and the woman who kept the chalet for company.

But with Timothy she was never dull. In his frail body there dwelt the heart and mind of a Baby angel, and before he and Jennifer had been together many days he loved her as he had never loved his own mother. He told her all his strange little fancies, confident that she would understand. When the snow came, they drove about in a little sledge drawn by a small, bell-decked horse, and Timothy pretended that he was Father Chirstmas on his way from Iceland to England with presents for all the poor children.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE PARENT BIRD

There are two robins in our yard,
A mother robin and a father,
And my, my, my, but they work hard
And have a lot of care and bother.
They hunt the savage angleworm,
A baby robin's bread and butter;
While two young infants squawk and squirm
And many loud complainings utter.

The youngsters now are big and strong,
They fly with father, hop with mother,
Who still must furnish all the song
And all the food, somehow or other.
And lately I have noticed that,
Although the elders find the dinner,
The youngsters both are getting fat,
The parents both are getting thinner.

Yes; Father Robin's growing old,
And Mother Robin's gray of feather,
Yet all the youngsters do is scold,
They're quite ungrateful altogether.
And then some day, without a word,
They'll fly away to yonder steeple.
It's sad to be a parent bird—
I'm glad it's not that way with people.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE TRY TO BE SMART

By Meheza K. Thomson, Ph.D. Author of the Springs of Human Action.

Every one wants a reputation for being smart. What greater compliment can you pay a person than to call him clever? Some people would rather be thought clever than good.

One reason for the universal desire to be clever is that from our earliest days we are made to realize that the richest prizes go to the smart and the punishments to the dumb. Our mothers, our teachers, our playmates praise us for cleverness and do not hesitate to humiliate us when we are stupid. It is not to be wondered at that a great premium is placed on being clever. The world at large shows the same attitude. On every hand social pressure is on the side of the bright and clever person. The great rewards of life, all the plums, go to the quick-witted.

There was a time when brute strength counted for a lot more than it does now. Today wit wins over strength and brain over brawn. In any worthwhile contest the clever fellow wins over the stupid person and the dullard.

In addition to winning the plaudits of the crowd and getting the good things of life through cleverness there is a personal satisfaction in outwitting the other fellow in every activity. This may consist of getting a job, of buying a house, of playing a game of checkers, or of a word battle. There is always a give and take and we get a lot more satisfaction when we take the lion's share.

We come by this honestly. Life itself is a great contest of matching wits against the forces of nature and the environment in the struggle to live and get the most out of life.

In some people this desire for a reputation for cleverness carries them to extremes of dishonesty and possibly crime.

MOTHER OF SIX CHILDREN BENEFITED

Read how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Montreal, Que.—"I was very weak and unable to do my work. I could not sweep my house without sitting down three or four times and could not digest even water. For three years I could not get any relief and I was discouraged as I am the mother of six children. I read in the papers of the results obtained with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and resolved to take it. The first bottle gave me more strength. I took three bottles and now I am very well and do all my work without fatigue. I also gave it to one of my daughters who was very weak and I recommend it to all women. I will reply to all women who write me."—(Mrs.) Charles Lauson, 878 Sicord St., Montreal, Quebec.

Embarrassed by Dishpan Hands

Ill at ease . . . at her own dinner table

DICK'S 'chief' was pleasant and friendly, but I knew that he had the fastidious standards of a man of culture and wealth.

"I was so eager, as Dick's wife, to meet those standards.

"It was a little thing which upset me—just the merest change of expression on his face . . . I was pouring coffee, and for the fraction of a second his glance had rested on my hands.

"I knew my hands looked red and rough from housework and dishes—and knew he had noticed them . . . I became self-conscious, ill at ease.

"Foolishly, perhaps, I felt the evening was a failure.

"Now I know how NEEDLESS it was. Since I have been using Lux for dishwashing, for all cleansing my hands have to do—my hands are soft and smooth and white. I'm never embarrassed now by 'dishpan' hands."

So many soaps—whether flake, chips, or cakes—contain harmful alkali which makes the skin harsh.

There is NO injurious alkali in Lux! Made by a remarkable process—Lux actually SOOTHES the skin, leaves it a little whiter and softer than before.*

Dissolving instantly, before you ever put your hands in, a little Lux foams up into a mountain of suds—so rich, so cleansing, the dishes seem almost to wash themselves.

The big package of Lux washes six weeks' dishes. Lovely hands for so small a price!

Lux keeps lovely the hands that wash dishes

MRS. J. A. SEXSMITH GIVES ADDRESS

Reviews Work of Society at Meeting of Warsaw Women's Institute.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Aug. 20.—Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith, district president of the Women's Institute addressed the members of the Warsaw Institute at the regular meeting held on Friday afternoon. She began by speaking of the twenty-five years as a book with twenty-five characte acf book with twenty-five chapters, each year a chapter and each chapter mus; have contained something worthwhile or it could not have carried on so long. She spoke of the time and sacrifice to carry on, and that not by women of leisure but by busy women. Stressing the importance of Institute work as a whole, she said it had such a small beginning, but has grown so strongly and so rapidly. Other countries have copied and organized.

The Institute is not drifting, there is nothing sailors dread more than a derelict. It only does great harm, it has no purpose, accomplishes no good. There must always be some objective even if that objective be not reached, attempting it does good work. What is accomplished is not the only good of the Institute, the meetings together, and the interchange of ideas is perhaps even a greater good. If nothing is discussed but housekeeping it is good, for housekeeping is the greatest of all occupations, but here are others which should be studied—among them the man-made laws of Ontario especially those relating to women and children. Women should be well informed as well as men so many women are left helpless because they have never been bothered about business.

For our own lives Mrs. Sexsmith spoke of the companionship of books. Not so much fiction but real food for the mind. The Bible, Prof. Henry Dummond's books and many others. Busy as we may be the forenoon should see us take one half hour to feed our minds for the day. We take time for our breakfast, because we know our physical bodies need food. If we could only realize it, our home duties would be more easily accompanied if we took time to feed our minds and souls—better do without a meal. If we starved our bodies as we do our minds we would soon suffer and we do suffer just as much because of our starved minds.

Women on the farm seese so much to be done, they are apt to neglect what would really help. We do not force ourselves to read them. Mrs. Sexsmith also spoke of harmony. The Institute ode is a pledge of harmony. Think of 50,000 women who would not say an unkind word The greatest pleasures are often the thoughts of a few kind words. The greatest thing in the world if founded on love. Kindly work reaches out, and is ready in time of calamities. When the Great War came the Institute was already organized and ready for the necessary work, and it is ready to turn to anything that might happen.

"Give to the world the best you have and the best will come back to you." The speaker explained that she could not come on Thursday as Belmont Institute was holding a picnic at Blairton to which they had invited the Blairton ladies.

The report of the dinner of July 12 was read showing a balance of $62.21. It was decided to give $10.00 toward the school fair, to Mr. Nelson to use as he sees fit. It was also decided to apply for a nursing and first aid class with Miss Alexander as instructress.

The delegate to the convention will be asked to present the resolution that — Whereas, at present there are ten boys chosen from the county to attend the Winter Fair, who have their expenses paid we consider the girls should have an equal chance and suggest that the girls also be taken, or, if that be too many, five boys and five girls.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, September 13, Mrs. Cameron had kindly consented to address the members.

The message said Amundsen had been sighted several hundred miles east of France Joseph Land.

Enjoy AGAIN This Glorious Summer Breakfast!

YOU know Grape-Nuts. You know how you have enjoyed the nut-like, malt-sugar flavor of this famous food.

The Grape-Nuts flavor is always just as wonderful. Grape-Nuts is always just as popular. During the coming and going of countless other breakfast foods in the past thirty years, Grape-Nuts has remained continually popular. To-day it is sold in more parts of the world than any other breakfast food.

Perhaps you have not experienced the tempting flavor of Grape-Nuts lately. Try it to-morrow. There's no food finer for summertime breakfasts. Grape-Nuts, because it is made from whole wheat and malted barley, gives you these five precious elements of nutrition: dextrins, maltose and other carbohydrates for energy; iron for the blood; phosphorus for teeth and bone; protein for muscle and body-building; and the important vitamin-B. In addition, Grape-Nuts is one of the easiest foods to digest.

Your grocer sells Grape-Nuts in wax-wrapped packages. Four teaspoonfuls is a serving—less than one cent's worth. Eat it right from the package with milk or cream.

Grape-Nuts for Delicious Nourishment

Crispness! . . . for Healthy Teeth and Good Digestion

Ask your dentist what thorough chewing of crisp food means to the health and beauty of your teeth. Grape-Nuts is crisp, crunchy—a food you like to chew. Chewing is also an aid to digestion—it prepares the juices of the stomach for their work. In children it has an important part in moulding the facial contours.

Mr. and Mrs. Russel Howe, and two children, Peggy and June, and Mrs. G. E. Burnham are enjoying a motor trip to Ottawa and Montreal over the week-end, leaving on Thursday.

Mr. H. Jordan, assistant principal of the Continuation School, and his bride, were visitors in town over the week-end. Mr. Jordan has rented Miss Daisy Armour's home on Anne street for the year. Miss Armour expects to visit her sister at Calgary for the winter months.

Miss Orchard, of Port Perry, has been engaged as teacher of the intermediate room of the public school taking the place of H. J. Anderson, who resigned; and Miss Helen Hamilton, of Sault Ste. Marie, has been engaged as the third teacher on the Continuation school staff, replacing Miss Beswetherick, who also resigned.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sayles and family motored from Toronto and attended the sports' day at Pontypool on Wednesday.

The Sunshine Mission Band is holding its annual picnic at the home of the associate superintendents, Mrs. M. McDowell, next Wednesday, August 22, at 3 p.m. There will be a good sports program.

Misses Opal Walkey, and Ina Bowen, of Warkworth, are guests of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Jones at the parsonage this week.

Miss Marjorie Thompson of Little Britain, is the guest of her cousins, Misses Elinor and Margaret Fallis, this week.

Rev. P. C. and Mrs. Howard motored to Toronto and were guests of the latter's mother for a brief visit this week.

Mrs. (Dr.) Herbert Young, and baby daughter, are spending a holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baxter, Kingston.

Miss Elsie Weeks, of Toronto, a former Millbrook girl, has recently been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hilton.

The Millbrook Troop of Boy Scouts has returned after a pleasant and profitable camping outing near Gore's Landing, Rice Lake, under the supervision of Scout Master E. H. Barnes.

Other years the camping ground was at Barnard's Landing, but the change has been found satisfactory, and will probably be the site chosen another season. Camp craft and camp cooking have been among the things in which practical instruction has been given during the outing.

Among the officers in charge have been: Troop Leaders Eddie Nattress, and Burton Russell; Patrol Leader Gerald Raper; and for part time Assistant Scout Masters Lynden Russell, Robert Shaw, and Foster Russell have been at the camp.

T. W. McCamus has rented his farm, south of the village, to Melville Ball, and is coming to the village to reside having purchased the property of Mr. Rowan on Tupper street; T. J. Lang put through the deal, and also the sale of the former N. Janes' home on King street to Thomas Bradshaw, of North Cavan, who will take up residence here before the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Rowan intend returning to their farm at Bethany.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Acton (Gladys Gray) were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray, recently, while on the return trip from their honeymoon, and en route to their own home in Detroit.

Mr. J. Edgar Burnham, of Saint Petersburg, Florida, who has spent the past five weeks visiting his mother, Mrs. E. S. Burnham, is now with his daughter, Mrs. A. C. Darling, Chemong Park, for a two weeks' stay before leaving for his home in the south.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Platt (Kathleen Fowler) were week end guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Fowler, on the return trip from their honeymoon while on their way to their home at Belleville.

Mr. A. Grant, of Peterborough, who has been with Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wilson for a few weeks' stay, returned to her home recently, her husband, with their son and daughter, motoring over and taking Mrs. Grant back with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville McCorry of Cleveland, Ohio, have been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. McCorry.

Millbrook Fall Fair comes at an earlier date than usual this year, the officers and directors having decided that this would be in the best interests of the event. Monday and Tuesday, September 17 and 18, are the days chosen, and exhibitors are urged to have their entries in early. A larger and better prise list than ever is assured, and with good weather and the united support of the citizens in general, a record crowd, and a fair surpassing that of any previous year, will be the outcome.

elevators who contracted to handle Pool grain.

"Isn't it strange that in the Fall of 1927 quotations on new wheat started off just where the old crop price had been? When did farmers ever find that condition to hold good before the Pool was started? Then, when the rush of wheat deliveries came, there was no drop in price. Quotations remained firm and stable on the domestic market basis. This is as it should be. The domestic market should govern the Ontario price. It is quite evident that those who fear for the future of their own occupation set out to give the Pool a hard run the first year.

"Farmers need not worry over such despatches and such interviews. The outcome of nine county meetings held recently shows that the members are satisfied with the result of the first year of operation, that they got more for their grain than they would have got had there been no Pool, that the Pool system is the fair system for the grower, that the grower should control the marketing of his own product and that before the five years of the contract have passed growers throughout the Province will accept it as the most profitable system. The West has proved it. An addition of 2,000 new members in Ontario in new territory this year shows what Ontario thinks of it. New contracts arriving every day from territory that was organized in 1927 proves that the first year has been satisfactory regardless of what Mr. Kennedy has to say about it."

TRAVEL-LOG.

THE DURER EXHIBIT AT NUREMBERG

During the second week in April I was again in old Nuremberg, to see how an old German city could celebrate its most distinguished citizen, if for the moment we can give that title to Albrecht Durer, and pass by its other great one, Hans Sachs. Guests of honor were received at the Town Hall, including the diplomatic corps from Berlin, so that all countries were represented. At night the artists present celebrated with a fantastic torchlight procession to the base of Durer's statue. The chief event was the opening of the Durer Exhibition which will continue all this summer. It has always been my lament here to see so little of Durer's work; but at last it seems possible to view most of it, for contributions were received from the museums of Vienna, the Louvre, and the galleries of Rome, Milan, Florence, Venice, Bergamo, and from private collections in London and Manchester. Even the Metropolitan Museum of New York, loaned its Madonna and Child, which Durer painted in 1516. More than four hundred and fifty years have elapsed since the old goldsmith's wife gave birth to this famous son, and none dreamed when he died that such a day as I have seen would dawn; but such is the reward of those who love beauty and art.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Women of fashion have apparently not wearied of the deep back decolletage because there has hardly been an important showing of new clothes in Paris in which evening frocks of this type did not appear. But this does not mean that all evening gowns are cut high at the front. Don't imagine that as skirts have grown longer, bodice have grown higher—because nothing of the sort has occurred.

An interesting neck treatment I saw the other day consisted of a frock cut quite low both front and back with narrow shoulder straps. Then there was a chiffon scarf draped across the shoulders drawn straight across the front, so that while the upper part of the shoulders was covered there was a rather low decolletage below this.

Many of the newest evening gowns are made with simple straps across the shoulders and no flowers at all. There are the narrow fabric straps that tie or simply cross at the top of the shoulders. The sketch shows a left shoulder strap covered with a row of small roses, with two or three larger ones at the front.

Almost all the well known dressmakers in Paris showed much lace on the frocks in their recently displayed autumn collections. Cloth frocks are so often trimmed with collars, cuffs or gilets of lace that this use of the lace must be considered an outstanding detail of the new mode. Alencon, renaissance, hand embroidered batists with point desprit—these are the lacy materials used most often for such garnishes, and usually they are in cream or ecru, rather than in white.

Especially attractive are the backward flaring lace cuffs—like miniature butcher cuffs—that are found on some of the new dark frocks. Often these are placed on the sleeve an inch or more above the edge so that there is a close band of the dark material between the lace cuff and the wrist.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dear Marion,—I'm planning one of the parties Laura writes about on your interesting page. There's someone I like a lot, and I want to ask him to the party, but I don't know whether he likes me or not. What shall I do? I like your page a lot, and get lots of good ideas from it.

Very sincerely,
DIANE."

Unless he shows violent symptoms of dislike at sight of you; unless he grabs his hat and runs precipitately from your party, dance, or other gathering place when he sees you, or is seized with homicidal mania whenever you come near, it is safe to assume you are not distasteful to him.

Very well, then, ask him to your party in your most cordial manner, smile upon him like sunshine when he arrives, and let your words of greeting be honey-sweet.

If the poor darling is bashful, don't let him mope in a corner, but drag him forth and present him to every girl there, including wall flowers (the bashful ones get along well with wall-flowers). If you are wise you will flatter a bashful person; tell him how tremendously nice he is, and smart, and interesting, and "different" from all the rest. Tell him he mustn't DARE to be bashful—he, a regular wow of a person whom everybody is just waiting to fall for.

If you make him feel at ease he'll not only like you, but adore you and become your shadow

It's awfully nice of you to be so appreciative of the page—I'll pass on your kind remarks to Laura, and I'm sure she will be pleased. You know, Diane, a writer for anewspaper receives remarkably few compliments. If the stuff is good, people take it for granted, and if it is bad everybody writes to say so.

"Dear Marion: I haven't noticed any beauty questions in your column, but as you answer almost every other kind of query I'm taking a chance on asking what to do for lines under my eyes. Shadows come quite often, and the lines are there nearly always. Please tell me what will remove them.

Olga."

The shadows and lines under your eyes, Olga, indicate that you are not getting sufficient rest and sleep. You need eight hours every night. Or, if you are getting the required amount, your condition is one that needs medical treatment. Don't put it off.

"Dear Marion: How many courses should there be at a dinner, and what should be served?

Alice."

It all depends, Alice. Dinner may consist of anywhere from one to six courses (rarely more than that nowadays, although I have had twelve) but it often happens that the one course dinner actually offers more food than the many-coursed meal. It is simply a question of economy of service. In a maidless or one-maid household it is usually best not to attempt more than three courses — usually two is enough.

The prevailing idea in this country seems to be that whatever else you don't have for dinner you must have "meat and potato," although in that sense rice or macaroni or hominy may take the place of potatoes. Fish may take the place of meat, so also may hot egg dishes and other meat substitutes, but most persons expect meat for dinner.

There should be a meat or fish course a which potatoes or their equivalent are also served. In Canada it is customary to serve one or two vegetables with this course, though in France and sometimes here, vegetables come as a separate course.

After this course may come salad and then dessert, or just one of them. Before the meat course there is seldom but one other course, which may be soup or an appetiser, such as a fruit cocktail. The custom of serving appetiziers is spreading in this country. At formal dinners there may be a fish course between soup and meat. This is customary in England even for family dinners In some places (I have seen it in Peterborough) it is becoming more usual to serve the so-called salad course first, but when this is done it should be served in rather small portions which are regarded as an appetizer.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

WE SOMETIMES HEAR it said that the eighteenth century belonged to man and the nineteenth century to woman. We might go on and call the twentieth century that belonging to the child, for the child now has a separate claim on society for certain basic rights Just think how modern that statement is. Parents have obligations, children have duties, but it is only recently that children have had legal rights.

• • • • • •

In matters of health, in matters of education, in matters of preparation for life, society demands that there be certain standards that intelligent people shall reach. Now-a-days it is not possible for parents to decide whether or not they shall take notice of a disease that one of their children may have. They may not decide whether or not their children shall learn to read and write and to do other things that are the minimum of education required. These questions are decided by the laws of the province and parents have to measure up to them and the children have things done for them without the intervention of their parents.

• • • • • •

The social body has a large influence over the life of the child and a great amount of the care and protection of the child is withdrawn from the family. The social standard has changed for both the parent and the child.

• • • • • •

Now that we are on the theme of 'children' my thoughts turn to a certain boy who has arrived at the age where he realizes that we must some day say goodbye to this vale of tears. His mother very wisely has passed over the morbid possibilities of this topic and has shown him the other side of it in a simple way that he may understand. The beautiful flowers that have been produced from dry, hard bulbs; the lifeless-looking beans that are left to soak in a saucer of water and soon uncurl marvelously large wing-leaves; the appearance of cunning little tadpoles from a mass that promised so little, are the things that the child should rely on and are what he can understand. Birth from seemingly dead things; new life from cold, hard quiet, the appearance of wonderful things when no outcome seemed possible—these are the meanings that one boy received from object lessons a wise mother demonstrated.

• • • •

It may be a little late to speak of bathing suits but have you seen the cunning little sun suits for small children. A mother who makes her childrens' clothes made one of these suits for her three-year-old. It is of red jersey with a bib topping the shorts and straps crossed at the back passing over the shoulders to the top of the bib.

• • • • • • •

Here is one of the questions put by a young man of two to his mother: "Mother, can a fly sit down?" We leave you to answer that one yourselves.

• • • • • • •

These white shoes are all very well to look at but the owner of such things usually hesitates when buying for the reason that cleaners don't stay on. There is a certain cleaner a shoeman told me of that clings to buckskin, canvas or suede and I am sure it will be most welcome to wearers of white footwear.

• • • • • • •

A bride of our city has furnished the bedroom of her home in the French modern style with its extreme simplicity. The top of the mirror is a curve, the beds also have curved heads but very low, straight ends at the foot. The little half-moon stool that stands before the dresser is in harmony with the rest of the furniture.

• • • • • • •

Curtains drape the closet doorway in a shirred crossed effect while those at the window consist of straight glass curtains with a futuristic appearing over drape graduating in steps from the top diagonally to the floor.

• • • • • •

I forgot to tell you that the dresser of this suite has the drops that we associate with the dressers or rather, bureaus, of our grandmothers' time. The drops in this case are of ivory and there are diamond shaped inlays in the dresser as well.

• • • •

A lamp that would be in keeping with the feeling of the room I have been telling you of was seen in a den in a south end home. It consisted of a base in the form of a ball with a slender standard supporting an inverted cone with six sides. I suppose if I were to think back to school days that wouldn't be a cone with its six surfaces. However, the lamp was charming, even if it did give me a first impression of a problem in geometry.

• • • • • • •

The inducement to use this furniture that I am putting last but by no means least is the fact that it is a Made-in-Canada product. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if Dr. Craig were to have an exhibit of this firm's products at the Kiwanis Fair in the fall.

• • • • • • •

Forgive me you single readers of the Whatnot if I seem to run to children and brides this time—you shall have your turn. I just want to tell you all of an arrowroot that was served at a child's party at Jackson Park. The youngsters were all asking for doughnuts and I thought that seemed an innnovation at childrens' parties. When I saw the 'doughnuts' I didn't wonder, they were the arrowroot biscuits with a hole in the centre. I understand that they have added two new ingredients to the biscuits—malt and lime—these being beneficial to children.

The Silhouette of Moderate Line

Floral patterns are especially modish in the new printed materials, and the simplicity of this attractive design lends itself to the development of this graceful afternoon frock of interesting cut. The back is straight and slender, while the front displays the jumper effect. There are two rows of fine shirrings at each shoulder, and the right front is cut with a jabot and fastens over the left with large buttons. A group of shirrings at each side of the skirt front contribute extra fulness, and the long full sleeves are shirred to fit the wrists and finished with a narrow cuff. No. 1282 is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 bust requires 3¾ yards 39-inch, or 3 yards 54-inch material.

Every woman's desire is to achieve that smart different appearance which draws favorable comment from the observing public. The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are originated in the heart of the style centers and will help you to acquire that much desired air of individuality. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

AT THE CROSS-ROADS.

By A. W. Peach.

Barton Ellis looked with somber eyes through his office window at the tall building beyond the square, with his thoughts on the problem before him. He knew that he had come to the crossroads, and the road that invited him was not the road that he wanted to take.

In line with his gaze was the dark hair and round cheek of the girl who was worth far more than the meager salary he had been able to pay her from his lawyer's income. She had been faithful to him; and a quiet comradeship had grown up between them until the thought of losing her had become a constant worry to him.

He turned to the papers on his desk. The estate which had been in his care was to be settled. He had handled it so well that it had yielded $10,000 more than anyone would suspect. By omitting that account from his papers, the $10,000 would be his, and no one in the world would ever be the wiser. With that money he could place himself in a position that would bring more opportunity, end his present hand-to-mouth struggle and make possible, perhaps—a home, and in spite of himself he glanced at the dark head and watched the white, capable fingers busy over his letters.

He withdrew from the papers in front of him a set of three, and folded the others into the envelope. The perspiration broke out over him, and he wavered; then he sealed the envelope. His foresight had made possible the thousands. They would be his.

"Time to quit, Ruth. Suppose we go to dinner together," he suggested.

She looked up with a smile from eyes over which the long lashes laid their darkness. "Just three more lines, please," she said, "and I'll be ready."

Outside the building they turned in the direction of a favorite restaurant. On the way he came to a mail box, and he held the long envelope ready to drop it in. For a second he paused, then he dropped the letter in and started quickly along.

Over the shaded table in the quiet corner of the little restaurant he faced her. Never had she seemed so sweet, wholesome and sincere to him with the memory of his own guilt upon him.

"Ruth, I sometimes wonder why you are willing to help me when you could command better conditions and salary than I can give you," he queried.

She lifted her direct gaze. "Please don't talk shop—I—I like—I think you have a future before you, and I want to be in it," she answered.

"His future." The phrase hurt as he thought of what lay in the darkness of the mail box.

The next day at his office the bottom fell out of the sky, for she sent him word that she would not be at the office. His own sense of guilt heavy upon him, he figured frantically on ways by which she might have discovered his act. But the day after she appeared, the same winsome, comforting presence that had come to mean so much to him.

On that day he received his second shock. On that day into his office came the gray-headed McLean, head of the great investment firm of the north of the state. Quickly he came to business.

"Ellis, I happen to know of the fine way you handled the Dartmore estate. It was a clean ten or twelve thousand above what was normally expected. We've decided to make you our legal agent here and the retainer will be satisfactory," he added, naming a sum that made Ellis catch his breath. "Of course you will accept?"

When the whirling room had settled Ellis came to with a gasp. He had not sent the money, and yet the gruff Scotchman had referred to it. What could be——

"I couldn't help hearing, Barton. What a glorious opportunity!" she said eagerly.

But something in her eyes—a look beyond his analysis struck through him—a sense of great hurt—of love in agony.

He sprang to his feet with a single cry, "Ruth!"

"Ruth—you know!"

Her head moved on his shoulder. His heart sank from light down into shadows that no human plummet can ever sound; but the chill that went over him brought the dead calm of despair.

"Tell me. You saved me, but how?" he begged.

"You forgot that I had seen the papers," she said, and then breathlessly she told him how she had withdrawn her own small fortune left her by her father and how making use of her experience in his office she had seen to it that the administrators of the estate had the money. Her absence had been on the errand. Her work had brought McLean.

Across the square the sunset thrust again its farewell glow. He shivered a bit. "You saved me—and here in the desk is the money I planned to steal," he said with the iron in his voice and soul. And now I must lose you, I suppose, but God knows——"

She lifted a shadowed but tender face to him. "But I—I don't want to be—to be lost!"

At the word he caught her again to him, and with her he knew that, cleansed and strengthened, his feet were to tread the old, old road of toil and sacrifice over which love with love has gone and will go, if not to gold and glory, to contentment and peace.

The Art of Attraction.

The world looks on and judges men and women by their outward appearance and manner. A woman, as well as a man, has a secret, inner side to her nature that she may only disclose to the man she loves. It has been said that "a man has two soul sides, one to face the world with and another to show a woman when he loves her." So with a woman. That is why men are often bewitched by women who appear to others to be very ordinary and commonplace. Often women put on a deceitful appearance to gain the man they desire, and pretend to be amiable and sweet, only to show their true colors later. But this is the instinct of the mating bird that dons a more brilliant plumage to attract. The woman who has proved most attractive to men through the centuries is the one who is childlike, appealing and clinging, who can assume an atmosphere of innocence and joy and who can keep it up. The very best way to do this is to be all these things, from the heart out and then the time will never come when a contrary disposition will be a source of pain.

A Tip or Two

Hot dish marks may be removed from polished tables by applying a paste made of salt and salad oil, and coating the marks thickly with this. Leave for an hour or two, and after polishing in the usual way it will be found that all the marks have disappeared.

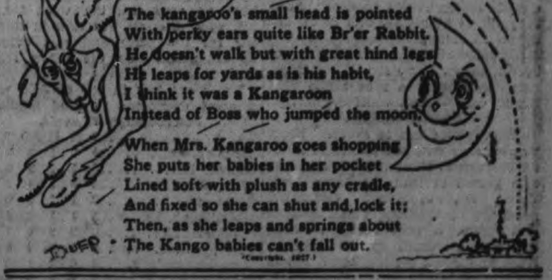
When canning tomatoes, put a teaspoon of salt in each can as you seal it; this will insure their keeping.

When peeling apples for dumplings or stewing, etc., to prevent them from getting brown and soft, put them in a basin with cold water and a little sat as each one is cut up.

The Kangaroo

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

HOW the children exclaim over this strange animal which sits on its three legged stool made from two giant hind legs and a mammoth tail, and then, suddenly rising, leaps as much as fifteen feet with one speing of those same great legs. The kangaroo is one of the few remaining marsupials, or animals which provide pockets to carry their young. Our southern opossum is the only American survival of that type. The young are born prematurely and then carried in the pocket till they are grown. The kangaroo babies are placed in their nursery when not more than two inches long and are carried till they sometimes weigh ten pounds. At first they are so undeveloped they cannot even suck the mother's milk but place their mouths over the nipples and she pumps the milk to them at intervals. Remarkably queer and interesting beast!



IF IN Australia you went hunting
You'd see the kangaroo so curious
Who, with his mammoth tail and hind legs,
Goes hopty-hop quite fast and furious.
No other land has kangaroos
Unless, perhaps, they're kept in zoos.

The kangaroo's small head is pointed
With perky ears quite like Br'er Rabbit.
He doesn't walk but with great hind legs
His leaps for yards as is his habit,
I think it was a Kangaroon
Instead of Boss who jumped the moon.

When Mrs. Kangaroo goes shopping
She puts her babies in her pocket
Lined soft with plush as any cradle,
And fixed so she can shut and lock it;
Then, as she leaps and springs about
The Kango babies can't fall out.

KIWANIS ELIMINATED FROM JUVENILE RACE

LOSE TO OSHAWA 11-9 IN TEN INNING BATTLE

Local Crew Put Up Plucky Fight To Remain in Running.

OUTHIT OPPONENTS.

Overthrows on Part of Local Players Account For Peterborugh Loss.

The hopes of a championship in the Juvenile series for this city vanished on Saturday afternoon when Kiwanis were beaten by South Oshawa in Port Hope by the score of eleven to nine in a heavy hitting battle that went ten innings.

The hitting was done mostly by the local boys, who nicked the opposing twirlers for twelve safe hits, but they did not get the breaks, this, combined with several overthrows assisted in giving Oshawa, who were only able to collect four safe hits, another boost up the ladder to the Ontario championship.

Braund, who started for the Kiwanis, had a world of confidence, but was not very steady, walking six and allowing two hits in four innings. Woods, woh replaced him, is a pitcher who shows every sign of being a born twirler, and given the proper coaching may some day be a decided asset to the Peterborough ball team. He struck out six batters in five innings and allowed two hits, walking four players also. His clean hit over shortstop in the ninth innings sent in two runs which tied up the game. Reeves started for Oshawa but was very erratic and when Knox replaced him in the third frame, the Kiwanis were one counter to the good. Knox turned in the best performance of the game and was given airtight support by his team mates, a fact which aided him greatly in maintaining his steadiness. He struck out ten batters and only allowed three bases on balls.

Sproats, batting for McCullough in the ninth, slammed out the nicest hit of the game, when he stepped into a fast one and placed it in the right field for three bases. Gingeriski, the 'Babe Ruth' of the Oshawa team, also hammered out a nice one in the first, although it was only good for two bases. The game by innings:

First Innings.

Oshawa.— Hurst was passed, but was out when he attempted to steal second. Hall placed a nice hit over second base. Foley made Matthews' long fly to centre look easy, but Gingeriski clouted a double over Dallan's head, putting Hall on third, who scored on a passed ball. Brad fanned.

Kiwanis.—Whatley walked. Dallan's single bounced out of Matthews' mitt to put two on. Weir filed to Hirst. Starr walked, loading the bases. McCullough fouled to Gingeriski. Saunders walked, sending Whatley in with the first counter. Foley slapped a hot one through short to score Dallan and Starr. Huggins grounded to Matthews.

Second Innings.

James walked. Amsbury filed to Dallan. Reeves rolled to Whatley, but Weir was slow to cover second and missed the throw. Little struck out. Hall hit through Weir, sending James and Reeves home. Hirst scored on a passed ball. Matthews struck out.

Kiwanis — Braund walked. Whatley's safe bunt put Braund on second, but an overthrow by Reeves moved both runners up. Dallan singled, sending in two more runs. Knox now replaced Reeves on the mound while Little in right field was replaced by Reeves. Weir's long fly to left field went for a two bagger. Starr was thrown out by Knox. McCullough rolled to Knox also, while Dallan was tagged in an attempt to reach home.

Third Innings.

Saunders made a nice catch of Gingeriski's hot drive for the first down. Bradd fouled to Starr. Amsbury hit to Saunders, who threw out James at second.

Kiwanis—Saunders was thrown out by Matthews. Foley struck out. Huggins slammed a nice single past Bradd, but Braund whiffed.

Fourth Innings.

Reeves filed out to Foley. Knox was an easy out, but Saunders made an overthrow. Hirst walked. Hall was also passed to load the bases. Matthews filed to Foley. Gingeriski grounded to Whatley, who missed it and made a poor throw to first, which was missed by McCullough. Hirst and Knox coming home. Bradd filed to Huggins.

Kiwanis—Whatley walked. Dallan rolled an easy out to Knox, who threw out Whatley at second base. Dallan stole second. Starr hit over third and McCullough filed to Bradd.

Fifth Innings.

Woods now pitching for Peterborough. James was passed. Amsbury fanned. Reeves rolled to McCullough. James scoring. Knox was thrown out by Whatley.

Kiwanis—Saunders tapped an easy fly to Knox. Foley was thrown out by Knox also. Huggins walked and Woods filed to Amsbury.

Sixth Innings.

Hirst was passed. Hall was hit. Matthews sacrificed, Whatley to McCullough. Gingeriski filed to Weir. Bradd was thrown out by Saunders.

Kiwanis. Whatley fanied. Dallan filed to Amsbury. Weir grounded to Bradd and was out at first.

Seventh Innings.

James walked again, having been passed twice before. Amsbury whiffed. Reeves clouted a long drive to centre field for one base. Starr overthrew to third base in an attempt to break up a steal by James, allowing Oshawa to chalk up two more counters. Knox struck out. Hirst was hit. Hall grounded to Weir, who threw out Hirst at second.

Kiwanis—Reeves gathered in Starr's long drive to right field. McCullough hit between second and third and Saunders' fly to right went for another hit. Foley fanned. Huggins grounded to Bradd, who made a low throw to James, McCullough and Saunders scoring. Wood struck out.

Eighth Innings.

Matthews was passed. Gingeriski fanned. Bradd bunted and was safe when Weir missed Woods' throw to second in an attempt to catch Matthews. James and Amsbury struck out.

Kiwanis —Whatley bunted a foul on the third strike for the first down. Dallan walked and stole second. Weir beat out a slow grounder, putting two on. Starr singled to Matthews, who caught Dallan at the plate. McCullough struck out.

Ninth Innings.

Reeves hit to McCullough. Whatley fumbled a grounder from Knox. Hirst bunted and Woods caught Knox going to second. Hall filed to Dallan.

Kiwanis— Saunders was passed. Foley made things look bright by hitting through short, putting Saunders on third base. Huggins struck out. Woods tied up the game by hitting into left field, sending Saunders and Foley in. Dunkerly, batting for Whatley, fanned, as did Dallan.

Tenth Innings.

Matthews hit a long drive to left field for one base. Gingeriski's fly to centre was missed by Huggins, putting two on. Bradd sacrificed, Woods to McCullough. James popped to Weir, whose throw held Matthews at third. Amsbury was an easy out when he bunted to Woods, but McCullough missed the throw and the two winning runs crossed the plate. Reeves filed to Dunkerley.

Kiwanis—Weir was thrown out by Matthews. Starr was easy, Knox to James. Sproats, batting for McCullough, made the nicest hit of the game, when he slammed a long drive over first base which was good for three bases. Saunders popped a small fly to the infield which should have been an easy out, but went for a hit, while Sproats was slow in starting for the plate and was tagged by Gingeriski on the throw from James.

OTTAWA CLUBS SECURE TROPHY

Win First Lawn Bowling Cup Put Up By Lord Willingdon.

DEFEAT MONTREAL.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 20.— (Canadian Press.)—Two rinks of the Ottawa Lawn Bowling Club defeated teams from the Outremont Club of Montreal here Saturday by a total of eight shots to win the first lawn bowling trophy put up for competition in Canada by His Excellency Lord Willingdon. The Governor-General and Lady Willingdon were among the large gallery which followed the close play.

The Lord Willingdon lawn bowling trophy is representativze of the championships of the Eastern Provinces. The Outremont club survived the Quebec elimination series, while the Ottawa club defeated the various rinks in this district which entered the playdown.

The victorious Ottawa rinks were led by Robert Shaw and George Addison. Shaw's squad finished 11 up on the Outremont rink, skipped by George Clark, while Addison and his men dropped their game with the Montreal rink, led by E. J. McCormick, by three shots, leaving the Ottawa rinks 8 up on the round.

VISITING RINKS WIN TROPHIES

Stirling and Cobourg Rinks Winners in Mixed Tourney.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20.—This year the mixed bowling tournament did not meet with the same degree of success as did the men's event a few days ago. There were not as many rinks entered and the territory represented was much smaller. The brand of bowling was exceptionally good and close scores were features of the play. The draw was at one o'clock and play began immediately after. The out-of-town clubs represented were Stirling, Tweed and Cobourg. The prizes were all taken by outside points.

The first place was won by William Whitty, Stirling, and the second place went to Cobourg to Les Wilson and his rink. The prizes were silk rayon bed spreads and crystal and silver cheese and biscuit dishes.

Owing to the extremely hot weathr and dearth of rain, the greens were not in the pink of condition, but every effort had been made to make them as fit as possible for play. Tea was served in the club house between the afternoon and evening sessions on the greens.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

WIN OUT IN TENTH TO WIND UP BATTLE BETWEEN HURLERS

Holmes Has Edge Over Kingston Rival in Matter of Strike-outs.

AIR TIGHT FIELDING.

Kingston Scores First, Royals Forge Ahead, and Kingston Draws Even Again.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 20 (Special to The Examiner).—In one of the fastest games played on the local ball diamond this season, the Peterborough Royals eliminated the Kingston Victorias in the first round of the play-downs for the Junior O.B.A.A. title on Saturday afternoon by a score of 4—3. The teams were tied on the round and Saturday's game was a battle every inch of the way.

The Royals have Gordon, hard-hitting first baseman, to thank for the victory, he having broken the tie which had existed up until the tenth inning by slashing out a long drive to deep left field to score Hartley, who had been given a walk from second base.

It was a smart game and developed into somewhat of a pitchers' battle between Holmes, elongated right-hander for the Petes, and Donnelly, wiry little southpaw of the Kingston team. There was little to choose between the two pitchers, with Holmes, having a decided advantage in the matter of strike-outs, he causing nine batters to whiff the breeze while Donnelly sent but two men back to the bench via the strike-out route. Donnelly allowed but nine hits while his opponent gave ten safe blows. Donnelly walked three, while Holmes issued one free pass.

The games was featured by airtight work on the part of both clubs, and the pitchers were given fine support. It remained for L. Hollingsworth to provide the best play of the day when he went back to make a leaping catch of Gibson's long hoist, which was labelled for three bases, in the tenth frame. Quinn, at second base ,accepted six chances without making a mistake and he handled some difficult drives well.

Conley, third baseman for the Kingston team, was the big slugger of the afternoon and he tied the game up for his team in the eighth innings when he drove out a three-base hit to score Gibson and Pennock, who had singled ahead of him. The battle was marked by extra base hitting, the Royals having no less than five doubles.

Kingston went into the lead in the fifth innings, after both teams had failed to break into the score column, when Donnelly singled to right field but was out on a fielder's choice when Jones took Vince's grounder to force him. Vince stole second and Quinn came through with a ringing single which sent the runner over the plate.

The Royals, however, retaliated in the sixth when Beavis got a single and went to second on Conley's error. Hatton injected a hot single and Beavis scored. After two men were down, Jones walked and Hartley was safe on Gibson's error and the bases were full. Donnelly got himself out of a bad hole by forcing Gordon to pop out weakly.

The Royals score two more in the seventh innings and gained the lead. Holmes was safe on Conley's error, but was caught off second a few minutes later. Hope walked, but H. Hollingsworth went out to Pennock. Beavis got a double to score Hope, and Hatton got a two-base hit and counted Beavis. L. Hollingsworth went out to Donnelly.

In the eighth the Victorias tied things up. Vince went out to the pitcher and Quinn went out to Jones. Gibson singled and Pennock, who followed him, got another safe blow. Conley then got his triple to drive both of them over. Amey went out to Holmes to end the inning.

HOME TEAM WINS ALL FIVE EVENTS

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20. — The Point Anne tennis team visited the local club in a Tummon League fixture on Saturday, one of the last to be played here this season. The local players were in good form and won all five events. They are playing on a single schedule and should they land in first place at the end of the season, they will be the club to send a team to play in the finals of the League with the winner of the double schedule for the Tummon trophy.

In the events in the afternoon, Harry Free defeated Thomas Bowler, Point Anne, 6-2, 6-2, and J. H. Bell defeated J. Shylock, 6-3, 6-3, in the men's singles. B. H. Beatty and W. Kingston won the men's doubles from Payne and Payne of Point Anne, 6-3, 6-2. Miss Dorothy Linton and Dr. H. B. Longmore defeated Mrs. Rosebury and A. Weir, 6-2, 6-3, and Mrs. D. W. Douglas and W. Henson defeated Miss M. Storr and J. Mulligan, 6-4, 7-5, in the mixed doubles.

After the play, tea and light refreshments were served in the club house.

of the visitors in Buckhorn, to be played on Friday evening, but the game was postponed, to be played some evening this week. This is the second year in succession that this troop has encamped in Buckhorn, and the villagers and visitors who know the boys hope that it will not be the last.

Meeting of Cheese-Makers.

A meeting of the cheese-makers of the Peterborough-Victoria-Durham section was held in Hall's Bridge on Friday evening.

Mr. Allan of Peterborough, president, acted as chairman and Mr. Cecil Cuthbertson, secretary. Matters of interest to cheese-makers, and the art of cheese-making generally, were discussed. Various matters of importance with regard to the position held by the section in the province were brought forward.

Besides the president and secretary, the following were present: Andrew Wilson, Young's Point Factory; Geo. Wilson, Buckhorn Factory; Thomas Borland, Warminster Factory, and W. J. Moore.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Aisthorpe, their son Beverly, and daughter Bernice, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dever, have returned to their home in Toronto.

Rev. Mr. Roberts of Burlington, Ont., is acting as locum tenens for Mr. C. E. Bray, who is spending his vacation in Burlington.

Mrs. Archie Fulton was in Peterborough on Thursday.

Miss Tretheway of Peterborough has been appointed by the School Board as teacher at the school, Hall's Bridge, for the year 1928-1929.

Mr. Willie Fawcett is employed by Mr. Albert Northey at the Sixteenth for the harvesting.

Miss Olive Fulton is visiting with friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. K. A. Hunter and her daughter, Edythe of Toronto, are the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Willis.

Mr. Murray Barr, his daughter Gloria, and son Robert, are visiting relatives in Oxford Mills, Ont.

Mr. James Fulton is going to the West on Monday for the harvesting.

Mr. Bruce Hall was in Peterborough on Thursday.

Mr. Max. Wilson is at present in Young's Point, where he is employed at the Cheese Factory.

Mrs. Frank Edwards went to Peterborough and Wabashine on Sunday.

Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly of Young's Point was in Hall's Bridge on Friday, visiting his parishioners there.

Mr. Arnold Bennett, who suffered the misfortune of having his toe crushed last week, is making favorable progress.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Knights and North-enders meet to-night in their last scheduled game of the softball season.

The Royals are still in the junior running by reason of their 4-3 victory over the Kingston Victorias on Saturday at Belleville. Playing through ten full innings the local crew were put to all their worth in order to defeat the Limestoners. "It was a great game all around," according to the spectators' viewpoint.

The city softball league schedule is rapidly nearing a close, the remaining games will likely be cleaned up this week. Following the play-off series here, the winner may enter a series for the district championship.

George Young won the Montreal-Repentigny swimming marathon yesterday negotiating the twenty odd miles in three hours and eight minutes. Young won first prize of $250 and $100 as lap prizes. Twenty-four swimmers, including one woman, participated in the event. The woman, Dorothy King Shaw, of Shawinigan Falls was sixth.

The Kiwanis were eliminated from the juvenile race when they lost a 11-9 decision to South Oshawa at Port Hope on Saturday afternoon. The game was a heavy hitting affair that went full ten innings, the local crew outhitting their opponents twelve to four but lost the decision by the many over-throws on the part of the fielders.

• • • • • • •

Braund started on the mound for the Kiwanis but he proved erratic, walking six batters and allowing two hits in four innings. He was replaced by Woods who did little better on the mound but starred at the bat when he made a clean hit over the short stop's head in the ninth to tie the game. Reeves was wild on the slab for Oshawa and had to be replaced by Knox who pitched the greatest game of his career. This, combined with the air-tight support given by his team mates aided the Motor City crew in winning the victory.

SOMERVILLE DEFEATS LANMAN IN INTERNATIONAL GOLF FINAL

"Silent Sandy" Regains Crown He Had Won in 1926.

PLAYS PLUCKY GAME.

American Unable To Overcome Early Lead Gained By Opponent.

MONTREAL, Que., August 20. — Canadian Press. — Canadian amateur golf laurels will remain in the Dominion for another year. In the International final for the title over the Summerlea link Saturday, C. Ross Somerville of the London Hunt defeated W. K. Lanman of the Columbus, Ohio, club, 3 and 2. Thus "Silent Sandy" regained the crown he won in 1926, and which was held last year by Don Carrick, of Toronto who being at the Olympic games as a boxer this summer, did not defend his golf laurels.

To reach the championship throne, Somerville the tourney medalist, was forced to battle for a week against the strong opposition which was packed into the lower half draw. Lanman advanced to the final in the easier upper half brackets, but by large scores which indicated that he would have to be reckoned with seriously in the deciding 36-hole contest.

All the fight of the Yale bulldog was apparent in the plucky golf played by Lanman on Saturday as he rallied time and again to keep within distance of the Canadian, who established a four hole advantage in the morning by virtue of par golf on 17 of the first 18 holes. Undaunted by the deficit Lanman, with birdies on the fifth and ninth holes of the afternoon round, cut Sommerville's lead to two holes at the turn.

There was every appearance of a terrific fight over the last night holes as Somerville was below his form of the morning and Lanman, not the equal of Somerville as a golfer, doggedly stuck to his task, refusing to be shaken off.

But with dramatic suddenness the tide of victory swung distinctly to Somerville's favor when he won the 28th, 29th and 30th holes to go 5 up and six to play, setting a winning margin which nothing short of a complete collapse could upset. Somerville's win on the 28th come when Lanman picked up after his shot into rough had ended with his ball being buried, apparently by someone in the gallery unwittingly stepping on it while hunting for the lost ball. A clinching punch was shown by Somerville at the 29th when he dropped a 30-footer from the edge of the green for a birdie three to go up and the battle really ended at the 30th when Sandy sank a ten-footer to be five up.

Lanman, however, was still fighting desperately and kept the game alive for 3 holes before a courageous attempt to drop a 25- foot putt for a win on the 34th missed by an inch, and Somerville gained a half and victory. On the 31st Lanman cut Somerville's lead to three, the London Hunt star finding sand. At the 32nd Somerville had to get around a partial stymie for his half. Lanman kept the battle going by winning the 33rd when Somerville was short with his putt and leaving the match dormie three.

Both reached the 34th green in 2. Somerville putted to within a foot of the pin. Lanman, with the match depending on his 25-footer made a courageous try. His ball travelled true for the cup, rimmed and bounced up off th farside landing an inch from the lip and stopping there. It was the climax of as grim terrific and gallant an uphill fight against a superior golfer as was seen in the tournament.

Somerville's morning round was the most sparkling golf seen during the week of competition for the championship. For the first fifteen holes, Sandy played each one in par, making the turn with his customary 35. Lanman was clinging closely. He halved along with Somerville until the 7th when he got off into a trap. He made an excellent attempt at an approach, but his ball struck Somerville's, spoiling Lanman's chance for Lanman to win or half the hole. Off the line at the 8th, Lanman went two down. He pulled himself together, halving holes until the 12th where he faced a dead stymie which he could not negotiate, and went three down. Lanman had a chance at the 13th but was short with his first putt, and halved the hole. He recovered smartly from a trap to halve the 14th and scrambled up after a sliced tee shot to halve the 15th.

At the 16th Somerville made his one miscue of the entire morning round. He pulled his tee shot slightly, the ball landing on the fairway, but close to the side of a bunker. Somerville had to take a downhill stance and elected to use his brassie to reach the green where an iron shot probably would have served the purpose much better. He tipped his ball into some rough and lost the hole, his lead being cut to two up.

His fighting spirit stirred by the lapse Somerville went out and won the 17th and 18th to end the morning round four up.

Somerville started badly in the afternoon. He lost the 19th hole by taking extra putts. He found the rough at the 20th, drove out over the green and chipped back poorly. However Lanman with a win practically certain, messed around with his putts and only managed a half in 6's which brought forth one of the very few remarks made during the tourney by Somerville, the taciturn golfer. "Too bad! you should have won that one," said Sandy. After halving the next two Lanman counted a birdie three on the 23rd and Somerville's lead was pruned to two up.

Somerville was up against it again at the 25th when he faced a 10 foot putt and a partial stymie for a half. He negotiated the stroke, a beautiful effort and then showed championship form at the 26th when in the rough from th tee he carried the green with his second, while Lanman in the rough on the left of the fairway smacked his ball against a tree, sent his next stort of the green and finally conceded the hole, leaving Somerville three up. But on the 27th Lanman scored his second birdie of the afternoon journey out, making Somerville two up at the turn.

Then it was that the match took its sudden turn in Somerville's favor as the latter captured the first three holes of the inward nine to go five, and play safely for halves thereafter to regain the title he held in 1926, and to aid it to the Ontario provincial amateur crown, which he also won this year. Four times Somerville has been a finalist in the Canadian amateur and he has taken the title twice.

CRICKET CLUBS PLAY TIE GAME

WICKET IS FAST.

A fine game of cricket between the Peterborough and C.G.E. cricket clubs at the Oval on Saturday afternoon ended in a tie, a most unusual occurrence, both teams scoring 53 runs. The game was interesting from start to finish, the game veering first in favor of one side and then the other. Although the wicket was fast and should have been in favour of the batsmen, the bowlers however, generally speaking, held the upper hand.

The Peterborough Club won the toss and batted first, but so well did Jefferson and R. Dyer bowl that four wickets were down for 18 runs, (Wade, who had bowled a few over, unfortunately sprained his shoulder). Thorpe and Smith, however, by good cricket, both reached double figures and the score finally reached 53, not a big score on a fast wicket.

R. Dyer captured 4 wickets for 26 and Jefferson also bowled spendidly, taking 5 for 11 runs.

The C.G.E. on going into bat, also found runs hard to get, losing three good wickets with only 4 runs on the board. Jefferson and Chambers, however, soon changed the aspect and brought the score to 29 before being parted. The next 4 wickets fell for an addition 11 runs. The game at this point was in a most interesting stage. With 2 wickets to full 14 runs were needed for victory. At this point Jack Wade commenced hitting vigorously and the score mounted rapidly, the ninth wicket fell with the score tied, McKinley, however, was bowled with the first ball he received from F. Dyer an exciting game ended in a tie. F. Dyer bowled brilliantly, capturing 8 wickets for 18 runs. Jefferson, Chambers and Wade all batted well, the latter carrying his bat for 18 runs.

Another game between these two clubs is being arranged for September 1st.

CRIPPLED PILGRIMS ARE HELPED

first annual Diocesan pilgrimage, two years ago. Last year, 1,529 was the total, and yesterday, 1,557 tickets were placed in the hands of the railway officials who collected fares. But the number of motorists making the journey also was larger than ever yesterday and dozens of cars were packed closely in the area reserved for them. A fair estimate of the number of person participating in the pilgrimage of yesterday would place it well over two thousand. The annual visit from Peterborough Diocese is reckoned as one of the largest from any place in the province.

The pilgrimage is not an easy one. The characteristics of a religion that emphasizes the pre-eminence of the spirit and mind over the body are very noticeable in an undertaking like this, but the exaltation that comes from such a conquest of material discomfort far outweighs such small disadvantages. The hundreds of people went happily and they came nome happy. They prayed all day. They travelled ninety-three miles or more on a hot day to struggle up a steep hill through sand and dust, to make their way under the sun up twenty-three steep steps to the church that seems to rise perpendicularly into the sky as one looks up at it from those hard steps. They packed the church to capacity and knelt on the hard benches in the narrow pews. They made the Stations of the Cross up another steep hillside, with the sun tempered by a mild soft breeze. They knelt through Benediction and crowded in close-packed masses to venerate the relics of Blessed Martyrs and to receive the blessing of the Holy Sacrament. They sat on the ground to eat a mid-day meal under trees which could not temper absolutely the heat of a noon-day sun. And they were happy.

Men, women and children prayed intensely. "Oh, God, help our sick," they prayed in answer to the litany of the priest intoned from the sanctuary. Up near the altar railings were those, strangers to most of them, the sick, the crippled, the diseased who had come here to ask God to relieve them from grievous bodily infirmities. And the people who did not know who these infirm mortals were and would never see them again probably, prayed for them, earnestly, sincerely, devoutly in a sublime reaching out of human intercession to a Divine Providence.

Church of Sunshine.

Sunshine is the keynote of this church on the hill. The strong sunlight beats down on its grey stone exterior and fills the interior with living light; pale, golden pools of light are reflected back from the polished brown wood of the walls and ceiling, sunlight falls in panels on the floor of the sanctuary, coming through beautiful stained glass, and radiance twinkles from the hundreds of little lighted tapers and volive candles that gleam in crimson, emerald and cream from the three altars and the statue lamps. Gold light is in the lace of the altar clothing and in the motifs of gilt that adorn the woodwork of the altars and the panels of the walls. Yesterday, hundreds of gorgeous gladioli blooms rose in serried ranks against the altars, surrounding the lovely statues that grace the wide altars of Our Lady and the Sacred Heart. Flat against the walls are the painted Stations of the Way of the Cross and beneath the side altars are the mortuary statues of two of the Blessed Martyrs. At these side altars are also the crutches and supports of various types which have been left here by those who have been cured by a visit to the Shrine of the Blessed Martyrs.

Many come here, and many are cured, while others go away unhealed, to come again, perhaps. They are sufferers from the manifold diseases that the flesh is heir to. Just last week, a little girl with heart trouble, came with a pulse registering 160. After her visit her pulse fell to a normal condition.

Yesterday morning, while one of the Jesuit Fathers celebrated outdoor Mass at the Calvary chapel on the hillside, Solemn Pontifical High Mass was sung by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, within the church He was assisted by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl of Lindsay, as High Priest, Rev. J. J. O'Brien as Deacon, and Rev. Edward Welsh as sub-deacon, with little John Burke as train-bearer. The choir of St. Peter's Cathedral, led by Miss Hurley at the organ, sang the music for the Mass and also for the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, celebrated by the Bishop in the afternoon.

Rev. P. Costello and Rev. J. McAuley, of Ennismore, assisted in the services.

The sermon was preached by the Provincial of the Jesuits, Rev. William H. Hingston, who last year year succeeded Rev. Father Filion, former Provincial, moving spirit in the erection of this church and who is now a member of the teaching staff of Campion College in Regina.

Fitting Sermon.

Father Hingston spoke briefly, extending a cordial welcome to the pilgrims and remarking on the wonderful spirit of piety which animated them as evidenced in their prayers on the train, on ther arrival and during the religious exercises. He referred to the "energy, devotion and piety of your Bishop, to whom the success of former pilgrimages from your diocese has been due."

"You are engaged in an etxernal form of worship which is as old as the Church," he said. "As soon as the Church emerged from the catacombs, the season of pilgrimages began. You are to-day engaged in a public act of faith in a God whom you know to be not far off, but present, who hears your prayers, who is your Father in Heaven and who is anxious to listen to you.

"Some of you are asking God to suspend the ordinary course of nature and to work a miracle in your behalf Miracles are extraordinary occurrences but they will take place until the end of time God will always speak in answer to earnest prayer.

"You are also engaged in a public protestation of faith in the doctrine of the communion of saints and you are asking for favors through these special patrons and intercessors. Amongst all the holy souls who have lived on this continent, north of Mexico, these are the first holy souls who are singled out for the honor of beatification. And you come today to the spot sanctified by the blood of five of these Blessed Martyrs. The bones of there of them lie somewhere on this hillside.

Father Hingston went on to refer to the hardships encountered by the ealy missionaries. The original church was built here about 1639 by Father Jogues himself. "The first barn in this country was erected in this valley and the most expensive cattle were brought here. Imagine bringing a cow from France in a sailing boat that took over three and a half months to make the voyage. Then it was brought over nine hundred miles up the St. Lawrence and Lake Nipissing and the French River to Georgian Bay They brought a calf in a canoe over nine hundred miles, with fifty portages."

"God will answer the prayers that are made in the spirit of humility and in the spirit of confidence and trust. but you must also be peresevering in your prayers and continue them after you leave here. One other thing is also necessary; we must ask only for things pertaining to our salvation. God sometimes in His own loving mercy refuses to grant those favors which He sees will not be for our eternal good. There are many who come here and whose petition which cause the heart to bleed are not granted. God knows best. He sees, perhaps, that often the virtues of charity and humility, of patience and of trust in God will spring up in the hearts of those who suffer from bodily infirmities. In heaven we will see the rich treasure that has been laid up for those who have suffered here, whose prayers for relief God has chosen to answer in some other way."

Benediction Solemnized

In the afternoon, the Way of the Cross was followed at the open-air stations which follow each other up the slope of the steep hill beside the church and later, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was solemnized in the church. At shortly after five o'clock, the pilgrims bade goodbye once more to the church on the hill, with the magnificent view which commands a survey of miles of the surrounding country. From the church door, setinels of the domain where once they toiled and labored for Christ, stone figures of the two stalwarts look out over the shining valley. Rev. Jean de Brebouef and Rev. Gabriel Lalement keeping eternal watch over the country where they met their death. Nearby, on the peak of the first slope of the hillside, is the white statue in chip marble of St. Ignatius Loyala, founder of the Jesuit Order, also looking out over the valley where winds the peaceful silver ribbon of the Wye and where a narrow yellow road brings honking motor cars to the hostel which adjoins the church. On September 10th, the hostel closes for the season, but Mass will be celebrated in the church until September 16th. Next Sunday, a pilgrimage comes here from Montreal, and from September 6th to 9th, a retreat for laymen will be held.

About nine o'clock, the pilgrims arrived home, tired but happy, after a journey lasting from half-past seven o'clock in the morning and after many miles covered, both in the train and in the religious exercises which engaged their attention during most of the day. Two trains carried the pilgrims, the first having a total of fifteen coaches and carrying 742 people, and the second with seventeen coaches, carrying 815 people. The majority, 915 men, women and children, were from Peterborough, with 298 from Lindsay, about 100 from Campbellford, 99 from Orillia, 75 from Hastings and 10 from Keene. Three people came over from Waubashene, while Lakefield, Porte Hope and Cobourg sent their quota. A number of people were down from Toronto also.

Arrangements for the comfort of the pilgrims were looked after in the best possible manner by the railway officials, the Jesuit Fathers, and those in charge of provisions and refreshments at the hostel. The Knights of Columbus, headed by Grand Knight Costello, were energetic, in dispensing light refreshments on the train.

WIN POLICE REVOLVER TITLE

The "Mounties" have once more demonstrated their ability to handle shooting iron, by winning the Dominion of Canada Open Police Revolver Championship. A five man team from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Lethbridge, Alta., after qualifying against the various detachments of their own force, met and deefated the winning Civic and Provincial teams. The open championship and the Dominion Marksmen trophies donated by the Dominion Cartridge Company, went to Sgt. A. E. Smith, Corporals A. Ford and D. E. Forsland, and Constables J. G. Pelletier and A. Mowat, with the fine score of 1042 out of 1125 in both rapid and deliberate fire.

In addition to the trophies won by the team, Corporal A. Ford also won the Burgess Trophy for the highest individual score, making 143 out of 150 in deliberate fire and 73 out of 75 in rapid fire, or a total of 216 out of 225.

The score of the Lethbridge team of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was the highest made since these competitions were organized three years ago, and the average score made by the various teams competing also showed a marked improvement each year, since the competitions were first started.

The Dominion Marksmen Competitions were organized by the Dominion Cartridge Company three years ago with a view to creating a spirit of friendly rivalry amongst the police officers throughout Canada. The following statement was recently issued by this Company:

"Large areas in Canada are sparsely populated, and the general increase in violent crimes during the past few years make it imperative that our police officers be thoroughly proficient with their side arms. A police department whose members are expert shooters not only insures protection for themselves, but are an ever present menace to persons who contemplate crime. These competitions are, of considerable benefit in improving the shooting of our police officers, as the object is not merely to train a few expert men, but to enthuse all ranks to become more efficient with a revolver under actual service conditions."

"STOLEN BRIDE" IS DELIGHTFUL SCREEN DRAMA

When age-old European customs meet modern ideas of freedom and independence something is certain to happen, quite generally to the disadvantage of the customs.

That is the theory set forth in a highly entertaining and original manner in "The Stolen Bride," the First National Picture starring Billie Dove which opens an engagement of two days at the Regent Theatre here to-night.

"The Stolen Bride," a comedy-drama of Europe before the World War, is a unique and an outstanding production in a number of ways.

It introduces as a star, Billie Dove, universally regarded as one of the screen's reigning beauties, and brings Alexander Korda, prominent Hungarian director, to American film.

If anyone harbored doubts as to Miss Dove's fitness for stardom, they were completely dispelled by her splendid performance and striking personality in "The Stolen Bride." Mr. Korda wins honors no less apaprent with his masterly direction of his first American production. The combination of star and director, abetted by the talents of Carey Wilson, author, who produced the picture, is indeed a happy one.

"The Stolen Bride" is provided with the richest possible settings and costumes and Korda has brought to the screen the colorful atmosphere of Budapest and Vienna as few directors have been able to do before.

Lloyd Hughes offers an excellent characterization in the masculine lead opposite Miss Dove. Lilyan Tashman, Armand Kalis, Cleve Moore, Frank Beale and others have prominent supporting roles.

CHURCH POSTS STILL UNFILLED

St. Andrew's, Campbellford, Has Neither Minister Nor Organist.

VISITORS OFFICIATE.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20. — Since the departure of the Rev. James C. Grier to become the pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Lindsay, St. Andrew's Church here has been hearing ministers from various places with the intention of selecting some one to occupy the pulpit here, at present officially vacant. Yesterday the services were taken by the Rev. Dr. Woodside of London, Ont.

The church is also without an organist and choir master. To date, there have been no organists playing as applicants, but yesterday, John L. Nicol of Galt, Ont. presided over the music. Mr. Nicol first came to Campbellford in 1910 from Scotland. This was soon after the pipe organ had been installed in the Presbyterian Church and he was given the position as organist and choir master. For five years Mr. Nicol served the church and its congregation with unceasing devotion. Upon leaving here, he went directly to Galt and has held the position as organist in a Presbyterian church there ever since: Each summer, Mr. and Mrs. Nicol spend their vacation at Trent River and not a little of that time is spent in town renewing old acquaintances. Asked to assist with the services this Sunday, Mr. Nicol accepted graciously, and yesterday, both morning and evening, large congregations were present and appreciated his music. Mr. Nicol was the first professional organist of high standing that the church here ever employed, and many of the congregation look back on the days when Mr. Nicol led the choir and gave organ recitals as some of the brightest. He is described as a genius, and a master of the profession.

At the morning service Mrs. F. de F. Free sang "The Lord Is My Light" (Allitsen) and in the evening, Miss Margaret Dickson sang "With Verdure Clad" from "The Creation" (Hayden). Mrs. Free and Miss Dickson also sang a duett at the evening service, "How Sweet The Name Of Jesus Sounds" (Browne).

ODDFELLOWS HOLD ANNUAL DECORATION

Campbellford Brethren March To Cemetery and Decorate 21 Graves.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20. — Intense heat, but a clear, bright afternoon marked the decoration ceremony of the local lodge, I.O.O.F. Headed by the Northumberland Regimental band, the brethren marched from their lodge rooms in the Ferris Block to Mount Pleasant Cemetery, where the graves of their departed brethren were decorated with flowers.

There was a good turnout of bandsmen. They were in mufti and coatless. Marching five abreast their appearance was most pleasing. The members of the lodge followed in two long files, each man carrying a small bouquet of flowers. Other members followed in motors. During the decoration ceremony, the band played several hymns very softly. The service was most impressive and a host of citizens was present to witness the proceedings.

There were twenty one graves in all decorated yesterday afternoon. In them there lie the remains of the late William McComb, Richard Bartletts, William Thomas, Robert Peeling, B. Carnahan, J. B. Ferris, James Dickson, Joseph Dolman, Harry Hodge, Edward West, James Donald, Matthew Marsh, William Phillips, James Dinwoodie, Reginald Royce, William Meiklejohn, E. C. West, John B. Smith, Champion Doxsee, Orval Sweet and George Hormel.

MOUNT JULIAN

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT JULIAN, August 18.—Mrs. Samuel Wilson has returned to Peterborough after visiting her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Moffatt.

Miss May Wilkinson, of Toronto, is the guest of Miss Mable Northey.

The many friends of Mrs. Robert McCauley are congratulating her on reaching her 80th birthday on August 15. Mrs. McCauley is quite spry and took a motor trip to Apsley recently where she visited a great many of her old friends.

The many friends of Mrs. Gordon Northey, formerly Miss Addie Wigg, will be pleased to learn that she has wonderfully improved in health since coming to Stoney Lake.

Mrs. J. H. Jones, Dagmer Villa, Stoney Lake had the misfortune while motoring to Toronto on Monday of having the wheel and fender torn off his car in a accident. His son, Harry, received a slight scratch on his face, but no one was seriously hurt.

Mrs. Joseph Millage and son Fred, of Toronto, were recently guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. William Northey.

Recent visitors with Mrs W. T. Northey were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gould and children of Toronto, Miss Fern Wannamaker, Mrs. H. Wannamaker and three children of Lakefield, and Mr. Harry Stabler, of Lakefield.

Mr. W. T. Northey and Stanley were guests of Mrs. Gilbert Harrison in Peterborough on Saturday.

Trading Very Dull Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Trading at the morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today was extremely dull. Prices, however, were generally firm with are usual fractional gains and losses being recorded.

Brazilian Traction was up ½ at 54; Canadian Industrial Alcohol up ⅝ at 39¾ and Massey-Harris with second heaviest trading of the morning closed at noon today, half a point higher to sell at 43½. Canada Dredge was up, and gained one point selling at 45, Famous Players one at 21, and Page Hersey ¼ at 92¾. International Nickel suffered a loss of three as compared with Friday's close, selling to-day at 99½. Brompton was down ¼ and Bell elephone down ⅛ at 35¼ and 160 respectively. British American Oil was unchanged on curb section selling at 37½, Carlings Breweries was down to 27½, showing loss of two points, and Hiram Walker was down one to 53 while Imperial Oil was up ⅛ at 64.

CARS COLLIDE.

Two Automobiles Crash at Rogers and Hunter Streets—One Damaged.

Two cars, one driven by M. D. Sproat of Gilmour Street and the other driven by Walter Windsor of McDonnel Street, collided at the corner of Hunter and Rogers Streets about 9.15 last night. When the accident occurred Sproat, who had been travelling east on Hunter Street, was turning around at the corner and Windsor was coming west on the same street. The right front fender, headlight and bumper of Sproat's car were broken, while Windsor's car failed to show any results of the collision. Constable Piercy investigated the accident.

PRINCESS REPROVED

The photograph shows two of the frocks ordered by Princess Mary, Viscountess Lascelles, from Maison Paul Caret, Paris, but to which Her Majesty Queen Mary objected because of the brevity of the skirts. The queen does not believe it proper that her daughter follow the trend of fashion and is reported to be indignant because the princess will not wear longer dresses. The gowns met with the approval of Viscount Lascelles who helped his royal wife with the selections.

Popular Shares Remain Steady

TORONTO, August 20. — Canadian Press. — Slow trading continued today at the Standard Mining Exchange and the majority of prices were inclined to register losses although a few of the issues which seemed to monopolize the trading remained firm. Aconda was half lower with a heavy turnover at 20, while Newbec with heaviest trading of the morning remained at 29.

Noranda suffered a relapse dropping from 54.10 to 53.25 with nt loss of 85. Dome Mines was off 25 at 7.65; Hollinger off ten at 10.5; Howey Gold off three at 96; Lake Shore off 5 at 20.15; Mining Corporation off 14 at 3.40, and Sherritt Gordon down 19 at 6.45.

Bidgood registered a gain of two, selling at 62½; Beaver two at 83; Teck Hughes 7 to 9.37; and Treadwell Consolidated jumped to 17.00 with a rise of 1.50; western issues manifested some slight increases.

The Italian submarine F-14 and its crew of 27 dead has been brought to the surface of the Adriatic, where it sank after a collision 34 hours before. Some of the crew were believed to have escaped the torture of the helpless wait at the bottom of the sea for rescue, for the stern compartment of the F-14 was flooded when the sharp bow the destroyer Guiseppe Missori rode over the emerging craft and a number of men were drowned. Above is a view of the submarine.

Wedding Bells

BROWN—MOLONEY.
HOGAN—MOLONEY.

A very pretty and somewhat unusual event in the form of a double wedding, took place at seven o'clock this morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, when two sisters were married. Their brother performed the ceremony, a younger brother assisted in serving the Mass and a sister sang.

Mary Eulalie, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frances Joseph Moloney of 122 Gladstone avenue, became the bride this morning of Robert I. Brown, of Stratford, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Brown of Stratford.

Her sister, Myra Aloysia, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moloney, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Walter M. Hogan, of Montreal, formerly of Peterborough, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hogan of this city.

The Nuptial Mass and ceremony was performed by their brother, Rev. J. Clare Moloney, while a younger brother, James, served the Mass and a sister, Mrs. F. L. McGarrett, of Niagara Falls, sang Gounod's "Ave Maria." Mr. John Armstrong played the wedding music.

The brides, who were given in marriage by their father, acted for each other in witnessing the signing of the register

Miss Mary Moloney was in poudre blue flat crepe with knife-pleated skirt and trimming of fagotting. She wore a small matching hat of blue felt, black pumps and grey silk hose, brown fox scarf and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses

Miss Myra Moloney wore a gown of rose beige crepe, trimmed with narrow bands of oyster white and French drawn work embroidery. Her small felt hat, slippers and silk hose were of honey beige. She wore a fur scarf of amber fox and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses

Following the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served to about thirty guests at the home of the brides' parents, where the rooms were decorated with roses and gladioli. Guests present included Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, Rev. J. McAuley of Ennismore, and Rev. Clare Moloney.

Later the quartette left by motor for Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will spend their honeymoon in Muskoka before taking up residence in Stratford. Mr. and Mrs. Hogan will reside in Montreal after a wedding trip to the Thousand Islands. For travelling, the former wore a coat of navy tricotine and the latter a rose beige ensemble.

Beg Your Pardon.

In Saturday's account of the barn fire near the corner of Woodbine and Cameron, it was stated that Mrs. J. Healey sustained the entire loss of property, hay and livestock. Charles Hunter, tenant, was the owner of the hay and animals lost in the fire.

Miss Mabel Laundon, Toronto, above, and Thomas Nesby of Oshawa Beach who is training for the Wrigley marathon swim, had a trying experience when for six hours they struggled against the heavy seas of Lake Ontario off Oshawa during a storm. Miss Laundon was forced to take of her shoes to bale the water out of their rowboat before they finally made land near Whitby.

HARVESTERS LEAVE TO-DAY

Special Train Will Pull Out Over C. N. R. at Midnight.

"Looks like a big crowd," said J. Skinner of the C.P.R. ticket office when The Examiner asked him this morning about the Harvesters' Excursion from Peterborough. "Already there are thiry tickets sold and we will not know the exact number until the office closes tonight. There is a bigger crowd this year than last season so far. There also have been a lot of inquiries which makes it look big. The fellows who are making applications are mostly young fellows."

The Canadian National Representative said that there is a special trainn leaving at midnight and the number will not be known until the last minute. There are also through Winnipeg cars leaving at 7:15 and 6:20, from the Peterborough station. The number of applications is at present very heavy.

DOCK UNPROTECTED.

No Chain Or Other Support Along Sheer Wall at Lakefield.

Last week a child fell off the Lakefield dock into the water and was almost drowned.

The dock at Lakefield would appear to be rather dangerous. It has a stretch of about 75 yards and if anyone falls off the dock into the water and cannot swim, and nobody is there to help, there is very little chance of them getting out. The front of the dock has no rope or chain for anyone to hang on to and it is too smooth and high for anyone to climb up out of the water.

It would seem good business to have some protection there is case of an accident.

WEDDING BELLS

HENRY—ANDERSON.

Married, in Walkerville, on Saturday, Aug. 18, at 2 p.m., Jean Buchanan, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Anderson, to Gordon William Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Henry of Peterborough.

THOMAS CHARLES WESTLAKE

Terminating a lifetime of 67 years, death came at 5.30 this morning to a well-known resident of Peterborough in the person of Thomas Charles Westlake. Born in Douro Townahip, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Westlake, deceased had come from Bridgenorth to live in Peterborough forty-five years ago, following carpentry as a trade. He was a member of Mark Street United Church and seven years ago suffered a great loss in the death of his wife.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday, August 22, at 2 p.m. from the residence of his brother, William G. Westlake, 149 Rubidge street, to Little Lake Cemetery for interment. The Rev. J. E. Todd of George Street United Church conducing the services.

YOUNG MAN LOSES LIFE IN A BET

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—Betting his companion that he could swim the Ottawa river and completing a pact with him to follow, Edward N. Graves, aged 28, leaped from the Chaudiere bridge into the swirling rapids just below the Chaudiere Falls and was drowned here Saturday night.

George Gordon told the police he had agreed to leap into the river 20 seconds after Graves and race him to shore, nearly a half mile distant. Instead of this when Gordon saw his friend take two or three strokes and then disappear, he raised the alarm. Both the Ontario and Quebec banks of the river in the vicinity were combed throughout the night and yesterday but as yet no trace of Graves' body has been found.

Gordon is being held by the authorities and is to appear before Magistrate Charles Hopewell to-day. No charge had been laid against him last night.

Arrangements have been made with the Northern Electric Company at considerable expense to install a public address system hich will carry the musical program in front of the grand stand to all parts of the stand, so that everyone will be able to hear it to the very best advantage. This system will also, be used in connection with the address by the Hon. John S. Martin in front of the grand stand on Thursday afternoon. No matter where one is seated in the grand stand he will be able to hear without the least effort every word.

The Greater Sheesley Shows, who will have charge of the midway at this year's exhibition, have guaranteed to be ready for the opening, Monday September 10th. Captain Sheesley is carrying seven riding devices, including The Whip, Ferris Wheel, Hey-Dey, Over The Jumps, and The Merry Mixup, and about a dozen Shows of considerable merit.

The demand for space already is greatly in excess of last year, and many outside inquiries for space in the buildings have had to be turned down owing to lack of sufficient accommodation. However, it is hoped that the Exhibition Board will be in a position to erect a splendid new Manufacturers' Building before the 1929 Show.

The objective attendance this year is 45,000 and as the paid admissions totalled something over 42,000 last year, the President and Directors hope, with the co-operation of the public, to add another record to Peterborough's progressive Exhibition.

Patrons of the Exhibition may get four tickets for a dollar at the store of R. Denne, Water street this week. There was a big demand for the tickets this morning and according to Mr. Denne the allotted number of tickets may not last the whole week.

Around the City

A false alarm from Box 45, which is situated at the corner of Smith and George streets caused the firemen their first week-end run, while a chimney fire, breaking out at 6.57 Reid street at 7.16 this morning, required chemicals before being extinguished.

The inquest into the death of the late Carol Butcher, who died as the result of an accident in a local lumber yard, will be held sometime this week, according to Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young.

CANADA'S WATER POWERS VALUABLE

to develop from a country of agricultural and lumbering activity to one of first importance in manufacturing. Without low-priced water power in large quantities the pulp and paper industry could not have been brought to its present position of being second in value of output to all the farm products, nor would it be possible to econmically exploit the mineral resources. Undoubtedly cheap hydro electric power has been an important factor in bringing manufacturing plants to this country. There are already about 1,400 branches of United States factories in Canada.

"Water power development in Canada is not speculative from a financial viewpoint, but is a highly specialized business, and as such it is recognised by the leading financial interests of this continent as a profitable investment. The fact that it is considered a good investment is shown by the developments carried out in the past three years, involving an expenditure of some $200,000,000 for which capital was readily available.

"The growth of the development of water power in Canada is truly marvelous. In 1901 the total development amounted to only 150,000 horsepower. In twenty-five years this grew to the remarkable total of 4,300,000 H.P. Since 1920 the rate of increase avereged about 350,000 H.P. per year. In fact, the amount has doubled since 1920. The bulk of this increase since 1920 has taken place in Ontario and Quebec. Out of two and a half million horsepower developed since that time two million has been in these two provinces. Until 1924 Ontario was in the lead but during the last few years Quebec has stepped out in front with a lead of about 20% more than Ontario.

Mr. Barns then dealt at some length on the power available and developed in the various provinces. He concluded:

"Four years ago I talked to you on my classification—the manufacture of electrical machinery—and at that time I made bold to offer some predictions which were based upon some very broad assumptions. At that time the prediction was made that by 1930 the total installed capacity of waterwheels would be six million horsepower. It will be noted that in November last year the total was nearly five million horsepower and the present business outlook promises well that the average growth of the past seven years will be maintained for another two years—the figures for this year are not yet available, but it is certain to be equal to last years. Three years growth at 300,000 will add close to a million H.P. bringing the total up to six million more or less by 1930.

"At $200 per horsepower this will require a capital outlay of some $60,000,000 per year for power plant buildings, machinery, transmission lines and electrical equipment and appliances to use the electrical power generated by these water powers. A conservative figure for the value of electrical equipment alone is from $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 per year.

"My other prediction was rather more optimistic than the actual facts that have come to pass have justified. It was said that the growth of water power would mean a wage and salary disbursement in Peterborough amounting to some $3,000,000 per year. Figures published last May place the figure for 1927 at $1,861,632. We are still hoping to reach the goal mentioned four years ago.

"The trend in the development of this rich resource of Canada as indicated by the statistics presented indeed point to a bright future for the electrical manufacturing business of this country."

President W. R. Morris occupied the chair and read a card from Fred Roy, who is having the time of his life at Ely, Scotland. Mr. Morris also had words of praise for the editor of the bulletin and was glad to see that the hint was dropped about the membership committee who were to be on their toes from the first of September on.

Rotarian John Crane returned again to the club after the vacation to lead the singing of which he said, if it had not improved there was a lot of noise. Rotarians Ross Dobbin and Bob Abbott tried a little harmony with questionable success during the sing-song.

Rotarian Tom Dutton came in for his share of congratulations when the club sang "It's a Daisy," in honor of Tom's new addition to the family. Rotarian Chris Graham said, "The baby was well bread and by the looks of things Peterborough was going to be a big town and he suggested that they call the baby "Loafer," as Tom would now have to get the dough."

Rotarian James Matthews will handle next week's program. Today's visitors were: Dan Boorman of Buffalo, N.Y., L. Cormand of Dayton, Ohio, and Eric Westbye and Pete Gordon.

COUNCIL CONSIDERS FLOOD RESPONSIBILITY

Anxiety Felt for Safety of Fliers

Cutter To Take Up Quest

Coastguard Will Follow Route Fliers Were Expected to Take.

GRAVE ANXIETY FELT

May Have Made Forced Landing Somewhere in Greenland.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press).—Their radio signals unheard for more than 36 hours, grave anxiety was felt last night by the Rockford, Ills., backers of the good will flight from Rockford to Stockholm, Sweden, of Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer.

The most optimistic including relatives of the aviators believed that the fliers, last heard from Sunday morning at four o'clock, Chicago daylight time, have made a forced landing somewhere in Greenland when they failed to attain their objective at Mount Evans. In this case days might elapse before the two men fought their way to a point where they might communicate with the outside world.

Steps were taken during the day to search for the airmen when the coastguard cutter, Marion, now near the route they were expected to take, was ordered to take up the quest. The Marion is of Cape Chidley and the radio expert from the monoplane "Greater Rockford," picked up Sunday morning indicated the plane's position at that time as about 75 miles off this cape.

The flier who left Rockford on Thursday after once failing to get away, made the first leg of their journey to Cochrane, Ont., without incident, and left Cochrane Saturday noon on the second 800 mile lap to Mount Evans. Intermittent radio reports giving their position were heard until four o'clock Sunday morning when the signals indicating the position off Cape Chidley were picked up.

The plane was due at Mount Evans a few hours later but did not land and no further word has been heard from it. Relatives of the fliers manifested their concern yesterday when Hassell's mother and brother motored from Rockford to Madison to ascertain if radio operators there who had been picking up signals had received further word.

205 FROM HERE AS HARVESTERS

WOMEN ON BOARD.

The reports from the local ticket offices of both the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways show that there was a large number of harvesters left Peterborough for the west. There were seventy five from the Canadian National and one hundred and thirty from the C.P.R. making a total of 205 for the city and district delegation.

Special trains leaving both the C.N.R. and C.P.R. stations were well filled. The special leaving the C.N.R. had two hundred and fifty on board when it left the depot including harvesters from Belleville, Campbellford, Hastings and Keene. This train, leaving the station at midnight, travels to Orillia and thence to the main line and straight through to Winnipeg.

The special train leaving the C.P.R. station was made up here and by the time it reached Medonte Junction on the main line there were 335 in the cars.

On the C.P.R. special there was a special car for the women which was well filled twenty five tickets being sold at the local ticket office. The C.N.R. sold two tickets to women of this district.

J. Skinner of the C.P.R. said that last year they sold only a hundred tickets to their hundred and thirty this year. The harvesters this year are mostly young fellows who appear to be of very good class and who appear to be very intelligent.

The next excursions for the West leave on August the 31st from both depots. A special through car leaves the Canadian National station and arrangements are being completed for transportation over the C.P.R. lines for that date.

EX-RAILROAD MAN, 100, WANTS A THIRD WIFE

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—Thomas Gallagher celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary Sunday by announcing that he was ready to marry for the third time if he could find "the right kind of a red-headed girl." Rubbing his hand reflectively through the fringe of white hair on his head, he added:

"I used to be red-headed myself. I prefer a red-headed girl because they are more fiery."

Mr. Gallagher, the oldest pensioner of the Long Island Railroad, lives with a son.

He is active mentally and physically, takes a daily walk, carrying a black-thorn stick which has been in the family for 300 years. He frequently reads all night.

Speaking as a veteran railroader, Mr. Gallagher said he believed he would see airplanes competing with the railroads in transporting freight and passengers. He has never ridden in a plane, because, as he says:

"No one ever asked me to, but I would go up in one in a minute if I had the chance."

Above are shown photographs of those involved in the desperate struggle which took place outside the Jackson farm, at Waubamic, near Parry Sound, following the robbery of the mails of a Vancouver-bound train. This resulted in the death of an innocent farmer, Thomas Jackson, the capture of Burowski, a train bandit, and the wounding of two public spirited citizens, Walter and Haughton Laird, who chased the bandits to recover a stolen automobile. The photographs are: (1) Thomas Jackson, the murdered farmer; (2) Claude Jackson, his eldest son, who, with his father, went innocently to haul the stolen car out of the ditch; (3) is Burowski, now in Parry Sound charged with murder; (4) is Allen Jackson, the murdered farmer's youngest son; (5) is Haughton Laird, wounded in the hand by a bandit bullet; (6) shows H. J. Rolland, who subdued Burowski with the aid of a monkey wrench and (7) is Walter Laird, taken in bed in the hospital. Walter was the first to grapple with the bandit; he received a bullet wound in the chest but will recover.—All photos copyright.

COMMITTEE WILL CONSIDER CHANGES IN HOSPITAL BOARD

City Council and Trustees Appoint Members To Discuss Matter.

NO CRITICISM.

Aldermen Think Board Capable But They Ought To Be Represented On It.

The composition of the Nicholls' Hospital Board and the possibility of giving more direct representation on it to the City Council were thoroughly discussed at a meeting between the board and the council in the committee room at the city hall last night, along with other issues such as the proportion of patients from outside the city and the possibility of charging them more. Finally a committee was appointed, the council's representatives being the Mayor, Aldermen Hamilton and Greene, and City Solicitor Wearing.

The board at present consists of two representatives from St. Paul's Church, two from St. Andrew's, and one from each of the other Protestant churches in the city, with the Mayor, and its constitution is fixed by an act of the Ontario Legislature, passed in 1887. It was claimed that this was an unweildly body, and His Worship Mayor Denne suggested a smaller board of about five members, on which the council would have representatives, but John Crane pointed out that the Kingston Hospital Board consists of sixty men, with a management committee of six.

Later, at a meeting of the City Council, the by-law calling for the issue of debentures for the $300,000 asked by the board was given two readings, the third to follow confirmation by the citizens, if given, in the vote on September 26. The by-law for taking the vote was laid over until a special meeting from the council to be held on August 31, and the committee from the council will meet one from the board in the meantime.

There were present: E. B. Fowler, E. P. Mason, H. J. McCannon, R. L. Dobbin, R. J. Kidd, J. J. Turner, Dr. J. M. McCulloch, R. Fair, T. Brown, V. Eastwood, B. F. Ackerman, W. Langford and J. Crane of the Hospital Board; Mayor Denne and Aldermen Phelan, Cotton, Stocker, Huffman, McIntyre, Hamilton, Ackerman, Greene, and Lowe.

Not Opposed to Extension

"We are supplementing the gift Mrs. Nicholls made, and we don't want anyone to think we're opposed to the extension, but we want to get it straightened out. We think we should have a smaller board, with representatives on it from the council," said Mayor Denne, in introducing the matter.

E. P. Mason: "Have we authority or has the council, to alter the constitution of the board?"

Mr. Mason: "What would be the advantages of a smaller board?"

"It is easier to get together."

Ald. Huffman: "I don't think any member of the council is in any way dissatisfied with the hospital board but the old arrangement was made forty years ago and the money was Mrs. Nicholls to deal with as she pleased. Now, the council is supplementing Mrs. Nicholls' money."

Conditions Still Hold

Dr. McCulloch: "The hospital was given to the city by Mrs. Nicholls under certain conditions, which are still in force. I feel that the board, as at present constituted is as representative of the citizens as is the council.

Gate Fell On Truck; Hand Signal In Use

When the watchman of the Simcoe Street C.N.R. crossing dropped the gates to protect passing vehicles from a yard engine yesterday morning, he failed to note that one of Walter Oke's fruit trucks was still within the enclosure, with the result that one of the long arms of the gates caught on the truck and was completely snapped off near its steel base.

Until the gate is repaired, the old reliable hand "Stop" sign has been resurrected and shoved into the duties of its more modern but injured successor.

CITY'S BEAUTIES NOT EXPLOITED

LIKES OTONABEE RIVER.

R. Hoskin Duce, licensed real estate broker, of Hollywood, accompanied by his wife, is now in the city, the guest of Mrs. Duce's sister, Mrs. John Stanger, Stewart street.

Mr. Duce and his wife motored to Peterborough from Los Angeles and were fourteen days en route, travelling in all 3,867 miles. Of the fourteen days three days were lost owing to car trouble and sight seeing.

Like all Californians Mr. Duce is extremely optimistic about his State. The one thing that impressed him on his trip east was the very great difference in the appearance of cities after he left California. In Los Angeles and Hollywood, buildings of every description had a very bright and very clean appearance. Through the Eastern States, with the exception of Cleveland, they appeared weather beaten and black in comparison with California.

He is very much impressed with Peterborough and the district surrounding here. Being a real estate broker he naturally looked at it from that standpoint, and felt that we should capitalize our wonderful resources here for accommodating the tourists to a far greater extent than we have.

Los Angeles, he says, has increased in popualtion 800,000 in the past six years and during that time 120,000 single residences have been build, exclusive of apartments, shops, hotels, or manufacturing plants.

He further states that the future of the State is assured through its manufacturing, the oil industry and the moving picture industry.

With friends Mr. and Mrs. Duce enjoyed a sail down the Otonabee last week, and he feels that we do not appreciate the beauty of this river. If it could only be transplanted to California it would be hard to estimate its value.

Mr. Duce was a resident of Victoria, B.C., for fourteen years, went overseas with the Canadians and passed through this way in 1919 when on his way to the coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Duce will visit with Mr. and Mrs. Stanger, and Mrs. Duce is meeting many old friends.

Special Delivery Letter For C.P.C. Opened By Robbers On Saturday

Peterborough had a role to play in the C. P. R. hold--up early Saturday morning. A special delivery letter from Winnipeg arrived at the offices of The Canadian Packing Company on Monday morning accompanied by a post office notice that the letter had been in the hold-up.

The letter was expected to arrive on Saturday and when it did not employees at the C.P.C. wondered at the delay. However-ing it and the appearance of the letter explained the delay.

Torn and mutilated and opened at one end the letter arrived. It is thought that it was one that had been opened during the three hours the bandits were in the car and then laid aside as it con-tained no ready money.

Albert E. White, acting postmaster, told The Examiner that no details had been sent with the letter except that it had been in the hold-up.

PRINCE LEAVES FOR VANCOUVER

Is Treated As Private Citizen During Stay in Winnipeg.

ENJOYS GAMES.

WINNIPEG, August 21. Canadian Press. — Prince George, the third son of King George, proceeded westward last night for Vanocuver, where he will join H.M.S. Durbar. After a day of inofrmal activities in Winnipeg, at his own request, the Prince was treated as a private citizen and no special functions were arranged in his honor. He played squash racquets in the morning, later he went on a sight-seeing trip around city, and then played golf.

ENNISMORE SOCIAL TOMORROW EVENING

Dinner Will Be Served From Five O'clock On—Extra Accommodation.

There will be a general exodus from Peterborough to-morrow afternoon, Wednesday, August 22nd, to attend the Lawn Social and Fowl Supper to be given by the parishioners of St. Martin's Church, Ennismore.

The dinner is served from 5 until 8.30 o'clock, and extra dining room accommodation has been provided.

This is one of the last of the summer lawn socials in the city, and a big crowd is expected as the people of Ennismore make wonderful hosts.

HORSE IS SHOT WHEN INJURED

Old Show Animal Has Leg Broken in Collision With Car.

ON GEORGE STREET.

"Trevis," fifteen years ago the pride of his owner as a show horse, met an untimely death shortly after 1.30 this afternoon. Proceeding north on George Street, driven by his owner, Robert Bugg, of 61 Wolseley Street, the horse collided with a motor car driven by W. D. Robson, London Street, and sustained a fracture of the left hind leg, which necessitated his being done away with by a police officer soon after.

Dr. W. T. Rogers, veterinary, had arrived, and though the leg was bandaged by him in the hope that "Trevis" might reach home, the injured horse was able to hobble only to the corner of Water and McDonnel Streets, where he was mercifully shot.

NORTHUMBERLAND REGIMENT TO TRAIN

Under the command of Lt.-Col. Neilson of Norwood, the Northumberland Regiment will entrain at Cobourg to-morrow for Barriefield Camp, where it will remain until September 1st. This regiment was formed after the war to replace the old 40th Regiment. It will join in a period of intensive training with other units. Captain G. A. H. Trudeau, District Weapon Training Officer, will be in charge of the camp.

MARY GARDEN DENIES SHE IS TO WED WRITER

NICE, France, Aug. 21 (A.P.).—Mary Garden denies reports that she was engaged to be married to Pierre Plessis, a young French journalist and author.

"He is my friend but I am not getting married yet," the celebrated diva told the Associated Press.

Rumors in Paris were to the effect that the engagement has been announced at a dinner given aboard the yacht on which Miss Garden and M. Plessis are guests for a Mediterranean cruise.

Herbert M. Johnson, business manager for the Chicago Opera Company, returned from Europe on the Cunarder Aquitania and said he had been surprised to received a radio from a Chicago newspaper that day, asking if Mary Garden was engaged to marry Pierre Plessis.

"During my long connection with grand opera I have heard so many rumors from time to time about Mary Garden's engagements that I have ceased to take them seriously. I know young Plessis and his father.

The last time I spoke with Miss Garden on the Continent she told me that she might return to America late in October or in November as her season with the Chicago Opera Company does not commence until after Christmas."

Refuses To Believe Her Husband Is Dead

BEAULIEU, France, Aug. 21—(Canadian Press). — Her confidence in what she terms her telepathic knowledge that her husband is still alive is so great that Mrs. P. S. Fawcett, wife of the lost British explorer, scoffs at reports of his death.

"For years I have followed his wanderings in South America by mental telepathy," she says, "and I am sure that I would know immediately of his death."

MAIL ROBBERY SUSPECT HELD

REWARD CONSIDERED.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press)—Inspector Miller of the Provincial Police to-day received word from Burwash that Burwash prison guards have arrested a man from a train passing through that district and that he answers the description of the bandit who is sought following the robbery of the transcontinental C.P.R. train and the killing of Thomas Jackson, Waubamick farmer, on Saturday.

The suspect will be held at Burwash until a Provincial policeman arrives from Sudbury to take him into custody.

May Offer Reward.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario, intimated today that while it has not been finally decided, it is likely that the Government will offer a reward for information leading to the arrest of the fugitive mail car bandit now free in the bush, following the Parry Sound robbery.

Mr. Price feels that the three young men who captured the bandit now under arrest are worthy of recognition. "They were very plucky in tackling a man who was armed when their only weapon was a wrench and a piece of iron," he said.

Enlarge Area.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Aug. 21. — (Special to The Examiner).—With the belief that the fugitive mail car bandit has broken through the cordon of police thrown about the northern bush to which he first dashed early last Saturday morning, the police dragnet is now spreading over a tremendous instead of an isolated district.

"The man escaped before the officers arrived," it was stated from a reliable source to-day. "When he disappeared into the bush he made his way to the railroad tracks and was out of the woods before the officers had time to take up their guards."

The bandit had numerous opportunities to clear the province once he got west of Parry Sound. Instead of staying in the bush, cowed with fear, the man apparently realized his position, made his way to the railroad tracks, jumped a passing freight train and cleared out.

BOARD OF HEALTH ORDERS SEWER CONNECTIONS MADE

Members Determined That All Houses Possible Will Have Sanitary Conveniences.

CITY AIDS IN PAYMENT.

Householders Unable To Finance Work May Pay For It In Five Instalments.

Peterborough's Board of Health at its regular monthly meeting this morning, made a determined effort to have the property holders of this city install sanitary conveniences. All through the city sewers have been built and a great deal of money spent, but still there remain many homes that are not connected to the sewer. The Board of Health, acting in the interest of the health of the community, is determined that where possible to connect to the sewer, the property holder must carry out the necessary provisions and make the connections. In cases where the holder is not able to pay for the connections the City Solicitor is instructed to investigate and if the property is worth making the connections the city will pay for the work, the property holder paying it back in five equal instalments in his taxes.

The city has put in the sewer on Smith and Harvey Streets in response to requests from numerous citizens, and a considerable amount of money was spent in installing a pumping station, but as yet only a few of the residents have made the connections. Several names were turned over to Mr. Wearing, he being instructed to write a final letter to the property holders, telling them to start work within seven days, and if they do not, to take action through the police court. All the residents on Euclid Avenue whose homes are not connected will be ordered to make the proper connections and in many other places of the city, residents will receive notice.

Sanitary Inspector C. S. Stapleton was appointed delegate to the Sanitary Inspectors' Convention in Hamilton this fall. Mr. Stapleton will invite the convention to this city for its annual meeting next year.

The Queen Mary Hospital report for the month of July showed three patients in the hospital at the beginning of the month. During the month three were admitted and two discharged.

SUES TOWNSHIP FOR ROAD LEVY

Samuel Armstrong Demands Refund As Work Was Never Done.

Samuel Armstrong of the Township of Otonabee is suing the Township for $2,270 and accrued interest. In 1922 a special levy was made by the Township Council to collect sufficient money to build the Block road which runs directly east from Lock bridge. This money was to be set aside in a special fund. As the road was never built, Mr. Armstrong is suing for $2,270. Joseph Wearing is acting for the plaintiff. The case in all probability will be heard in October before the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose.

The Block road issue has come up at the recent municipal elections, when hot debates have been held, but it is only recently that the whole thing has been brought to a head.

Ackerman Damage Suit

Company Offers To Settle For $9,000 If Bridge Is Raised.

SOLICITOR TO REPORT.

Notified that the B. F. Ackerman Company would settle its damage suit against the city for $18,000 damages caused by the spring freshets in the creek back of the factory, for $9,000 provided the Dalhousie Street bridge is raised, and such other steps taken as will prevent the recurrence of such a flood, the Council decided last night to take no steps until City Solicitor Joseph Wearing has gone into the matter from a legal standpoint and submitted a report.

The bridge alterations would cost approximately $2,000, exclusive of side walk changes and property damage, according to City Engineer R. H. Parsons, and would increase the capacity of the channel beneath 30 per cent. Mr. Parsons also reported that the bridge is now larger than the C.P.R. bridge a short distance down stream.

Mr. Wearing reported verbally last night that from his understanding of the happening, the damage to the Ackerman plant had not been caused by any fault of the city. There had been no such occurrence in the past thirty years, and he classed it with the Mississippi and Thames floods as being a natural event for which no person could be held responsible.

Speaking on the suggestion that the city build a wall along the creek back of the Ackerman property, Mayor Denne stated that the city could not do such work on private property. When one of the aldermen suggested that permission would be forthcoming, His Worship replied that this was not the difficulty, but that others would expect the city to build walls on their property, whereas many property owners along the creek have already erected walls at their own expense.

If the city built the bridge it would have to guarantee then that there would be no further flood, he added, while Ald. Lowe remarked that he had been present the night of the overflow and believed that the water would have gone into the factory if there had been no bridge at Dalhousie Street. The cause was high water in the lake and river, the Mayor contended.

Must Enforce Laws.

Discussion of non-observance of the fire by-law calling for the inspection of all garages before opening, and of failures to take out building permits for construction coming under that provision of the building by-law made it clear that the alderman expect the City Engineer and Fire Chief to enforce the law, laying informations against those who fail to observe it if necessary.

It was stated that many persons under-value the construction to be carried out because of the idea that the

BALCONY RAIL FALLS TO WALK

Young Lady Has Narrow Escape As Iron Drops 15 Feet.

ON HUNTER STREET.

Falling from the height of about fifteen feet from the first story of a building on Hunter street west, owned by the Dickson estate and occupied by the Peterborough Lumber Company, the whole front of an iron balcony crashed to the street, breaking into hundreds of pieces as it struck the sidewalk.

Miss Rutherford, who is employed at the lumber company's office, had just entered the building when the iron frame, carrying part of the wood work with it, was hurled to the sidewalk. She considers herself lucky in her narrow escape.

Employees of the lumber office believe that the balcony had become weakened and the vibration set up by the trucks and heavy busses had loosened it. A bus had passed just before it fell and it is thought that its vibration was the immediate cause of the fall.

A barricade was immediately erected around the spot and a number of curious spectators were surveying the ruins on the walk.

The remainder of the balcony which threateningly overhung the street after the railing fell, was removed shortly after the crash this morning by the owners of the building and there remains now only the supporting arms.

ROAD BLOWS INTO FIELDS

Peterborough-Lakefield Road in Bad Shape at Present Time.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

(Examiner Correspondence).

LAKEFIELD, August 21.—There are numerous complaints about the condition of the Peterborough-Lakefield road, which is certainly in poor shape at the very time when the traffic is greatest, and tourists (judging from their conversation) have long memories for bad roads. The dust is almost unbearable, and a goodly portion of the road blows into the adjoining fields each day. In many places the road is, figuratively speaking, almost down to the bones, and the part which is still clay, with no sign of a gravel top dressing, is blowing away. If the work could be carried on in such a manner that the top dressing could be put on as soon as the preliminary work is done, rod by rod, money would be saved and tourists would speak well of our community and return, bringing their friends along. A coat of oil would allay the dust nuisance, which makes travel on this section of the road, a horror instead of the pleasure it should be.

Winners Announced.

On Thursday evening the drawing for the special prizes in connection with St. Paul's social took place in the Holy Name Society rooms, Misses Kathleen Lawless and Mary Allen doing the drawing.

The silver tea service was won by F. O'Connor of Douro. The sack of sugar by Miss Emma Dwyer of Lakefield. The centre piece was won by Mrs. P. J. Scollard of Peterborough.

Sunday School Picnic.

The Sunday school picnic of the Presbyterian Sunday School took place on Friday afternoon to Hague's Point and was very successful. The trip over was made by motor cars and truck and children and adults

HARVESTERS LEAVE.

About 40 Men From Campbellford District Are Going West.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—One minute after midnight last night saw the town and district minus approximately forty men. The occasion was the departure of a harvester special for the west, which left here at that hour. The train came from Belleville and will proceed through to Winnipeg, stopping to pick up passengers as it proceeds.

BOY BITTEN BY BIG DOG

Paul Stanley, 4, Requires Medical Aid After Attack by Collie.

AT BETHANY

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, Aug. 21.—On Saturday afternoon Paul Stanley, four-year-old son of Mrs. Joe Stanley, Toronto, who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Cairns, was rather badly bitten by a big collie dog owned by Mr. Cairns.

The little lad liked the big dog as a playmate and heretofore they have always got along well together, although the dog showed antipathy to strangers, but Saturday the dog was lying on the grass and Paul lay down beside him with his head on the dog. It is not known whether in lying down the child pulled the dog's hair or not but the dog sprang up and began to snap and snarl at the smal boy. Despite his efforts to pull away, the dog kept after him and it took the combined efforts of the mother and a man who was calling on the family to get the child and dog parted. It was found the child needed medical aid and Dr. Hamilton asked that the dog be disposed of for fear of a re-occurance of the same thing with perhaps more serious results.

COMPETITION KEEN FOR TEAM PLACES

Much Interest Shown in Junior Judging Contests at Royal Fair.

Increased interest promises keen competition among the youthful farmers of the district who aspire to represent Peterborough at the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto. Details of the judging competitions at the big winter event have come to hand at the Department of Agriculture office, George street, and already they have been sent out to prospective competitors by the local representative, J. B. Nelson.

The Royal competitions this year will be laregr in every way than last year. Boys in the County of Peterborough who are between 16 and 23 years ofage on October 1, 1928, and who have never been on a county judging team to the Royal, and who were not "Royal" winners in 1927, will be eligible. They will be called upon to judge the regular classes of livestock, and also one class of oats, barley, alsike and potatoes, prizes being awarded on aggregate scores only. 50 per cent. to be allowed for placing,

Members of McLean Government Returning To Private Life In Various Spheres

VICTORIA, B.C., Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. J. D. McLean left the Premiership of British Columbia yesterday to go fishing. Immediately on tendering his resignation he took his automobile and drove out to his summer camp at Brentwood to join his family for a complete holiday of two weeks, the first he has had in 12 years of public office.

Hon. T. D. Pattullo, former Minister of Lands, the only other member of the original government, will remain in Victoria, his future plans have not yet been announced.

Former Attorney-General A. M. Mason will return to the practice of law in Vancouver.

Hon. E. D. Barrow, former Minister of Agriculture, is going back to the Fraser Valley to his new farm in the Sumas Reclamation area. He is abandoning politics permanently for farming.

Hon. W. H. Sutherland, former Minister of Public Works, will return to medical practice. He is now taking a vacation in Nova Scotia.

Hon. Dugal Donaghy, former Minister of Finance, will continue his law practice in Vancouver, as will Hon. Ian McPherson, former Provincial Secretary.

BETHANY MAN CUT BY BINDER

Wess Steer Has Bad Gash in Leg, Requiring Six Stitches.

WAS ADJUSTING MACHINE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, August 21—Wess Steer met with rather a painful accident on Saturday afternoon. He was working the binder in a field of grain, when it was found necessary to make some adjustment and he got off the binder but did not lock the knife. As he was passing around the machine the horses moved forward with the result that Mr. Steer received a bad gash in the leg requiring six stitches to close the wound. This comes at a rather hard time in the harvest season, when help is very hard to get and the grain all ready to cut. Mr. Steer did not have any hired help.

A number of farmers have finished cutting their grain and are threshing in the field owing to the lack of barn room.

Personals.

PAVING WORK IS DELAYED

Shaft of Mixer Breaks, Holding Up Operations For Several Hours.

WEST SIDE FINISHED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 21. — Surfacing operations had to be suspended yesterday when a two inch shaft in the elevator of the heating and mixing plant broke. Another shaft was in the stores at the plant, and it was immediately put into the place of the broken part. The plant was ready again when seven o'clock arrived in the morning.

At the time the break occurred, every effort was being made to finish the surfacing on the west side of the river. There still remains several yards to cover. When this is done the street gang will move to the Stirling road, and begin the east work there.

Lately there has been some little difficulty in keeping the supply of sand at the heating plant, and on the past two Sundays the trucks have worked all day hauling from the pit to the plant. The breakdown yesterday afforded another opportunity to replenish the supply, and all the trucks were put at that work.

LADIES' AID MEETS.

Routine Business Discussed at Regular Meeting of Society.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, August 21.—The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity church met on Thursday afternoon in the Sunday school room. The president, Mrs. W. Henderson, occupied the chair. The meeting opened in the usual manner followed by the Scripture reading from Psalm 24 by Mrs. E. Bradburn and prayer by Mrs. R. Poast. The members were well pleased with the amount of money raised through a canvas of the congregation rather than holding a garden party, which amount was reported by the treasurer.

It was decided to make no improvements to the basement this year with the exception of the purchasing of new shades for the lights.

The banqueting of the Masonic Order early in October was dismissed but was left over until a special meeting on Thursday evening, August 23, at 7.30 o'clock. Mr. R. Poast was appointed to level the back lawn and repair the fence.

Mrs. E. Bradburn closed the meeting with prayer.

Miss Doris Sandy is spending the week-end in Ottawa.

COUNCIL PASSES PAVING BY-LAWS

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Councillors Cole and Wiggins were the only members not present at the special meeting of the town council, held in the clerk's office last night. D. J. Lynch, town solicitor, and the paving engineers were also present. The session was a quiet one as compared to the last regular meeting. The only interesting feature from a spectator's point of view was when Deputy Reeve Davidson, Councillor Stone and Councillor O'Sullivan got into a three-cornered argument regarding the cost of the pavement and who should be the proper persons to foot the bill. The main business of the meeting was to pass by-laws and receive the report of the engineer regarding the pavement.

Dr. H. O. Richardson approached the council regarding the pavement at the interesection in front of the Baptist Church. He asked that it be extended so as to cover the intersection and accommodate the foot traffic. The number of pedestrians which crosses the street at this point is very large, the doctor pointed out. The water and slush was at times five inches deep over the sidewalk and a slight alteration to the pavement on the street would, he thought, overcome this condition. The council expressed themselves as generally in favor of granting the request. They did not think the work at this particular point looked like a "finished job." No action was taken last night, but the council agreed to view the proposed work in the morning.

This was the only request to be put before the council and the passing of by-laws was the next order of business. Councillor Stone and Councillor Abernethy presented the necessary by-laws for the extension of the paving on Front street north to the intersection of Front and Ranney. Reeve Bygott and Councillor O'Sullivan presented the by-laws necessary for the water main on Centre street. Councillors Wilkinson presented the by-laws for the sewer and water main on Front street south. These by-laws, six in all, were dealt with separately, passed, signed, and sealed.

Councillor O'Sullivan wanted to know whether or not a by-law should be prepared to protect the pavement from becoming marked by tractors and traction engines. The question arose from the fact that some days ago, a machine of the tractor type was driven along a portion of the Hastings road, and some damage was done to the surface of the street. D. J. Lynch, solicitor for the town, read portions of the Highways Traffic Act which had bearing on the matter, and it was decided that the Act covered the requirements of the town and that its provisions would be enforced. Official notice to this effect will appear in the local press.

The matter of a refund of business tax was discussed briefly and it was decided that there could be no refund allowed according to the statutes. The request was made under the transient traders' sections.

A unique situation arose when Deputy Reeve Davidson presented a petition to have River street from Mill to Front street paved. It is a matter of one hundred and fifty feet approximately, and the petition was not sufficiently signed. The law re-

GARDEN PARTY HELD AT ZION

SOFTBALL GAME

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Aug. 21 (Examiner Correspondence). — Fortune surely smiled upon the Zion garden party on Thursday evening, when the weatherman was upon his best behavior and this coupled with the already famous reputation of Zion social, served to fill the spacious grounds at Simpson's Grove to overflowing. Over two hundred and twenty dollars was taken at the gates, the largest on record, while all the booths did a sell-out business. George Brunton as gate-keeper of the ice-cream parlor, was the busiest man on the grounds, while the grocery stand and bazaar were cleaned out before the crowd had decided to take leave.

Northumberland Regiment Band provided music and this entertainment could be enjoyed to the full by those resting on the benches provided under the shelter of the pines.

Before darkness set in the softball team from English Line played an interesting game with the locals. At The Line garden party three weeks ago, The Peterick's team met a 7 to 3 reverse and so were out to even up which they did in no uncertain manner, pounding G. Anderson's offering for 18 runs, while R. Fry, on the mound, only let in six counters, half of these being on an error. Maybee, regular pitcher for The Line, was an absentee, being engaged in the Town League finals, but with the locals' batting eye opened, it is doubtful if he could have stemmed the tide. G. Kerr got the longest hit, a triple to deep centre, in the fourth. In the third inning, thirteen of the home team batted, and in the fourth, eleven faced the pitcher; either innings'

Word of the Minister's intention to inspect the entire waterway next summer, prompted the declaration of Mr. Stinson, who is also managing secretary of the Association.

INDIGESTION, GAS AND SEVERE PAIN

Of the thousands of people whom Tanlac has saved from the misery of Indigestion and Stomach Trouble, none are more grateful than Mr. Fred Hill, 349 Thames St., London, Ont. "I had about given out altogether," he says, "and was going down hill so fast that I thought nothing could stop me. I ate only two light meals a day and even then suffered untold agonies from indigestion, gas and pains that just doubled me up. My nerves were wrecked; every bone in my body ached: I could not sleep; and just felt sick all over.

"Tanlac fixed me up so I could eat anything from soup to dessert without having indigestion. All my other troubles vanished like smoke. I picked up twelve pounds and never felt better. I never thought anything could do for me what Tanlac did."

Tanlac corrects Stomach Trouble and builds up the whole system because it is nature's own remedy for the sick—roots, barks and herbs. Remember, your money back if it doesn't help you; so get a bottle at your druggist's to-day.

COUNTIES GIVE SCHOLARSHIPS

Northumberland and Durham Will Give $50 Each to Two Boys.

TO ATTEND O.A.C.

The counties of Northumberland and Durham have agreed to contribute the sum of $50 to send one boy from Durham and one boy from Northumberland to the Ontario Agricultural College. Some time ago it was announced that the O.A.C. at Guelph would give a scholarship of $50 to a junior farmer from each county provided the county council would give a similar amount. The scholarship is to be given a boy entering the two year course and will be given in the first year only. Junior farms in the county who are planning to go to Guelph are asked to make application to the Agriculture representative and he along with the warden and one other will be a committee to select the boy to win the scholarship.

CLERKS WIN TITLE AGAIN

FINAL SCORE 15-5.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21.—Hundreds of people were on hand last night to witness the crushing defeat that was meted out to the Outlaw nine by the Clerks. The game was also for the benefit of players injured during the season. By their victory last night, the Clerks have the honor of holding the Campbellford Cloth Company's trophy for another year. This is the third consecutive season that the cup has been in their possession.

After the first innings the Clerks began to establish a wide lead which seemed to shatter the morale of the Outlaws and in the fifth frame they went to pieces and allowed the Clerks to tally seven runs. Fred Ingram, Outlaws, was up to his usual batting form and won the cheers from the fans when he drove a home run in the fifth. Runions also wan applause for a snappy catch in the infield. After the smoke of battle cleared, the score was fifteen to five for the Counter Hoppers.

In the first innings, the Outlaws scored one run, while the Clerks managed only to get a man as far as third base. In the second, Runions was caught out on a foul, McArthur walked, and the Clerks counted twice before Cooke was put out at the plate and the side retired. It was when the Clerks took the field that Runions shot into the air to grab off a hot one that won the approval of the fans. Cooke dropped a catch at second and allowed Outlaw runners to be safe at both first and second.

The fourth frame was without much color. The Clerks got three more runs, and the Outlaws were struck out, one, two, three. In the fifth Denike and Blake were caught out on flies, but Runions' three-bagger brought Gay home and McArthurs's single brought in Runions. The Outlaws seemed to have lost control and the Clerks got seven counters, making their total fifteen. Ingram got his opportunity to bow to the grandstand when he hit a home run with two men out and one man on base. Eddie Bush, who followed Ingram, was struck out and the side retired.

The sixth was a no hit no run frame. The only man to get on a base was Johnston. He managed to get there on the usual four balls. The light was beginning to fail and the players began to relax. So listless was their play that Tinney, umpiring at the plate, threatened to call the game unless there was some improvement. The Outlaws snapped into it and got two more runs to make a final total of five.

OBITUARY

JAMES SAVIGAY LAING.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, Aug. 21.—The funeral of James Savigay Laing on Thursday afternoon testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held in the community. The Royal Lodge I.O. O.F. No. 286 attended in a body and many other friends gathered for the service in the United Church, which was in charge of his pastor, Rev. W. R. Archer. The floral tributes were extremely numerous and spoke eloquently of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

Mr. Laing, who was 57 years of age, came to Havelock about thirty-five years ago. For some years he conducted a bakery business. After disposing of his business he went into the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. He was also a member of Dorcas Rebekah Lodge No. 98.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two daughters, Marjorie, of Toronto, and Winnie, of Vancouver; three sons, Douglas of North Bay, Archibald of Toronto, and William of town; three brothers: Eben of Norwood, William of Milwaukee, and John of Toronto; four sisters: Mrs. H. Hunter of Lakefield, Mrs. Johnson, and Miss M. Laing of Peterborough, and Mrs. Beavis of Hastings.

BASIL FITZGERALD.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, August 21.—The sympathy of the entire community is extended to Mrs. John Fitzgerald, now of Toronto but formerly of Millbrook, and also her sisters, Mrs. J. R. Eakins and Mrs. E. Whyte, on account of the sad bereavement sustained through the sudden death of her eldest son, Basil Fitzgerald, which occurred on Friday, August 10, at an early morning hour.

Deceased had been in his usual good health, and was preparing to go to business for the day when he apparently had a weak turn, and while lying down resting, his death took place. His mother was the first to come into the room and find that he had passed quietly away. The other immediate survivors are two sisters, Mrs. Wellington Pickup and Miss Matie Fitzgerald, and two brothers, Bruce and Douglas, all of Toronto.

The funeral took place on Monday, Rev. Mr. Morley being in charge of the service. Interment was in Prospect cemetery. Mrs. E. Whyte, Dr. Bruce Whyte, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Eakins attended the funeral, as did also many former Millbrook friends now residing in Toronto. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Special arrangements by the Department of Agriculture will place the trip within reach of any boy, whatever his circumstances, for railway fare from home station to Toronto and return will be provided free of charge, as will be lodging accommodation for four nights (Tuesday, November 20 to Friday, November 23, inclusive. Meals will also be free and sleeping berths and meals will be provided for those who must travel two hundred miles or more by train.

To Enjoy Tour.

The Department will spare no effort to entertain as well as instruct all members of the many judging teams that will go to the Royal Winter Fair this year, a program having been drawn up already whereby the boys will be taken on a comprehensive tour of the city, as well as visit the Union Stock Yards, as a study of the great fair. Transportation while carrying out the program will be arranegd and the beauty of the whole thing is that the winning of this trip does not debar the entrant from winning any of the prizes offered in the regular livestock competition.

The owner of the property on the south side of the street had not signed. Thus the petition will either have to be signed by all the property owners or be lost. It will be brought up again if the signature necessary to make it legal, is secured.

Mr. Keffer, engineer, reported on the cost of the pavement. He claimed that he had stated in the beginning that the cost could be kept down to $35,000 per mile, if the middle ten feet of the roadway was fit to use as a base. But it had developed that seventy-five per cent of the job had to be rebuilt and this would keep the cost up.

Labor Day—Next Shoot.

The next shoot at the Lakefield Rifle Range will take place on Labor Day. Members of the club are urged to avail themselves of this opportunity to have a pleasant half day's sport.

Play Ground Sets Bought.

The School Board have installed a set of play ground equipment at the school grounds and are arranging for more in the future. The first step in this direction was made last year when the toboggan slides were installed and the good work is going on and will continue as the years advance. More than five hundred dollars has been spent on the outfit (including the toboggan slides) and the Board feel that the results have repaid the outlay.

Band Concert.

The Citizens' Band gave a very much appreciated open air concert on Thursday evening and the warm weather drew out scores of people to enjoy the music and cool off after one of the hottest days of the season.

Mrs. Alsdorf Honored.

Miss Wilson entertained a number of relatives on Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Mary Alsdorf, of Medford, Oregon, who is visiting her brother, Mrs. W. H. Casement.

Mrs. Farguharson Honored.

Mrs. W. W. Yale entertained at a delightful thimble party on Friday evening, August 10, in honor of her sister, Miss Farguharson, of Chatham, who has been her guest.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Richardson, of Peterborough, were in the village on Thursday visiting friends.

Misses Theo Elmsley, Billy Mackenzie, Constance Stuart and Barbara Devet, Alan, Harry and Kenneth Dawson, Teddy Hunter and A. M. Fitzgerald were among those who attended McCracken's Regatta from Lakefield on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Higgins were in Peterborough on Friday.

Mrs. Roland Bullock and children are visiting friends in Otonabee.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Quinn were in Peterborough on Friday attending the funeral of Mrs. Alexander Davidson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Blewett of Peterborough were in the village on Thursday evening visiting friends.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1928.

AN ASSET TO BE APPRECIATED.

Chemong Park will next year be an asset of first importance to Peterborough. With the paving completed for four miles, and a good road the remainder of the way to the park, a run there will be a pleasant jaunt.

So much has already been said about the condition of the road this year that it seems better to draw a mantle of charity over the failures of whatever legislators are responsible for the lack of oil, and turn with expectation to contemplation of what may be—next year.

The pleasant beach below Bridgenorth, the lovely trees and attractive dancing pavilion, the picnic facilities, the attraction of the floating bridge, and the accessibility of it all, will yet make Chemong a centre for visitors not only from this city but from Toronto and other far-away points. When visitors call, what nicer afternoon could be spent than one under the trees at this resort? And for city people who seek the cooling breezes of the lakeside, no place is so easily reached, so comfortably furnished with tables and benches so handy with refreshment pavilion and dance hall, as Chemong.

Such assets should not be ignored by county or city, and whatever can be done to improve the road it is the plain duty of the legislative bodies to do.

WHY PRINT A SERIAL IN A NEWSPAPER?

The function of a newspaper, some say, is to give news. That seems like a good definition, too, until newspapers are examined and their contents analyzed.

Obviously, newspapers are striving to give their readers what the readers want, and sometimes they go so far as to print things they think will be good for the readers whether wanted or not.

It is a popular fallacy that the newspaper has a hard time to fill its pages. The difficulty really is to get into the limited space all that the editor would like to put in. Every day there are columns of matter, more or less important, left out or laid over until there is an opportunity to publish them.

Under these circumstances it is obvious that only articles which the newspaper thinks interesting and worthwhile will be printed, especially regularly recurring features. It has been argued that the newspaper is not the place for serial stories—but when we see so many papers printing serials we are justified in presuming they cannot all be wrong.

Last year The Examiner was without a serial for a few weeks, as a test. So many protests were received that it was considered good business to not only run a serial but a better serial—and a contract with Ruby M. Ayres was the result.

To-day, there starts in The Examiner one of this author's most inspired stories—"The Planter of the Tree." It is full of deep interest, thrill and wholesome amusement—a good successor to "Spoilt Music," which will end in a few days.

CENSORING BUILDING PLANS.

Architects naturally are among the first to speak up for a better planned city. Theirs is the trained eye, and theirs the discouraging task of trying to fit the ungainly figure of the city with decent clothes.

An architect of some repute on a visit to the city recently told The Examiner that never will Peterborough (or any other centre) look right until a form of censorship is established that will require builders to submit plans of projected buildings for approval. The "gingerbread" that decorates the exterior of most George street stores is execrable, and proof is seen in the improvement made in the block opposite The Examiner where foolish ornaments have been removed. But it is not half so seriously damaging to the beauty of the city as the building of houses in narrow lots; the crowding of garages where they are unsightly blots on fine rows of houses; the planning of individual buildings without reference to the harmony of the surroundings, as if each was to be set down on the prairie removed from every other structure.

There are European cities in which no building can be erected without governmental approval of the plans. But Europeans are accustomed to this sort of thing.

It would probably be difficult, too, to set up any esthetic standard as a criterion for official regulation of private building operations. But what may be done—what can be done in Peterborough at once—is to foster through existing organizations a civic consciousness that will make "voluntary" censorship acceptable. It might well be within the province and duty of the city engineer's department to give such advice. Aided by the Art Association, with its appreciation of beauty, and the Horticultural Society, which does so much to make the land around the buildings delightful, this might serve very well until the minds of citizens are more receptive to a real censorship plan.

It might, at least, be worth trying.

JACKSON PARK NEEDS ATTENTION.

Peterborough has always been considered fortunate in having so many beautiful parks given to the city through the generosity of Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls.

There is, however, a tendency apparent to allow some of the property to fall into disrepair, and if the Nicholls' Trust has not the money to spend on needed improvements, it appears that this is the City Council's opportunity to shoulder part of a responsibility which as other places is wholly thrust upon that body.

At Jackson Park, as an instance, there is a lot of poison ivy which is a menace to the bare-legged children who romp there. It could be exterminated without much effort. The swings are in a shaky, if not precarious, state. The dam which forms the wading pool is gradually toppling downstream. The bottom of the pool could be cleared of stones; another pool might be formed lower down in more shaded and prettier environment. At the railway track, where there was formerly a turnstile to make unwary children stop, look and listen, there is now no hinderance to their running across the track in front of a train. There is a mosquito-breeding swamp that could be sprinkled with oil to eliminate the pests.

All of these things would be improvements, admittedly, but nothing more than the park needs to make it really worth while. It is patronized daily by scores of picnic parties and hundreds of children. In their interests Nicholls' Trust and Kiwanis Club and the Health Association have done a lot. If these organizations are now at the end of their resources, the City Council should shoulder a share of the financial responsibility help and maintain for the citizens it fathers a wonderful park such as thousands of cities on the continent would be proud to own and eager to pay for.

WHAT'S THE USE OF PROGRESS?

Old Quebec!

It apparently pays to be behind the times in sanitary conveniences, width of streets, paving and sewage disposal.

Here in Peterborough we boast our sanitation, we have one of the most up-to-date disposal plants in the world (if not, as some suggest, a little ahead of the rest of the world); we are yearly adding more concrete and whatnot paving to the already large acreage, and we go to infinite pains to round-off any street corners that might remotely menace the life, limb or liberty of the stranger within our gates. To what effect?

A booklet comes out for wide distribution advertising Quebec as being so many years behind the times that it is worth seeing. Quebec City is lauded as "a city of remembrance," and the booklet frankly states, "The whole population of the old Province lives on the past," naively adding, "Nor is the tourist slow to realize it when travelling through the countryside." "Everything conjures up by-gone days: manners, customs, language, quaint dwellings, narrow fields, antiquated windmills, old churches."

All of which seems to suggest that the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce is passing up a talking point in its advertising, and that the City Council is too previous in its expenditures for roadways and sanitation improvements. Because, remarkably, Quebec is this year boasting a great influx of visitors from United States, while reports from Toronto lament the fact that tourist traffic has not increased in line with the records of the past few years.

It was probably a tactical error on somebody's part to wreck the old Swanston home in Ashburnham. Just think of the publicity-value it held, on the Quebec plan! And instead of widening the awkward corner at Park and Charlotte, the City Council should have advertised far and wide the "narrow, winding, sharp-turning streets" mentioned as one of the attractions of Quebec. Never should a policeman endeavour to "move on" traffic on George street on Saturday night. Instead, some tourist development society with a little more than ordinary advertising ability should seize upon the hopeless muddle to broadcast as an attraction the fact that "Peterborough citizens still hold to the old custom of parading up and down three blocks of the main street as a prelude to their Sunday devotions." And then watch the United States cars park on the wrong side of the street to witness the parade and store up memories of this backward outpost of the vaunted British Empire!

Our whole system of publicity has been proven wrong by this Quebec venture. "The greatest lift lock in the world" may be of advertising use a few years from now when it can be pointed to as antiquated, like the Quebec people do with their wind-mills to-day.

But in the meantime, if tourists are desired, the cue seems to be to stay progress, reconstruct conditions of a hundred years ago, and cater to the manners, morals, customs and foibles of a dead past sought by a progress-enervated race of go-getters.

ARE TRAFFIC OFFICERS NEEDED.

In the official bulletin of the Quebec Roads Department which came to The Examiner on Saturday there is an obvious fallacy in logic.

Says this official source: "After the motor accidents of the last week-ends, certain newspapers went so far as to attribute these accidents to lack of road supervision instead of attributing them to the imprudence of the victims."

If people were not imprudent, what need would there be for road supervision? If everyone observed the Golden Rule, what need for parking bylaws and such like? Let us look into the matter.

Just suppose, and we know it is almost as difficult as trying to suppose that Alice in Wonderland is truth, that no one took a chance, that no one ever drove with only one light, that no one ever drove on the wrong side of the road, that no one ever exceeded the limit of speed, that no one ever became intoxicated while in charge of a car—what on earth would the Province do with its traffic constables?

And if the reader has survived this flight of imagination, let him endeavour to picture a highway system on which all drivers believed in doing to others as they would have others do to them. No motorist would park an unreasonable time, because he would not like others to shut him out of a parking place longer than necessity demanded. No motorist would run over the white line at the corner of the stop streets, because he would think of himself in the place of the pedestrian, depending upon that line as the limit of his safety. No motorist would ever honk his horn outside a house to save himself a few steps, because he would think of himself in the place of the mother trying to put her baby to sleep, or the tired worker just dropping off into slumber.

We may smile superciliously at the North American Indian idea of a "happy hunting ground" where all kinds of game abound for the pleasure of the spirit huntsman; or at the naive idea of golden streets; or at the Negro's idea of "flying all over God's heaven," but no imagination of anyone picturing Elysian fields ever reached the heights required to encompass these traffic marvels.

There is not yet the responsibility-consciousness that will excuse the use of traffic officers; the "imprudence" (we like the word) of "victims" cannot be blamed when so few are prudent. If there are accidents, and a multiplicity of accidents, there is all the more need for rigid enforcement of the traffic laws, especially as they affect those who drive while intoxicated, and those whose incompetence does not deter them from going abroad on the highways to the peril of all sane and safe and courteous drivers they meet.

After all, life is a short span, and too easily is the end reached, for us to depend upon altruistic motives to preserve it. We must insist that those whom we charge with maintaining safety and sanity on the highways do so.

As they certainly should.

The Question Box

C. A. A.—Q: How many Canadians took part in the Great War?

A: The total number of men enlisted in Canada from the beginning of war until November 15, 1918, was 595,441. Of this number 465,984 were obtained by voluntary enlistment. On November 15, 1918, the number of men who had gone overseas totalled 418,052. When Armistice was signed there were overseas 277,439 Canadian troops.

P. N. W.—Q: In what provincial elections did Mr. C. H. Cahan run in Nova Scotia?

A.—Mr. C. H. Cahan was successful in the election of 1890 and represented Shelburne, N.S., in the Nova Scotia Legislature from 1890 to 1894. During this period he was leader of the Conservative party in the Legislature. He was defeated in the Federal general election as candidate for Shelburn-Queens in 1896 and for Cumberland in 1900.

A Thought

UNSELFISHNESS.

You will find as you look back upon your life that the moments that stands out, the moments when you have really lived are the moments when you have done things in a spirit of love.

As memory scans the past above and beyond all the transitory pleasures of life there leap forward those supreme hours when you have been enable to do unnoticed kindnesses to those round about you, things too trifling to speak about, b you feel have entered into your eternal life.....These things seem to be the things which alone of all one's life abide. Everything else in all our lives is transitory. Every other good is visionary. But the acts of love which no man knows about, or even can know about—they never fail.—Henry Drummond.

GOD'S MINUTE.

In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.—Phil. 4: 6.

* * *

Unto Thee do we look this morning hour, our Heavenly Father, acknowledging Thee as the source of every good and perfect gift. Thou hast kept us through the perils and dangers of the night. For refreshing sleep which brings to us strength of body and of mind enabling us to enter upon the duties and responsibilities of the new day, we devoutly thank Thee. Keep us, dear Lord, mindful of the obligations and the responsibilities which are upon us. Grant us wisdom and the desire to do all things in Thy name and for Thy Glory. Let us not be stumbling blocks to our fellowmen, but willing to deny outselves, if need be, for them. May our daily walk and conversation be such as to commend the religion of our Lord Jesus to those with whom we come in contact. For the unspeakable gift of Thy love, we render Thee our hearty thanks and pray that each day it may be our joy to walk in the way of Him who so loved us as to give Himself on the cross that we might have forgiveness of our sins, and a sure hope of the life beyond. May parents be conscientious in the rearing of their children. Bless Thy church in the work of helping men to love Thee. Keep us loyal to Thy cause—ever trying to do faithfully that which Thou hast committed to our hands. We pray in the name of our Lord Jesus who loved us and gave Himself for us. Amen.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Trading in cash grain in the domestic market yesterday was quiet owing to the absence of demand from exporters for supplies and the fact that local and country buyers were only operating from hand-to-mouth expecting lower prices in the near future. Sales of odd cars of Manitoba Tough No. 6 wheat were made at 98 cents, and feed wheat 95 cents per bushel, while Canadian Western oats were unchanged.

There was no actual change in prices for Spring wheat grades of flour, but the undertone to the market was easier in sympathy with the weakness in cash wheat at Winnipeg. There was some demand from Continental buyers and a moderate amount of business was done in this direction, but the trade with the United Kingdom and local houses was quiet. There was some demand for odd cars of new crop winter wheat flour.

A fair amount of business continues to be done in most lines of millfeed, there being a steady demand from country buyers and the market was moderately active with no change in prices to note. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices were unchanged.

There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Canadian baled hay, but there was a fair inquiry from local buyers for the top grades.

Undertone to the egg market was steady, but the volume of business was not large owing to the fact that buyers are only taking sufficient to meet immediate needs on account of the very warm weather prevailing. The receipts were 1,347 cases.

There was no change in the condition of the market for imported beans, the undertone being very firm on account of the small arrivals and the light stocks held on spot for which there was a steady demand and sales of small lots of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.10 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $3.90 per bushel, ex-track.

A feature of the butter trade was the firmer feeling that developed which was attributed principally to the increased inquiry from local buyers for car lots of June made creamery butter. The volume of business was not large, but some sales were made. Receipts were 738 packages.

In sympathy with the higher prices paid for cheese at some of the country boards at the close of last week and yesterday a stronger feeling prevailed in the local market and prices were advanced. Receipts were 5,521 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Announcement of 7,010,000 bushels increase of the United States wheat visible supply added effect yesterday to news that Canadian harvest operations are rapidly spreading.

Besides, Australian wheat prospects suggested a harvest of 200,000,000 bushels this season in Australia, an amount nearly double that of last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1⅛ to 2¼ cent net lower with corn ranging from half a cent decline to 1; cent advance; oats a shade to ⅝c off and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2 to 5 cents.

Auspicious wheat harvest weather in Canada yesterday was coupled early with much lower Liverpool quotations than due, as well as with slackness of export demand for wheat from North America. Lowest prices of the day in the Chicago market, however, were not reached until near the close, and after the posting of the big increase of the domestic visible supply, making the total now about 24,000,000 bushels more than was the case a year ago. Meanwhile, rather pronounced downturns in Winnipeg values tended further to accelerate the bearish action of prices here.

In view of the impending movement of the new wheat crop in Canada, virtually no notice was taken of the fact that Canadian stocks of wheat are decreasing at a relatively rapid rate while stocks in the United States are doing the opposite.

An indication of the comparative speed with which Canadian wheat is going out in volume was the fact that Port William and Port Arthur stocks are now down to 10,824,000 bushels, against 17,023,000 bushels a year ago, decreasing 5,000,000 in the last week.

Corn prices in Chicago were strengthened noticeably at times yesterday by the upward trend of the corn market in Kansas City. Talk was current that 20,000,000 bushels of corn had been worked for export out of Kansas City, and trade advices said corn in Italy is dearer than wheat. Vessel charters were made yesterday for shipment of 480,000 bushels of corn from Chicago and the corn visible supply yesterday decreased 949,000 bushels. On the other hand, weather conditions were generally excellent for the new corn crop. Oats trade was light and nearby deliveries of oats sold under any previous prices touched this season.

Provisions were somewhat firmer, despite lower quotations on hogs.

Cuticura Soothes Burning Aching Feet

Bathe the feet for several minutes with Cuticura Soap and warm water, then follow with a light application of Cuticura Ointment, gently rubbed in. For tired, hot, irritated feet this treatment is most comforting. Cuticura Talcum is cooling and refreshing.

Butter and Eggs

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—In keeping with the trend reported from the other chief centres of the Dominion the Toronto wholesale egg market is maintaining firm prices. Reports also would indicate that the strength of the market is also due to the fact that receipts are on the decrease, while the demand is consistently good. In Toronto, the wholesale dealers are paying for eggs ungraded cases returned, fresh extras, 38 to 40 cents; fresh firsts, 35 to 36 cents; seconds, 28 to 29 cents.

The wholesale butter market also is steady with prices firm.

From the Maritimes the word is that egg prices are firm and that supplies are small; in fact a start has begun there on storage stocks. At Winnipeg the receipts continue to dwindle, and Regina also reports that the demand exceeds the supply.

WOOLER BRIDE RECEIVES GIFTS

Miss Frances Terrill's Friends Present Many Handsome Articles.

WOOLER NEWS

(Examiner Correspondence)

WOOLER, Aug. 21.—The spacious home of Mrs. S. L. Terrill was beautifully decorated in the color scheme of pink and white in honor of Miss Frances Terrill, a bride-to-be, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Terrill, on Wednesday afternoon. The table was lighted with pink candles, pink flowers, and pink serviettes. Flowers were in profusion throughout the house.

About twenty-four young ladies were present and presented Miss Terrill with a shower of crystal. After a jolly half-hour spent on the lawn, a buffet luncheon was served in the dining room where Mrs. C. R. Terrill and Mrs. H. Bryant, of Trenton poured tea.

Before departing the bride-to-be was showered with ribbon confetti. The guests included: Elaine Foster, Alice Henricks, Mildred Mayhew, of Trenton; Mary Dinner of Codrington; Hilda Montgomery, of Brighton; Marjory Mabee, of Cameron, Bernice and Nellie Whaley of Smithfield, Marjorie Borbes, of Frankford; Mary Teal, Ethel Gunter, Margaret Hennessy, Eva Masters, Gladys Vosburg, Cora Baletine, Stella Nelson Thelma Buell and Margaret Tea.

Farm Notes

OBITUARY

GEORGE ALFRED WALLACE

MILLBROOK, Aug. 21 (Examiner Correspondence). — The death of George Alfred Wallace, which took place on Friday, August 17, following an extended illness, removes a life-long and highly-respected citizen of this community.

Deceased was born here 77 years ago, the sixteenth of last May, and was the son of pioneer parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wallace, who came to Canada by sailing-vessel from County Armagh, Ireland; his mother's maiden name was Sarah Shaw. Their first home was built in the early days of Millbrook's history, and was located in what is now the business section of King street, on the site where afterward the late T. B. Collins built his business block.

For over twenty years Mr. Wallace lived with "Squire" William Sowden, whose name will always be prominently connected with local history, the latter's residence then being the large and comfortable homestead which, some years ago, was purchased and improved by Dr. H. A. Turner.

When Squire Sowden took his first party of settlers from this neighborhood to the West, Mr. Wallace was one of the company, but after two years in Manitoba he returned to his native village, and took up farming on land south of the village, John Lunn owning and occupying the homestead now.

Deceased was a life-long Anglican in religion, and a staunch Conservative in politics; he was also for many years connected with the Orange Order, a member of L.O.L. No. 79. He was twice married, and is survived by his widow, who was also a member of a pioneer family of this community, her maiden name being Hannah Raper; their marriage took place here eight and one-half years ago; the only other immediate survivors are one brother, Arthur Wallace, of Rochester; and a nephew, William Byers of Millbrook.

The funeral was largely attended and took place from his late residence, Houston street, on Sunday, at 1.30 p.m., Rev. Canon Allen having charge of the service, assisted by Rev. P. C. Howard, and Rev. W. W. Jones. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. W. T. Wood, W. Cathcart (Peterborough, George Fowler, J. N. McGill, B. Raper and J. A. Vance. Interment was in the Presbyterian cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Among those from a distance who arttended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Baggs of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Baggs of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. William Cathcart of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Noble Whyte and son, Clifford, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. George Raper and son, Lloyd, of Peterborough; Misses Nona and Audrey Cathcart, of Ida; Mr. and Mrs. Young, Ida; Miss Jennie Cathcart, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bateson of Campbellford; Rev. Mr. DeLon, Cobourg; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cathcart of Ida; and Mrs. B. R. Raper of Toronto.

How Many Peas In the Quart Jar

The Examiner's Contest to be held on the Merchants of Peterborough

Twin Dollar Day

Friday and Saturday Aug. 24th and 25th

These Estimating Contests are very popular. A person can easily make a very close estimate by taking a quart sealer, filling it with peas and counting them.

This is the first occasion on which a TWIN DOLLAR DAY (Friday and Saturday), August 24th and 25th, has been held in August, and interest will no doubt be even greater than in former years on this account

The Examiner's Special Twin Dollar Day Contest.

The Merchants' Treasury Box will distribute $150.00 in Cash Prizes and THE EXAMINER, as usual, will offer independently $35.00 in Cash Prizes, to be distributed as follows to the persons making "the nearest estimate of the number of peas in the Quart Sealer in THE EXAMINER Window:

First Nearest Estimate	$10.00
Second Nearest Estimate	5.00
Third Nearest Estimate	4.00
Fourth Nearest Estimate	3.00
Fifth Nearest Estimate	2.00
Sixth Nearest Estimate	1.00
	$25.00
Our Special Prize of	10.00
	$35.00

How to Estimate

For every dollar paid into THE EXAMINER on DOLLAR DAYS, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, AUGUST 24 and 25, for an account for Printing or Advertising, a Subscription to THE EXAMINER at $6.00 delivered or $4.80 by mail per year, or THE WEEKLY EXAMINER at $1.50 per year, we will give Estimating Blanks for our own contest of $35.00 and for the Merchants' Treasury Box of $150.00, and we are also offering a Special Prize of $10.00 extra if the person winning the Merchants' Treasury Box First Prize of $50.00 secured the Estimating Blank through "EXAMINER" Office.

It is possible then for a First Prize winner who has secured EXAMINER Estimating Blanks to earn:

Merchants' Treasury Box Prize of	$50.00
Our Own First Prize of	10.00
And Special Prize	10.00
A Total of	$70.00

DOLLAR DAY — THE GREATEST SEMI-ANNUAL SHOPPING EVENT OF THE YEAR IN PETERBORO

Every person who pays an account of $5.00 or more for Subscription, Advertising or Printing will get a Complete Safety Razor Outfit—Razor Strop and Blade.

CITIZENS MAKE FEW ATTEMPTS TO LET ROOMS

Lack of Signs On Streets Leading to Highways Contrast to Other Places.

BED AND BREAKFAST.

Lakeshore Residents Advertise To Get Tourists To Stop For Night.

To motorists driving along the Peterborough-Port Hope highway into this city, as well as to those entering from the north and east, the City of Peterborough appears in striking contrast to other centres of population, particularly along the waterfront, in that private citizens here are making practically no play for finacial benefits to be derived from providing lodgings for motor tourists. And this, despite the fact that hotel accommodation locally is very often taxed to the limit.

In conversation with The Examiner recently, local service station men have declared that they receive may inquiries daily from motor tourists who desire to "stop over" for a night or so, preferring a room in a private house, to camping out or registering at a hotel. And yet, there is practically no such accommodation available or if it exists at all, the fact is not advertised. Peterborough has an excellent tourist camp which is well patronized and her hotels are good, yet many times they are not adequate. While some of them maintain a sort of list of places to which they may send the "overflow," yet there is no central place where visitors to the city may secure information as to where they may obtain lodging. A department such as this, located, say, in the Chamber of Commerce, might prove feasible.

Why is it that, unlike such places as Kingston, Peterborough streets leading to the heart of the city, are not lined with signs advertising the fact that accommodation for tourists is available in the houses along either side? Driving into the Limestone City, the eye of the motorist is attracted to signs varying from the simple announcement" tourist accommodation," to ambitious electrical signs, and these hustling citizens obtain from $1.00 to $3.00 a night for the use of bed and provision of breakfast.

The theory is advanced by one Peterborough man that the reason why few signs of this kind line the highway approach and Charlotte street is that motorists thereby enter the city through the better class of residential district where financial independence is accountable. At any rate, tourists maintain that Peterborough is losing out in this manner of benefiting from the tourist trade for which such a strong bid has been made through successful advertising and publicity venture.

A Central Agency

While the duties of the Chamber of Commerce staff are manifold, the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, in conversation with The Examiner stated that the Chamber could and would house some central booking agency wherein local citizens with facilities for the accommodation of tourists might leave their addresses. A sign or signs on approaches to the city would then direct visitors to this agency should they desire to stop over.

Another branch of this service is to citizens owning cottages on the lakes of the district. A list of more than sixty cottages is to be seen at the Chamber from which summer vacationists may choose, taking into consideration, location and rental, both of which are described. Cottages are available at Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake, Chemong Park, Kawartha Park, Burleigh Falls, Young's Point, Gannon's Narrows, Deer Bay, Jack, Sandy, Loon and Mud lakes, and Bass Rock. A list of these cottages is provided to anyone interested and with it goes a copy of the Ontario Safety League's twelve suggestions to prevent drowning accidents, as follows:

The Ontario Safety League has made its annual list of twelve suggestions to prevent drowning accidents, as follows:—

1—Learn the prone pressure method of resuscitation.

2—Bathe in protected areas only.

3—If you have heart trouble, do not go in swimming.

4—Wait two hours after eating before going in the water.

5—When diving, be sure the water is deep enough to ensure safety.

6—Do not bathe or swim alone. It is safest to have compaions with you in case of accident.

Re Canoes:—

1—Unless you can swim, unless you can keep a cool head, stay out of a canoe.

2—After starting, do not change seats and do not stand up, in either canoe or rowboat.

3—If you have a passenger who wants to "rock the boat," put him ashore.

4—You take a "fool's chance" if you ride the waves of a steamboat. The chance-taker is the- accident maker.

5—If upset, lay your hands on the canoe or a paddle; either will keep you afloat until help arrives.

6—Do not attempt to use a canoe or rowboat in rough water.

To the above the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce adds the following:—

2—When getting in or out of a canoe, step in the centre of the boat.

ACKERMAN DAMAGE SUIT CONSIDERED

assessor's figures will be affected by the sum specified, and the Engineer replied that there is no remedy for this. There is, however, a penalty of a fine not exceeding $50 for failure to take out a building permit for work requiring one.

That the men who are in this business as a rule know the law was the contention of Ald. Hamilton, who urged the Engineer to lay information against them without any delay in cases which came to his notice.

Large Sum Needed.

Until the council is read to spend one mill and get it fixed, you're not going to get very far with Riverside Park," stated Mayor Denne in reply to a question of Ald. Huffman. "You will have a chance to stand behind it and go to the people next year."

"I'd be perfectly willing to do it," declared Ald. Huffman.

Ald. Greene reported that $1,000 had been put in the appropriation and most of it had been spent. Sketch plans had been subm'tted and more are expecter. The committee was considering asking for one mill on the dollar at once instead of $1,000 or so every year.

Next Move Up To Hydro.

"Let's forget that for to-night," said Ald. Hamilton when the purchase of the gas plant came up.

"We made them an offer and agreed if they wouldn't take it they would have to come to use," added Ald. Phelan, and the matter dropped.

Will Buy Lot.

Although the aldermen concurred in the opinion that the price is high, they voted to buy the lot next the incinerator property from John R. McDonald for $1,500 as it is absolutely necessary to round out the city's property there.

The request of the Department of Public Works of Ontario for permission to change the down pipes running into the sewer from outside the Normal school building to inside the building was granted.

Maniece Avenue.

The road running east from the canal north of the C. P. R. track, which has recently been deeded to the city by the Maniece estate, was named Maniece avenue by by-law.

Suburban Highway.

The Department of Highways notified the council that the Provincial highway to Lindsay has been designated a Provincial suburban highway as far as the fourth line of Smith. This means that for this distance, approximately 2½ miles, the city is liable for one-fifth of the cost of construction and maintenance.

J. T. O'Connell wrote to state that the construction of a sewer pumping station in front of his house on Smith street will reduce the value of the property and offering to sell it to the city.—Legal committee.

The Power Situation.

The Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals wrote in regard to the city's request for the power rights at Dams 4 and 5 and at Burleigh that he was having an investigation made of the situation in regard to these rights and would advise the council as soon as it is completed.

On the same matter, the Utilities Commission wrote that it did not think it advisable to spend money on a survey of the dams to determine what power is available and what it would cost for development, until it is known whether the city can obtain the power rights. The commission also added that it did not feel it had authority to spend money on this work and that the city council should take care of it.

On motion of Aldermen Lowe and Huffman the Minister of Highways will be asked to have work on the Chemong road speeded up and to have the detour put into better shape.

CHOIR MEMBERS PICNIC AT OVAL

Members of Female Voice Choir Enjoy Annual Summer Social.

A very enjoyable event took place at Nicholl's Oval on Saturday, when the annual picnic of the Female Voice Choir was held. and a jolly afternoon spent by the members. The Misses A. Barton and Dorothy Berwick had charge of the sale of ice cream and soft drinks and Mrs. B. McKinley, with Miss M. Wilson, had charge of the races. Mrs. J. Mills, honorary president of the Choir, was present.

THE CITY'S BUSINESS.

With a formidable accumulation of work facing them after the recent two weeks of closed doors, the staff of the Peterborough branch, Provincial Laboratory returned this week and for another season will carry on their work in the community. Water tests, milk tests and a host of other investigations will allow for no idle hours in the local laboratory for some time to come, according to Dr. C. B. Waite, doctor of the Peterborough branch.

A. G. Metherall, City Plumbing Inspector and Relief Officer, has reopened his office in the city buildings following summer vacation, happy and healthy and with a fine coat of tan. During his absence, the work was carried on by Charles S. Stapleton, City Sanitary Inspector, and A. W. Archibald.

Grave and numerous mishaps have overtaken Commander Umberto Nobile and his comrades on the airship Italia's North Pole trip, but they pale before the mass disaster which overtook Sir John Franklin and his expedition to the Canadian Arctic 82 years ago. Not a single member of the party of 129 who sailed under his leadership in the Erebus and Terror in search of a northwest passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific ever, returned to civilization. The Arctic claimed every life. Some further light upon the tragedy may be thrown by investigations which are to be conducted by Major L. T. Burwash, Canadian government exploratory engineer, who has started upon a lone patrol of the Arctic which will bring him to the place where Eskimos state one of Franklin's vessels foundered in shallow water. The illustration shows: (1) the Union Jack flying over the Franklin Cairn on Beechey Island in the Canadian Arctic; (2) an old print depicting H.M.S. Terror thrown up on the ice with her crew working on the hummocks; (3) Major Burwash, who is to hunt for further relics; (4) Sir John Franklin, leader of the ill-fated expedition; (5) Beechey Island, with an arrow pointing to what remains of Franklin's old camp. COMMITTEE WILL CONSIDER CHANGES

It seems to me that this is a bad time to raise this question, which may raise in the minds of the people the idea that the council is dissatisfied. We should go ahead now and formulate ways and means later."

Mr. Eastwood: "The hospital board has functioned well in forty years, without any difficulty. The idea of changing has not entered the minds of the members, but I don't think they are closed to the idea. If a change seems advisable the means would have to be worked out by the government. I think the government would be hesitant about changing a system which has functioned so well and which is in accordance with the wishes of a former citizen by whom the city benefited to the extent of $450,000.

"Most other municipalities are of the opinion that where the aldermanic representative is elected from year to year inadvisable changes might be made."

Mayor Denne: "Any changes would have to be made by joint action of the council and board."

Mr. Eastwood—"I think the board is representative and of men of as high calibre as can be found."

Ald. Hamilton—"Do we feel that we should and will the people expect us to have representation on the board now that we are supplementing Mrs. Nicholls' gift. The question is, 'Does this council want to put the proposition to the people without any steps to get representation?"

Ald. Stocker—"I am in sympathy with the project, but we are supplementing the gifts and should be represented."

County Patients Pay the Same.

Ald. Hamiltor —"Do you charge the county people more than city people?"

Mr. Crane— "No, we can't. The rate is fixed by legislature."

Ald. Stocker— "Will those conditions hold if we provide the $300,000?" "Surely."

Ald. Stocker—"Those U.F.O.'s get everything for nothing."

Ald. Huffman— "As I see it, the city is likely to have to put up money and have no control over the expenditure."

Mr. Fair— "That was one of the conditions on which Mrs. Nicholls made the bequest and on which it was accepted. I think her wishes should be respected. The city has had the benefits of her money for many years with very few calls for funds."

Ald. Greene—"If your board allowed two or three more members from the Council would that be possible under the act?"

Amendment Needed.

Mr. Crane— "You would have to have an amendment to this act or the board's actions would be illegal."

Mayor Denne —"We want to appoint a committee from the two bodies to consider the matter."

Ald. Ackerman—"We should look on it with a view to forty or fifty years from now when the city will have perhaps several million dollars in it."

Mr. Fair—"I don't think sentiment will ever be forgotten."

Ald. Hamilton — "Sentiment has nothing to do with it. It will always be known by Mrs. Nicholls' name."

Mr. Crane—"The aldermen 40 years ago did not want to take the hospital. That's why the board was constituted."

Mr. Fowler— "What more representative way of choosing the board would you suggest than that now used?"

Should Invest First.

Mr. Eastwood —"I think the time for the city to seek representation is after it has invested as much money as Mrs. Nicholls. She had faith in the city, let the city have faith in her."

Ald. Hamilton— "The idea of the council is that the citizens will expect us to be more fully represented."

Ald. Greene—"If both parties are agreeable why not do this."

Mr. Crane—"It would need an amendment."

Ald. Greene— "That could be secured."

Mr. Mason—"We could appoint a committee to go into the matter. At the same time I would point out that the council has on the board that member who has most authority, that is the Mayor, whom they can trust to hold up their end."

The motion was then carried, appointing a committee, and the meeting adjourned.

Later, in Council, Ald. Hamilton questioned the advisability of passing the by-law for taking the vote before the committee appointed had a chance to meet and decide on the constitution of the board.

Ald. Cotton asked what the effect would be if the committee decided to leave the board as it is. Ald. Greene replied that it would strengthen the board's position in the eyes of the people.

PRUDENTIAL AGENTS AND WIVES PICNIC

Sandy Point, Clear Lake, is Scene of Enjoyable Outing.

Sandy Point on Clear Lake was the scene of a merry gathering on Saturday afternoon when the Prudential family of Peterborough held their annual picnic. All the members of the Peterborough staff under John I. Allen, with their wives and families gathered there for a day's outing.

Meeting at the Prudential offices at the corner of George and Hunter streets the party, about fifty strong, motored out to the point, having no mishaps on the way.

On arriving the first thing that was done was to put the watermelons in the ice cold spring so they would be crisp and sweet for the feast to come and here hangs a tale to be told later.

A softball game was soon organized and it was an open event to everyone but only one lady, Mrs. R. P. Sedgwick, contributed her experience as a gardner out in right field. Needless to say she played an errorless game and made a safe hit at each trip to the plate. The game was as errorless as most picnic softball fixtures are. The final score was about twenty-one to four in favor of the other side.

This sport was soon abandoned for the cooler sport of swimming. Most of the party preferred the sandy beach, while others preferred the deeper water of a small wharf nearby.

Races took up the rest of the time and the most interest event was the ladies race which was somewhat like a small town horse race, many of the entries being left at the post at the word to start.

Just before lunch all had to line up and pose before the many cameras that were uncovered. Then the first was heard of the "Tale of the Watermelon."

A terrible noise was heard, and from all the shouts and exclamations it was evident that the largest melon had disappeared from the cooling waters of the spring. This was a real tragedy Undaunted, however, the ladies loaded the tables until they groaned with all kinds of eatables. When everyone was busily engaged in eating in strolled the melon on the shoulder of one of the members of the party who was tipped off by the culprits that it was in a bush not a foot away from the spring. Everyone was now happy as there was melon galore.

After the lunch Art Moffatt of barnyard-golf fame revealed a number of shoes that he had borrowed from the courts in the southend of Peterborough and soon two courts were filled and playing continued until dark.

As it began to get dark, mothers began to think of their children and the older ones of their beds, after the strenuous day and it was decided to start for home. Each and everyone declared the day a success.

Among those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Allen, Arthur Moffatt, Donald, Gerald, Kenneth, and Alma Moffatt, Mr. and Mrs. William McLaren, Thelma McLaren, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Sedgwick, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Ross, Betty and Earle Ross, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McIsaac, Henry, Daniel and Michael McIsaac, Mr. and Mrs. W. Brioux, Norma Brioux, Miss Davidson from Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. R. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Anderson, Jean and Donald Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Mallough, David Mallough, W. E. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wray, Gordon, Jack, and Isabell Wray, Harold Baker, Miss Maragret Hamilton Miss Ethel Cooper, Fred Allen.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1928

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

(Copyright, 1928, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Fairly fortunate planetary influences rule to-day, according to astrology. The afternoon should be more lucky than the morning for most Earth affairs.

There is an aspect read as unfavorable to stocks and to speculation of every sort. Money should be conserved and invested wisely at this time.

The planetary government is not good for beginning any new enterprise. Special preparation should be made before risking capital under this sway.

The configuration seems to indicate that this period is a bridge leading to a future of tremendous prosperity. Trade and commerce are well directed.

The evening is most promising for theatres and places of amusement.

Many distinguished visitors from all parts of the world are foreshadowed for the next few months and many will come from the Orient.

Late in the day commercial matters come under a more auspicious sway than that which rules them in the morning. Bargains may be more wisely made after nightfall.

Love affairs prosper in the evening when the hesitating wooer is supposed to gain courage.

Public meetings are well directed today when it is believed the minds of persons in audiences are open to conviction.

Agriculture appears to be under a better direction of the star to-day, with promise of much that will be beneficial in the future.

Again astrologers foretell that farming is to become uniformly scientific with the combination and efficiency that make big business so successful.

Under this rule attention to dress may be most fortunate and there is no doubt, if the stars are rightly read, that both men and women will pay unusual attention to fashion in the next few months.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year in which new friendships are prominent. These men and women who are on the cusp of Leo-Virgo usually love the good things of earth and know how to obtain them.

Children born on this day should thrive and prosper. They are likely to have great energy and to have the faculty of serious concentration. Many possess extraordinary talents. Many teachers and physicians are born under this sign.

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY and NICHOLAS GAUNT fall in love. He is called abroad by his mother's illness, and promises her to marry his cousin, LADY EDITH. Jennifer stands in the crowd outside the church and sees the bride. Five years later Nicholas and Jennifer meet again. He decides to divorce his wife. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. She asks Gaunt to promise not to see Jennifer again, and, thinking she has only a short time to live, he promises. Jennifer decides to be as gay as she can on a small legacy She gives up her job and moves into better quarters. The flat over hers is occupied by DOLORES, and a young girl, BUDDY. Through them she meets CHESNEY, with whom Buddy is in love, but who wants to marry Jennifer. Jennifer tells him she does not love him, but promises to marry him. Then she meets Gaunt again, and his wife. Gaunt tells her she shall never marry Chesney, and begs her to go away with him. But she refuses. Buddy goes to Chesney with a distorted story of the friendship between Gaunt and Jennifer. He goes to Jennifer for explanation. She tells him the truth, but he does not believe her, and leaves her in anger. She decides to go away. So she closes her flat and goes to a quiet hotel until she can make more definite plans. She finds that she had spent most of her capital and unsuccessfully seeks work. She buys a teashop. But she fails with it.

"Only the poor ones!" he would say with emphasis. "The rich ones have a different Father Christmas altogether." He used to declare that he could see faces in the long icicles which hung down outside the window.

Some of the icicles were as thick as a man's thigh, and as clear as glass, and Timothy insisted that they were the windows of Fairyland, and that the fairies were pressing their little faces against them in order to look at him.

"And they always beckon to me," he told Jennifer in an awed whisper. "I think they would like me to go and play with them."

"But you don't want to go, do you?" Jennifer asked in quick dread. "You'd much rather stay here and play with me, wouldn't you, Timothy?"

"'Course!" Timothy agreed, but his eyes quickly turned from Jennifer to the Fairies' windows again, and often during the night when Jennifer came noiselessly into his room, expecting to find him still asleep, he would be out of bed, standing at the window, his own small face pressed to the panes, trying to see the fairies.

And one day when the fairies beckoned, perhaps more insistently than usual, Timothy changed his mind and went away for ever to play with them, and Jennifer was left alone once more.

Sometimes she thought this new loneliness was the worst kind she had ever yet experienced; sometimes she was sure she could struggle on no further, as she sat beside the bed where little Timothy lay, and knew she would never feel his arms around her neck again. A telegram brought Mrs. Webber from England, impatient at being dragged from her enjoyments, and yet on the whole relieved at the unexpected end of her responsibilities.

"It's just as well," she said, standing dry-eyed beside Timothy, as he lay with his little hands folded, looking like one of the fairies with whom he had gone to play. "I think I told you he was an unwanted child, and he would always have been delicate."

She made arrangements to have him buried in the English cemetery in Lucerne, staring blankly at Jennifer's broken question, "Oh, can't we take him home with us?"

"Sentimental nonsense," she said bluntly. "What does it matter where one is buried, when one is dead. Besides look at the expense."

Jennifer did not like to remind her that she had once said there was plenty of money, so Timothy was left behind in the shadow of the grim mountains, with snow covering his grave, and Jennifer, went back to London alone.

"I think I shall stay here for a time," Mrs. Webber said. "I've never been to the winter sports, and it seems an excellent opportunity."

So she bought herself an elaborate outfit and gave Jennifer a third-class return ticket to London.

"May I apply to you for a reference?" Jennifer asked.

Mrs. Webber shrugged her shoulders. "Well, really I don't know what to say. You see I took you without on myself, didn't I? and it would hardly be quite fair to others if . . . especially as Timothy died while he was in your care, you see."

Jennifer did not argue, her heart was too full of grief.

"I'm glad he did did in my care," was all she said, defiantly. "At least I loved him and he loved me."

Mrs. Webber smiled.

"How very odd," she murmured. "Other people's children never have the slightest attraction for me."

Jennifer left the hotel without troubling to say good-bye to her. The long cold journey back to England was a nightmare, but then she knew that in the future all her life was going to be a nightmare.

CHAPTER XLVI

JENNIFER DECIDES

It was early January when she reached London and she took a room in a small commercial hotel far less pretentious than the one in Bloomsbury, but she knew what lay before her; she knew that possibly it would be months before she was fortunate enough to get another post.

The night of her arrival, she lit the one small gas jet in the room and stared at herself in the glass. What would Nicholas think if he could see her? She had many grey hairs now, and her eyes looked tired.

"And I am tired, tired to death," she told herself as she crept shivering into the bed which was insufficiently blanketed. Outside the rain poured down unceasingly, and the ill-fitting window rattled with each breath of wind.

Jennifer thought of her flat in Baker Street, of its luxury and comfort, and it seemed that she had just dreamed all that part of her life, and never really lived it.

London seemed to be a strange place wherein she had never moved before; if she had met Chesney or Dolores, or any of her old friends she would have run from them in fear, so far divided from her they seemed to be.

The same weary hunt for work began again, with the same sickening disappointments and rebuffs.

The little sum of money ennifer had been able to save while she was in Switzerland dwindled rapidly, and at the end of the third week in January she had not enough to pay her bill. One night, for the first time since little Timothy died, Jennifer fell down on the hard, uncomfortable bed and sobbed her heart out.

It was as if her life were ending in a flood of passionate despair, and she hoped she would die. She could not control herself or check her dreadful sobbing, until utterly exhausted she fell into a deep sleep which was half a stupor.

She awoke at last to the sound of knocking on the door, and she opened her eyes to the scared face of the little overworked and underpaid maid who cleaned her room.

"Lor Miss, are you ill!" she asked in a husky whisper. "I've waited all day to make the bed, it's teatime now and I was afraid you might be ill!"

Jennifer struggled up. She was still dressed in the clothes she had worn the night before and her head swam.

"If you could just get me a cup of tea," she said faintly. The girl hurried away, and Jennifer bathed her face and smoothed her hair. But she could not control the trembling of her hands, and she felt so weak she was glad to sit down on the bed again.

The little maid came back with a cup of horribly strong tea, and three lumps of sugar swimming in its saucer, but Jennifer gulped it down and felt better.

"Thank you very much; please don't wait. 'Ill get dressed now," she said, but the girl lingered, and after a moment, she produced a folded paper from beneath her groubby apron.

"The Missis told me to give you this, and she says she'll be glad if you'll kindly settle it" she said reluctantly.

Jennifer took the paper and glanced at it.

"I'll pay tomorrow. It's all right, Polly," she said. She had forgotten that another week had gone since she sold some of her clothes to pay her rent.

Polly walked slowly to the door, then stopped and looked back.

"Are you 'ard up?" she asked sympathetically.

Jennifer nodded, the ready tears rushing to her swollen eyes.

The girl shook her head sadly.

"They all are in this house," she said. She came back a step. "Ain't yer got no friends?" she asked.

"No. Friends don't want you when you're down on your luck" Jennifer said bitterly.

"Perhaps you ain't asked them," the girl submitted hopefully. "Tain't fair to say that if you ain't asked them, you know."

Polly waited a moment, but Jennifer gave no sign, and the girl went quietly away, shutting the door after her.

Jennifer sat where she was, huddled up against the pillows.

She knew she must get up, but for what? There was nowhere to go, nothing to do; no one who would even pretend to be glad to see her, no one!

"Perhaps you ain't asked them."

Polly's quaintly hopeful words stayed in her mind.

They were true enough, she had not asked them! What was the use when one was so sure beforehand what the reply would be. Then across the years she seemed to hear the last thing Gaunt had said to her when they parted after his return from Italy.

"If you ever want me...."

The very incompleteness of the words had stamped them with sincerity, had vested them with a whole whoid of eloquence.

"If every you want me...."

When had she ceased to want him? When would she cease to want him? Not even when death cut tnere lives more definitely asunder than life had done.

She got up shakily and finished dressing.

The mirror in the reasing table showed her a white face and swollen eyes with dark shadows beneath them.

"I shall be ill if I go on like this," she thought in terror. "And then what will become of me"

Heavy footsteps sounded on the landing outside, followed by the rap of sharp knuckles on the door, which was opened before Jennifer had time to speak, and the landlady came in.

She was a short, dark-browed woman, with fat cheeks and a mouth that was like a hard gash across her face.

Jennifer had had very little to do with her, but she had often heard her rating her husband and scolding Polly, and once she had seen her turn a fellow lodger out of doors who had been unable to pay his rent. Not soon had she forgotten the shrill acid voice and vituperation, and she knew that now it was her turn.

"Polly says you'll pay to-morrow." That was how she began, with uncompromising directness.

"Well, to-morrow won't do. The money was due last night." The woman's sharp eyes roved round the room suspiciously. "Going out are you" she said bluntly. "Well, before you go, I'll take the key of the room just in case you're thinking of getting up to any of the old tricks, and moving your luggage."

"I assure you—" Jennifer began Hard red fingers were snapped in her face.

"I don't want assuring of anything. All I want is my money, and I mean to have it."

Jennifer went white to the lips.

"You will have it to-morrow morning," she said as steadily as she could. "I am going out now to get it."

"Oh you are, are you. A pretty fine chance you stand of getting it with that pasty face and red eyes," she scoffed. "Anyhow I'm taking no risks, thank you, so before you go I'll lock this door and take the key. Not that I think you've got much worth having" she added with a contemptuous glance at Jennifer's boxes.

Jennifer trief to speak, but it was beyond her; she took up her hat and gloves and fled.

It was a nightmare! A torturous nightmare!

It was as if she walked through pitch darkness with the knowledge that no matter how greatly she hoped, no ray of light could pierce through to her, no friendly hand could ever find her own.

"If ever you want me...."

The words walked with her through the chill January evening, and she found herself answering them aloud passionately:

"I have always wanted you, always."

And then on, on again—

"If ever you want me...."

And again her own broken voice crying—

"Nicholas! Nicho! —"

Then suddenly, without and definite happening she, knew herself beaten, knew she would have to go to him.

There was no other door of escape; she had tried many and found them all locked. till now only the door that led to Nicholas Gaunt remained.

She would knock on that door, and if he refused her admittance, she could but die—there was always the river.

She found herself laughing softly, with a choked effort she checked herself.

"I must be a little mad...."

Enough at least to have her hair waved before she went on her last desperate venture.

Nicholas had always liked her with her hair waved—she remembere that she had it done the night before he came back from Italy when her tragedy first begun.

LYRICS OF LIFE

(By Douglas Malloch)

JOE LETARTE

This Joe LeTarte has plied his art
For over fifty years,
And put a part that's need and smart
Between a million ears.
He mowed the place, the human face,
And kept the fuzz remote,
With tact and grace he's shaved the race,
But never shaved a note.
He's trimmed the hair, that is if there
Was any there to trim,
And in his chair the man, the mayor,
Meant all the same to him.
When age appeared he clipped and sheared
The gray where gray began,
When old age neared he trimmed the beard,
But never trimmed the man.
Yes, faithful Joe has had to mow
The mugs of many men,
Yet blithely, though, for barbers know
It grows right back again.
He's done his best, and that's the test
Of this and other things;
Though many a pest has never guessed,
Good barbers shave poor kings.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE GOOFIE'S GLOVES

Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis)

After the Bushy Bear didn't fool Uncle Wiggily and nibble him on account of a pudding, the Fuzzy Fox and the Woozie Wolf sulked around, first in the den of one Bad Chap and then in the den of the other, trying to think up more ways to catch the rabbit gentleman.

But all their tricks were of no account. Uncle Wiggily got out of one trap and another until at last the Wolf growled:

"Well, it doesn't look as if we'd ever have any rabbit nibbles. Here it is almost September and we've been fooled every time. It's all your fault, Mr. Fox!"

"Yours, you mean!" snarled the Fuzzy Fox. "But I have just thought of one sure way of catching Uncle Wiggily."

"By another trick" asked the Wolf, doubtful like and suspicious.

"You might call it a trick," said the Fox. "Did you ever hear of a Goofie?"

"I don't know that I did," the Wolf answered. "What is a Goofie?"

"It's a funny animal with long, sharp claws, but it has no teeth," said the Fox.

"My goodness" exclaimed the Wolf. "How can a Goofie eat?"

"It can't eat and that's why it has the name Goofie," said the Fox. "You see, a Goofie's claw's are so long and sharp that he can easily catch anything he wants to eat—rabbits, pussy cats, little dogs or anything. But after he has caught them he has to let them go because he has no teeth."

"I'll put a stop to this trick," hooted the Owl.

"Well what good does that do us?" the Wolf wanted to know.

"Oh, yes" exclaimed the Wolf. "Now I see what you mean! The Goofie can't nibble Uncle Wiggily, though he can catch him. So all the nibbles will be saved for us. Ha! Ha! That's a very good trick!"

"I'm glad you think so," growled the Fox. "Now I'll go find the Goofie and tell him to hide in the bushes near Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. As soon as the rabbit hops out the Goofie will catch him and hold him for us. Goofie can't nibble because he has no teeth. But, oh, how he can scratch!"

So the two Bad Chaps made up this other trick to play on Uncle Wiggily, but they did not know that hiding in a tree outside their dens and listening to them was the wise old Owl bird who was a friend to Uncle Wiggily.

"I'll put a stop to this trick," hooted the Owl softly. "I know this Goofie chap. Indeed, he has sharp claws and no teeth. But he is very proud of being stylish, is the Goofie. So I know just what to do."

The Owl flew off through the woods until he came to the rabbit's bungalow. Uncle Wiggily was just hopping out to have an adventure when the Owl arrived and the big bird hooted:

"Take a pair of heavy gloves with you, Mr. Longears, and when you meet the Goofie give him the gloves."

"What in the world for" asked the rabbit. "Is this a joke?"

"You will find it far from a joke unless you give the Goofie a pair of heavy gloves," said the Owl, telling what he had heard. So Uncle Wiggily put the gloves in his pocket and hopped along.

Surely enough, in a short time out from behind a bush popped the Goofie ready to help the Wolf and Fox. But no sooner did Uncle Wiggily see the Bad Chap than, bowing low and politely, the rabbit held out the heavy leather gloves and said:

"A present for you, Goofie!"

"Oh, just what I Lwanted" howled the silly Goofie, who was so proud that he always wanted to wear glaves. He slipped this pair on over his long, sharp claws, and, of course, when he tried to catch the rabbit, Uncle Wiggily easily slipped away. Hiding in the bushes was the Fox and he cried:

"Don't be silly, Goofie Take off those gloves!" But the Goofie was too proud to do that and, of course, his claws inside the heavy gloves couldn't catch or scratch or do anything, and once more Mr. Longears was saved.

And next, if the jumping-rope will only stand still long enough to have a new dress fitted on its handles, you shall hear about Uncle Wiggily's wonderful boat and how it sailed in the bath-tub.

THE CAUSE OF ASTHMA

A peculiar mental condition which the asthmatic patient undergoes is that when he first contracts this disease he is afraid of dying, and after he has had many attacks he is actually afraid of not dying. This is because he is literally gasping for breath, and is suffering as much for want of oxygen as a fish would be out of water.

These patients suffer from an inability to draw enough air into the lungs. They can usually exhale air readily, but during an attack struggle to draw in enough air to supply the blood with its indispensable amount of oxygen.

The primary reason for this difficulty in breathing is because the diaphragm cannot be lowered far enough to draw the air into the lungs. Breathing is principally accomplished by the raising and lowering of the diaphragm, which is the flat muscle separating the lungs from the abdomen. During exhalation, the diaphragm presses upward forcing the air out of the lungs, while during inhalation, the diaphragm lowers, and in this way draws air into the lungs.

If an excess amount of stomach and intestinal gas presses upward against the diaphragm, it is often impossible for the diaphragm to descend low enough to draw in the needed air. The heart is often affected by this pressure, and this form of asthma is then called "Cardiac Asthma" because the lungs and the heart action are both affected.

Bronchial asthma is another condition often present, in which there is a large quantity of mucus which fills up the air passages, and interferes with the free circulation of air through the lungs. This excessive mucus is produced from the patient using too much sugar and starch, and too many of the fats, which load the blood with catarrhal material. This is thrown out through the delicate membranes of the lungs.

The excessive stomach and intestinal gas is produced by using too many of the starch and sugar foods, or from using foods in bad combination with each other. Foods which are gas-forming in themselves, such as onions, garlic, cabbage, Brussels sprouts, turnips, etc., will also create this excessive gas, and these foods must be entirely eliminated by one who has a tendency toward asthma.

Drugs are entirely useless in the cure of this trouble. Of course, it is possible to struggle along for years using adrenalin or smoking powders which contain opium, but this cannot bring about a cure, and I find that patients who have taken these treatments are always in worse condition than those who have not, and their cases are always more difficult to cure.

Considering that asthma is a symptom and not a disease, it is of course very foolish to continue to treat such symptoms with remedies without at least attempting to remove the probable cause.

As I have explained, there are only three principal causes of true asthma or bronchial asthma. These are excessive gas pressure against the diaphragm, lack of mobility to the diaphragm, and excessive formations of mucus in the bronchial tubes. The cure then must come from removing these causes, and fully one hundred per cent of all cases can be cured through properly regulated diet and exercise.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. H. J. writes: "When I am walking my hands swell up so much that they pain me terribly, especially when I touch them. At times only one hand will swell and the other will be perfectly all right."

Answer: Swelling of the hands is quite common when walking rapidly to any great distance. The swinging of the arms forces the blood into the hands, but should not cause any discomfort unless you are suffering from rheumatism. Sometimes an impingement of the nerves which issue from the spine and go to the arms will be the controlling factor in causing one hand to swell and not the other; an osteopath or chiropractor could tell you if this cause exists.

Question: Mrs. H. K. L. writes: "My husband has to take his lunch which now contains wholewheat bread, cheese, ham, salmon, also a couple of cakes. Would you please give me some fillings for sandwiches, also a dessert?"

Answer: The wholewheat bread sandwiches can be made of cheese or any one kind of meat, or filled with peanut butter, avocado, or just plain lettuce and butter. A handful of raisins or dried figs makes a fine dessert for a noon lunch.

Question: J. T. asks: "What can be done for a six-year-old boy who is constantly making faces? The doctor calls it some form of nervousness. Have had his tonsils removed, but certainly cannot see any improvement, and his face is gradually growing ou tof shape. Would be glad of any help."

Answer: The greatest cause of such nervousness is from irritations of the gastro-intestinal tract. Irritating food mixtures have an effect upon producing irritation all over the body. I have never seen a case of these troubles with children that could not be quickly cured by putting them on a well balanced, non-irritating diet. I will be glad to send you an article outlining the proper diet for children if you will send me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE GIVE ALMS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.,
(Author of The Springs of Human Action.)

Charity and giving alms is an ancient virtue. It has been practiced ever since man first learned to share his food and shelter with his fellow man in want.

The most obvious motive for giving alms is to relieve need and suffering. No doubt human sympathy and fellow feeling play an important part. Those who are not very far removed from the poor beggar are more sympathetic and give alms while the rich man is more likely to give to institutions rather than to individuals. His sympathy is humanitarian rather than personal.

We also give alms for the satisfaction that comes from doing something for somebody else. Unconsciously we are somewhat elated to find a person in less favorable circumstances and are glad to give him something for making us feel better than we did.

With some there is the purely mercenary motive of giving in order to get something in return as expressed in the saying that if you cast your bread on thewaters it will return to you after many days. Reward in heaven if not on this earth is a strong motive for giving alms to those who think of heaven as a place of reward for good deeds to their fellows on the earth.

But by far the strongest motive for giving alms although the least conscious one is that of giving in order to relieve ourselves of an emotionally unpleasant situation. The beggar has made us suffer by a kind of physical and reflexive sympathy and apparently the only way to allay that feeling is to give the poor devil something and go away satisfied that you have done your part. Otherwise your conscience will trouble you. Those pleading eyes, or the crippled body will haunt you. For this reason the beggars usually appear pitiable enough to make it worth our while to give most generously.

CHAPTER I.—SALLY LINGFIELD

When Philip Sanderson knocked Sally Lingfield down and ran over her as he was turning out of Piccadilly in the early hours of a grey February morning, the gods must have laughed, for Sally Lingfield was the one woman in the world for whom Sanderson had any feeling whatever, and it was an extraordinary coincidence that she should have been crossing the road just as he raced down from Shaftesbury Avenue and across to the Haymarket.

Sanderson was drunk at the time, but then, that was nothing unusual, for Sanderson was generally drunk after six o'clock in the evening, and the inspector at Vine Street police station evinced no surprise at seeing him, and did not even inquire his name and address. But Sanderson had never run over anyone before, and the shock of recognizing the girl huddled in the wet road, her evening cloak all mud-stained, and her yellow hair torn ruthlessly down, sobered him more quickly than all the pick-me-ups in the world could have done. Sanderson was a waster.

He would have told you so himself had you asked him, and would have seemed rather proud of the admission.

He was the sort of man about whom people really knew very little, but about whom they imagined a great deal.

He lived in a small bachelor flat somewhere behind Manchester Square, and he belonged to half a dozen more or less disreputable clubs, owned a racing car with a red devil mascot carrying a pitchfork, and the only creature in the world for whom he was known to possess any real affection was a queer-looking mongrel dog whom he called "Sometimes."

Sometimes was with him the night he ran over Sally Lingfield, and when she had been taken away to the hospital, Sometimes went along with his master to Vine Street police station, pausing unbidden at the entrance, and wagging his long, whip-like tail knowingly, as much as to say: "This is the place, isn't it? We've both been here before, many a time!"

He wagged his tail again when a friendly constable patted his head and produced a biscuit for him, and after consuming it he curled up contentedly enough in front of the fire and patiently waited for the proceedings to conclude.

Sanderson and Sometimes made an interesting pair, and they were almost as well-known in the West End as the Prince of Wales or the statue of Eros, for Sanderson stood six feet four in his socks, and generally wore a black slouch hat pulled down over his eyes, a tie with untidy flowing ends, and the gaudiest of socks.

Nobody quite knew his age, but he might have been anything between thirty and five-and-forty, and in a dissipated way he was a good-looking man, with grizzled hair and rather deep-set eyes.

Lately he had begun to look slightly coarse, and to walk with a hunch in his broad shoulders, as if he were indifferent to his appearance, or as if he found the burden of life too heavy.

Sometimes was a cross between a bull-terrier and a sheepdog. He had long, thin legs and a long, thin tail like the thong of a whip, which he banged against everything that came in his way, for Sometimes was eternally pleased with life, and wore a perpetual smile on his extraordinary face.

Round his neck he proudly carried a red, white and blue patent-leather collar, and attached to it was a metal disc which was engraved with the legend: "I belong to Philip Sanderson. My name is Sometimes." And underneath was the address of the bachelor flat behind Manchester Square.

It was commonly supposed that Philip Sanderson had money, for he never borrowed from his friends or acquaintances, and he always paid his way, but even to those who knew him best he was something of a mystery.

He never spoke of his past life, or of his relations—if, indeed, he had any—but there was a story told of him that he had once been in the Guards, and had been kicked out of them for drunkenness and insubordination.

Sanderson was not responsible for the story, neither admitting nor contradicting it, and its origin probably arose from the fact that when he was very much the worse for drink, and in a fighting mood, he would wave his long arms and defy the whole world by shouting at the top of his great voice, "Come on, boys! The Guards never retire!" His other chief characteristics were his indifference to most women, and his hatred of Josh Akers.

Josh Akers was also a waster, only of a different type, and the two men loathed one another as it is said only birds of a feather can loathe one another.

It was common knowledge that on more than one occasion Akers had partaken of the hospitality of a prison, that he had twice been caught cheating at cards, and had once been thrashed within an inch of his life by Philip Sanderson.

Lately they had entered into rivalry for the favors of Sally Lindfield, a dancer in a cabaret show at the Faun Night Club, of which both men were members, and so far the general opinion was that the betting was "odds on" in favor of Sanderson.

Sally Lingfield was about twenty-three, with the body of a child and the slender supple limbs of a fairy. She was as light as thistledown when she danced, and she had the innocent look of an angel which was sadly belied by her sharp tongue and shrewd worldliness.

She was supposed to be the daughter of a once well-known actress who had fallen upon evil days and died in miserable poverty, but all her immediate associates knew of her was that she shared a flat with another dancer several years her senior, and that she openly stated that she intended to marry a title.

Sanderson had no title, but he had money, and although he was a great deal older than Sally, she attracted him by her youthful grace and impudence as no other woman had ever attracted him.

CHAPTER II.—THE DOCTOR'S DECREE

In spire of what the onlookers—and they were many—said of Sanderson his intentions towards Sally were honorable. He was willing and ready to marry her.

"And that"—as he told her brutally one night when he drove her home after the Faun Club had closed—"is more than Akers will do."

Sally laughed—not very mirthfully, perhaps—and snuggled down closer beside him in the seat of his racing car.

"I don't know that I want to get married," she said. "And, anyway, you're too old."

"I'm forty next June," Sanderson told her.

He was a strangely self-controlled man where his affections were concerned, so controlled that even Sally herself was never sure of him; and there was a puzzled sort of look in her eyes as she peered sideways up at him from under her golden hair, which the night breeze was blowing into soft little curls.

Sally's chief beauty was her hair. Unbound, it reached below her knees, and sometimes when she danced she let it fall around her like a mantle, covering her far more efficiently than did the scanty little frocks she wore.

"Do you really like me?" she asked doubtfully.

Sanderson kept his eyes steadily before him.

"Well enough to marry you," he answered uncompromisingly.

She was silent for a moment, then she said:

"You've never once tried to kiss me."

Sanderson's foot suddenly pressed the accelerator, shooting the car forward at great speed.

"I don't care about kissing women who don't belong to me," he answered briefly.

"Oh!"

She seemed rather nonplussed. No man had ever before expressed such a sentiment to her, and she was not quite sure whether to take it as a compliment or not.

When they reached her flat Sanderson stopped the car, but remained at the wheel for a moment.

"Well, will you have me?" he asked brusquely.

Sally laughed.

Sally laughed.

"Lord! I haven't thought about it yet."

"If it wants thinking about as much as all that, I shouldn't trouble," Sanderson said grimly.

He opened the door and got out, turning to give her his hand.

"Well, good night!"

She peered up at him again with that puzzled look still in her eyes.

"Aren't you coming in?" she asked. "Poppy will be there."

"No."

"Aren't you a polite little gentleman?" she twitted him.

Sanderson made no answer; he just looked at her as a giant out of a fairy story might have looked at a fairy who had dared to flick him with her wings, hesitating as to whether he should crush her or not, then he turned back to his car.

"Well, good night!"

She did not reply; but she stood on the path in the moonlight till he had swung at a tremendous rate round the bend at the end of the street, then she sighed impatiently, and searched in her bag for the key.

* * *

It was just a week later that Sanderson knocked her down as he was turning out of Piccadilly in the early hours of the morning. She was quite alone, and, as she looked like an angel whom a ruthless hand had shot down while in flight. Her cloak—a gaudy thing lined with silver tissue—was spread out around her like wings, and she looked so small and frail that even the ambulance men from the hospital handled her more gently than was their wont as they carried her away.

Philip Sanderson stood silently by, his hat in his hand, his face stiff and inscrutable, with Somtimes close at his heels, wagging his long, whip-like tail.

When, an hour later, they came out of Vine Street police station, the first grey streak of dawn showed in the sky.

Sanderson had had to leave his car at the spot where he had knocked Sally down, for as he jammed on the brakes it had skidded round and buckled a front wheel against a lamp-post.

He and Somtimes passed it as they crossed Piccadilly—deserted and ghostlike it looked—and Sanderson shivered, and buttoned the big collar of his coat more closely round his throat.

Was Sally dead? The ambulance men had hinted vaguely at internal injuries. Sally was only one case amongst many to them; they did not faintly guess how Sanderson's heart was torn as he stood there so impassively, watching them carry her away.

He so dreaded hearing the doctor's verdict that there seemed to be leaden weights on his feet retarding him; he so longed to hear that his heart was racing so that he could hardly breathe, urging him forward.

And, after all, it was nothing so terribly serious—a broken leg—compound fracture, they were afraid, and an injured hip.

"Thank God!" And then hard on its heels came bitter realization of what this would mean to Sally.

No more dancing! Weeks certainly—perhaps months—before she could go back to the Faun Club.

Sanderson set his teeth. Well, she need never go back; he would marry her and look after her for the rest of her life—if she would have him!

Somehow he no longer seriously doubted that she would.

She would be glad of his care and protection—of his love! Almost shyly now he admitted to himself how much he loved her; though why—God alone knew!

She was not a lady—she was nothing which he had been brought up to believe a woman should be; and yet she had twined herself about his heart, refusing to let him go.

CHAPTER III.—THE LETTER

Sanderson knew he would be taking a risk by marrying Sally; but he was willing to take it. He looked years younger and happier as he asked a last question of the rather bored house surgeon whom he had insisted upon seeing.

"You are sure you have told me the worst?" There are no internal injuries?"

"Quite sure. If you come back later on—when the fracture has been set, you will be able to see her."

"Thank you."

Sometimes came forward, waving his tail, and the house surgeon stooped to pat him.

"Queer-looking beggar!" he said, in the friendly tone which everybody adopted towards Sometimes.

Sanderson smiled.

"Yes; my best friend."

He took up his hat and turned to the door.

"By the way"— the surgeon followed him—"Miss Lingfield gave me this letter, and asked me to be sure and see that it was delivered immediately." He hesitated, drawing an envelope from his pocket. "Possibly it is you to whom it is addressed," he added tentatively.

Sanderson took it and glanced at the name written in Sally's sprawly hand. There was the least silence, then he spoke.

"Thank you—yes. It is for me."

He put the letter into his pocket and walked away from the hospital, with Sometimes capering joyfully round him. Sometimes did not like visiting new places; he was like his master, he preferred old haunts; he was glad to leave the unaccustomed scent of the hospital behind him.

Philip Sanderson was back in his flat before he took Sally's letter from his pocket.

He shut the door behind him and switched on the light in the sitting-room, standing beneath it to read again the scrawled name on the envelope:

"Josh Akers, Esq."

It was written in pencil, and there were signs of agitation in the hurriedly-formed letters, which were blurred as if tears had fallen upon them.

There was no emotion in Sanderson's face as he looked at them, and his action was deliberate when, after a moment, he tore open the sealed flap and drew out the contents.

A half sheet of paper, probably torn from another letter, and bearing a few uneven lines.

> "I came as I said I should, and I have waited for you since half-past eleven. It is nearly four now, and I am afraid to wait any longer. Oh, Josh, don't be cruel to me. Don't you love me any more? I am willing to give up everything for you, you know that. Write to me or come to me. I shall be in all day until it is time to go to the Faun. I shall be in waiting for you—longing for you. I don't mind what happens, if only you still love me.
>
> "Your miserable SALLY."

Sanderson read the poor little letter through twice, then he folded it back into its envelope.

So it had been Akers all along!

Sanderson crossed the room and tried to stir the dying fire into a flame, but it had sunk too low, and he shivered in the coldness of the slowly breaking dawn.

Sometimes had taken possession of his own rug in a corner, and was already curled up and snoring peacefully, unconscious of the rising storm of hatred in his master's heart.

No doubt Sally had been to Akers' rooms that night. By her own admission, she must have been there, waiting humiliatingly, till she had given up all hope and had fled back home in the early hours of the morning, only to meet with a second tragic happening beneath the wheels of a car driven by the drunken hands of the man who loved her.

Beast that he was! As great a beast in his besotted way as Akers, who had won her love and then thrown it in her face.

Sanderson felt sick with shame and bitterest jealousy as she stood staring down at the ashes in the grate.

Neither of them were fit to touch her, and yet at this very moment she was lying in a bare, ugly hospital ward, her heart broken by one of them, and her little body by the other.

Weeks, perhaps months, before she could even walk again, and in the meantime, what was to become of her?

The people at the Faun Cafe would soon forget her and fill her place; London was full of dancers only too eager and anxious to seize every opportunity which came their way. In a short while the very name of Sally Lingfield would be forgotten, and then what would become of her?

Of course, if she would marry him—— But now he had no real hope of that. Experience had taught him that the Sally Lingfields of life can be obstinately faithful, even to their own undoing. Besides—she had never loved him!

He paced up and down his room till broad daylight came, and later the woman who looked after him and brought his meals.

She made no comment when she saw that he had not been to bed; she was used to his irregular mode of life, and she proceeded to rake out the dead fire, and relay and light it as if Sanderson had not been present.

"Can you fancy any breakfast this morning?" she asked with sarcasm.

Sanderson was out in the little hall, going towards the bathroom, but he turned to answer her.

"I'll eat anything you like! I've got some work to do today, and I need fortifying."

"Work!" Mrs. Kiff was sceptical. "That's a bit of a change," she submitted. "What sort of work, may I ask, sir?"

Sanderson doubled his fists.

"I'm going to kill a man," he said, with mock melodrama.

Mrs. Kiff remained unmoved.

"Well, maybe you're right," she agreed placidly. "Perhaps I'd better fry you two eggs with your bacon, so as you can do the job properly."

But she smiled to herself after Sanderson had disappeared into the bathroom. Although she entirely disapproved of him and of all his ways, yet deep down in her sorely-tried heart she had a queer sort of affection for him.

She argued that he could not be so bad, or the dog would not be so devoted to him.

"Dogs is the nearest to humans that there is," so she argued with the other woman who helped her in the flats. "And as they don't talk, they probably knows more than we do. You take it from me that that dog of Mr. Sanderson's ain't no fool. You take it from me that that dog knows that there's many a man who drinks too much as 'as a 'eart of gold 'id somewhere about 'im."

So she fried two eggs with a couple of rashers and filled the toast rack, noting with satisfaction that there was none of it left when later she went to remove the tray. It never occurred to her that Sometimes had eaten his share, and Sometimes was too crafty a dog to put forward the suggestion himself.

CHAPTER IV.—"THE GUARDS NEVER RETIRE!"

About twelve o'clock Philip Sanderson was at the hospital again. In the waiting-room he met Poppy Sladen, the girl who shared Sally's flat with her.

She was a tired-looking creature with raven-black hair, greatly assisted by artificial means, and too crimson lips.

She greeted Sanderson rather rudely, and her chief concern seemed to be as to who was to pay Sally's share of the rent while she was laid up.

"She's got nothing saved," she told him flatly. "Never knew such a spendthrift in my life; and it's not likely they'll do anything for her at the Faun. There's too many of us at the game. Dare say they're queueing up after her job already." She looked at him sideways with her calculating eyes. "It's your fault, you know," she told him meaningly. "I suppose you'd had too much drink as usual."

Sanderson met her gaze squarely.

"Right, as usual," he said coolly. "You've got a wonderful brain, you know, Poppy."

Poppy shrugged her shoulders.

"Well, as long as Sally's half of the rent doesn't fall on me, all right," she said. "I guess I'll be off."

And she left him to wait impatiently till he could be taken up to see Sally.

She did not look so very ill. That was his first relieved thought as he tiptoed across the polished boards of the ward to her bedside. She had come out of the chloroform, and was lying on her back, her blue child's eyes staring up at the white-washed ceiling with a little far-away expression of pain in them.

There was a cage over her injured leg, which made a hump under the bedclothes, and her wonderful hair lay spread out on each side of her in two heavy plaits.

"Sally!"

Her eyes wandered down to the level of his set face and hardened as they recognized him.

"What have you come for?" she asked resentfully.

Sanderson tried to take her hand, but she jerked it away from him.

"To see how you are; to tell you how sorry I am——"

"It wouldn't have happened if you'd been sober," she said curtly.

Sanderson made no answer. He wanted to say that he would give ten years of his life to undo what he had done; he wanted to say that his heart was wrung with pity and sorrow for her, but such words were difficult to him.

Presently she asked a question.

"How long have I got to be here?"

"I don't know. Not long, I hope."

Sally laughed bitterly and closed her blue eyes.

"No harm in hoping," she said. "I asked the doctor, and he said it might be weeks . . ." Tears welled from beneath her lids. "What do you think is to become of me?" she asked.

"I shall look after you, of course," Sanderson answered quickly. "Anything you want . . ."

She interrupted bluntly.

"Well, I don't want you, for a start."

Sanderson winced.

"What do you want, Sally?" he asked gently.

She turned her head away.

"Nothing you can give me," she muttered.

He knew well enough of whom she was thinking, and his jealousy and hatred of Josh Akers stirred like a live thing in his heart.

After a moment he said awkwardly:

"I've sent you some grapes and some flowers. I've told them that you are to have anything you want. If there's a private ward, Sally——"

She interrupted fiercely:

"Yes, I can see myself moping to death in a private ward! Thank you, I like a bit of life about me, even df you have done your best to kill me."

"I can't make you understand how sorry—terribly sorry I am!"

The words sounded stilted and almost unfeeling, and yet they came from Sanderson's very heart.

He would have given anything he possessed to have taken her in his arms and comforted her with his love; but he knew it was not what she wanted.

After a moment he asked awkwardly if she would like him to go.

Perhaps her kind eyes saw the strain in his, for she said cheerfully:

"There is no danger. Of course she is in pain; but in a day or two she will feel better and be pleased to see you."

Sanderson did not think so. He knew well enough there was only one man in the world whom Sally would be pleased to see, and that man would probably refuse to come even if he were sent for.

Refuse to come!

Sanderson saw the world red as he walked out into the sunshine. He stood on the path for a moment looking up and down the street, then he hailed a taxicab.

"Where to, sir?"

Sanderson hesitated yet again, then he gave the address of Akers' flat. He would make the fellow come to Sally; if he had to drag him through the streets by the scruff of his neck he would make him come. The thought of an encounter with Akers exhilarated him.

"The Guards never retire," he told himself, as he got into the cab and slammed the door.

Phillip Sanderson dismissed his taxi, ignored the lift-boy's invitation, and walked up the three flights of stone stairs to Akers' flat.

He was a man to whom actions came first and reflection afterwards. He never troubled to think what he would say to Akers when they met, or what arguments he would use. Sanderson's arguments were in his fists, and they were usually unanswerable.

CHAPTER V.—SCORES SETTLED

When Sanderson reached the third floor Akers was just leaving his flat. He carried a suit-case, and an overcoat was slung over his arm. When he saw Philip he stood still, an ugly expression in his eyes.

"What the hell do you want?" he demanded.

Sanderson barred the way.

"Come back to the flat and I'll tell you," he answered.

Akers blustered.

"I'm going away. I've got a train to catch. Some other time——"

"No," said Sanderson. He was the bigger man of the two, and at that moment there was something about him that defied resistance.

Akers looked at him silently for a moment, then he shrugged his shoulders.

"Very well, but be damned to you, all the same!"

They went back together into the flat, and Sanderson shut the door behind them.

Akers flung his coat down and dropped his suit-case.

"Well, what is it? I'm in a hurry, but as you don't often honor me with the pleasure of your company——" he said with a sneer.

Sanderson remained immovable.

"I'm only here now to see that you pay a debt," he answered uncompromisingly; "or should I say 'one of your debts'?"

Akers flushed dully.

He was a handsome man of rather an ordinary type, with dark eyes and dark hair with an effeminate wave in it, a sallow complexion and a slight, dark moustache.

"I don't owe you a farthing!" he broke out furiously. "I don't owe——"

"Not to me—to Miss Lingfield," Sanderson said.

"Sally Lingfield!" Akers laughed unpleasantly. "Well, if she's sent you here to take up the cudgels on her behalf, you can get out as soon as you like," he said with returning confidence. "For the past week I've spent my time dodging her. I've had enough of that girl. I——"

"If you say another disrespectful word of Miss Lingfield I will knock you down," Sanderson said.

There was a poignant silence, then Akers shrugged his shoulders.

"Of course, if she's such a friend of yours!" he submitted hatefully. Sanderson's hands were clenched, but he kept his self-control.

"At the present moment she is lying in hospital with a compound fracture and an injured hip," he said quietly.

"Good lord!" The least little flicker of concern crossed the younger man's face, then he laughed.

"Well, she'll be kept out of mischief for a bit, anyway," he said brutally. "How did it happen?"

"I knocked her down last night, crossing the Haymarket."

"You did! By Jove! That's about cooked your goose with Sally—eh?"

"Yes. I've been nearly as much of a swine to her as you have—but not quite." Sanderson came a step nearer. "When she was picked up she gave the hospital doctor a letter for you—and he handed it to me."

Sanderson put a hand in his pocket and drew the letter out. "Here it is," he said coolly. "I opened it and read it."

"You opened it!" Akers snatched the letter from him. "You opened it and read it! What the hell——"

He broke off, his eyes hurriedly scanning Sally's pathetic appeal, then he looked up defiantly.

"Well, that's that," he said.

"Yes," Sanderson agreed quietly. "That's that, and what are you going to do about it?"

Going to do? Why nothing. What do you expect me to do? I've always treated Sally fairly enough. We were capital friends until she started this idea of getting married. You put that idea into her head. She was always saying that if she was good enough for you to marry, she was good enough for me to marry." He laughed. Sanderon's composure deceived him, and he began to recover his jauntiness. "Sally's right enough," he went on, "but not for anything permanent. Besides, I'm not a marrying man. I'm sorry she's hurt, of course, but it rather strikes me that that's your pigeon—eh?"

"It may be months—it will certainly be weeks—before she can walk," Sanderson said, in a dangerously quiet voice.

"I know. I once broke a leg myself," Akers agreed airily. "I was nearly a year before I was right again. Rotten luck, isn't it? Give her my love, and say——"

Sanderson came yet another step nearer, and now his eyes were ugly and his lips white.

"What are you going to do about it?" he said again.

"My dear fellow!" Akers backed away from him. "What can I do? I've no money, you know that well enough, and even if I had, she's got no claim on me. You knocked her down, you say; well, the responsibility is yours. Won't the people at the Faun do anything for her?"

"You know jolly well they won't."

Akers shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, what do other people do if they've got no money?" he asked uncomfortably. "What are hospitals for? She'll be well looked after."

"She has not asked for money, and neither have I."

"My dear fellow——"

Sanderson broke in with a roar like an enraged bull.

"What are you going to do about it? How are you going to answer that letter? Are you going to the hospital to see her?"

"I certainly am not." Akers glanced round the room uneasily. It was not the first time he and Sanderson had tried conclusions, and he still had an unpleasant recollection of the last occasion.

"Look here, Sanderson," he began conciliatingly, "I've done with Sally, and I've told her so. She's like all her type, she feeds a chap up in the end. You like her, apparently, and that's your look-out! But in the circumstances I really can't see what you expect me to do."

"I expect you to behave like a decent human being, and go and see her, at least."

"I'll be dashed if I do! I loathe hospitals and illness, and I know Sally. She'll only cry and make a scene." He made a gesture of repugnance. "I tell you I've done with her."

"And I tell you that you haven't," Sanderson said in a voice of flint.

The two men eyed one another silently, then Akers laughed.

"Didn't know you were such a saint," he said aggressively. "I shouldn't care much myself for another man's discarded goods, and I never knew that you were the sort——"

"Well, you know now!" Sanderson said, and knocked him down.

CHAPTER VI.—AT THE HOSPITAL

Akers crashed heavily against the table, after Sanderson knocked him down, knocking over a glass vase standing in the center, and scattering its flowers and water all over the floor. He struck his head a nasty blow, but was up again in a second, swearing horribly, his face livid, and blood streaming from a cut lip.

He made a bull-like rush at Sanderson, only to meet with another blow between the eyes which sent him down again, and this time he made no attempt to rise.

Sanderson waited a moment, then he crossed the room and bent over him.

Akers lay in a huddled position, his head bent sidways almost as if his neck were broken, the blood from his cut lip running across his cheek and down into his hair.

Sanderson made a brief examination, dragged him into a more comfortable position, fetched some water from the sideboard and threw it over his face; then, without another glance at him, he picked up his hat and walked out of the flat, slamming the door behind him.

Out in the street he was surprised to find how shaken he felt. He walked along, carrying his hat in his hand, glad of the fresh air on his face.

There had been very little satisfaction in hitting him; it was like crushing a loathly reptile, and being conscious of the sensation on one's foot for hours afterwards.

But at last he knew the worst with regard to Sally; knew that she had nothing to hope for in that direction, and he wondered how she would take it when he told her.

What in Heaven's name could she see in the man, with his sneering tongue and too bold eyes? What was there about him inspired so much love in her that she could stoop to write such a passionate appeal?

> ". . . I shall be waiting for you . . . longing for you. . . .
> I don't mind what happens if only you still love me. . . ."

She had written those words to Akers—written them with her heart's blood, only to be laughed at.

"The low hound! The dog!" Sanderson ground the words from between his teeth as he strode along, then caught them back again remorsefully.

* * *

When Sanderson called at the hospital the following day he was told that the doctor would like to speak to him.

"The doctor!" His face changed. "Is anything the matter?" he asked quickly.

The nurse who had given him the message did not know; she showed him into a small, empty waiting-room and left him there for what seemed an eternity. Footsteps passed and re-passed, echoing hollowly through the bare corridors. Outside in the street the buses rumbled by, and a shrill-voiced newsboy cried the winners.

Even the waiting-room, bare and ugly as it was, seemed fraught with death and tragedy, with the faint, indefinable odor of drugs and chloroform, which always seems to pervade every hospital, hanging heavily on the air.

Once he heard a woman crying as she passed the door; once he thought he heard a cry of pain, and he began to pace up and down, his nerves tingling, his throat dry.

Supposing Sally was worse? Supposing they had discovered some fresh injury, and wanted to tell him that she was going to die?

Sometimes, lying with his nose between his clumsy paws, watched his master with bright, anxious eyes.

Something was wrong with his beloved King of Men, he knew, and when at last the doctor came, strolling into the room as casually as if broken limbs and disease and death were of no more import than a grazed knuckle, he rose to his feet, growling threateningly.

Sanderson kicked him into silence with a gentle foot.

"Lie down, you fool!"

For once he was irritated with Sometimes; for once there was to be something that concerned him more nearly and keenly than his dog.

"Well, what is it?" he asked bluntly. "What's the matter?"

The doctor looked at him in surprise. He was a very equable young man, to whom the sight of blood had never been more than a bottle of overturned ink would have been, and who revelled in his profession.

"Oh, there's nothing the matter," he said calmly. "Nothing, at least, that need seriously alarm you. I would not have troubled you in the matter at all, only Miss Lingfield's friend—I forget her name—she was here yesterday—I understood from her that you were Miss Lingfield's nearest relative. Is that so?" He paused politely for a reply.

"Yes," said Sanderson shortly.

The young doctor looked relieved.

"Well, that being so," he went on more easily, "I think I ought to tell you that, although at first we hoped differently, I am afraid it is going to be a long time before the patient will be able to get about and walk properly."

"Well, I expected that," Sanderson said bluntly. "If there's nothing fresh to tell me——"

The young man fidgeted.

"There's nothing fresh," he answered reluctantly. "Except that when we set the fracture yesterday there was some little difficulty about it. It is impossible to say exactly what may happen, but if the bone does not knit as it should do, another operation may be necessary."

"Is that a usual occurrence?" Sanderson asked bluntly.

The young doctor colored.

"Fortunately, no," he answered. "But I understood you to say that Miss Lingfield is a dancer—or did she tell me herself? And, of course, that being so, if she is to dance again, every possible care must be taken."

Sanderson broke in almost rudely:

"I told you and I told the ward sister that I wished everything possible to be done. I said that no expense was to be spared. I am willing to pay anything—no matter what it is."

"Quite—quite!" The doctor fidgeted with his tie. "There is no cause for alarm yet. Everything may turn out excellently and be quite plain sailing, but I thought it my duty to tell you, as Miss Lingfield's nearest relative, that there are such possibilities."

Sanderson looked down at him with hard eyes. There were so many things he wanted to say, to ask, but somehow he felt stiff and awkward.

"Well, I suppose I can see her?" he broke out at last.

"Oh, certainly, certainly. You know your way——"

"Yes, I know my way," Sanderson said heavily. "I suppose the dog may stay here?" He turned to Sometimes, and threw his hat down on the floor beside him.

"On guard! The guards never retire!" he said, and followed the doctor from the room.

ISHBEL McDONALD FOND OF CHILDREN

States Also Women Are to Co-operate With Men and Not to Compete in Work.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP).—Interviewed while in this city, Miss Ishbel Macdonald showed most animation when she talked about children. In her work in the east end of London, she daily comes in contact with hundreds of working-class mothers and their children. "The children know that I understand them," she said. Speaking of her work in the County Council she stated that elementary education, clinics and the health of the school children were her special province.

To the women of Canada, Miss Macdonald had a message to give. "Women are coming out into public life," she said, "not to work against men, but to co-operate with them in improving public affairs," continuing, she added: "I do not believe in equality. Men and women can not be compared. Women are just as important as men but they are not equal any more than A and B are in the alphabet."

Education is Miss Macdonald's chief interest. She was elected to the London County Council before she had a vote. She has applied now for registration for the franchise.

"I am not going to stand for election to Parliament," she laughed, but would not say that she would never enter the political arena for this purpose. Such was not her intention though, she thought.

The women of the Labor party take a great interest in politics in England she stated. The working class mother was inclined to put her heart and soul into politics.

She is a very charming girl, Miss Ishbel, and quite pretty with her kindly brown eyes, unabbreviated brown tresses, smooth brow and rosy cheeks, innocent of cosmetics.

Her younger sister, Joan, is a second year medical student at the University of Edinburgh. She wears her hair in the "Eton" bob style; Sheila, the youngest, is the tallest of the trio. She is still at high school, being but 17 years of age.

ORGANIZATION IS CONGRATULATED

Canadian Alliance for Women's Vote Congratulates English Organization.

POLITICAL EQUITY

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 21 (by the Canadian Press).—In congratulating its sister organization in England on the achievement of complete political equity for women, the Canadian Alliance for Women's Vote, of Quebec, sent a letter to the St. Joan's Social and Political Alliance, which is the Catholic suffrage organization of Britain. The message is as follows:

"The members of the Canadian Alliance for Women's Vote, of Quebec, rejoice in your success. You have at last received the reward of your marvellous efforts. Sixty years of striving have brought you to the realization of that which you were pursuing. I thank you for your good wishes concerning the women of Quebec. May the women of the Province of Quebec, who are actually the only women of the Dominion and the only white women of the British Empire deprived of their provincial rights, enjoy the same victory in the very near future. May our legislators understand that justice and civilization go hand in hand, and that by the conquest of selfishness and the recognition of everyone's rights humanity gradually progresses. With our best congratulations."—(Signed) Idola Saint Jean, president.

Among the letters received by the St. Jean Alliance, one of the most prized, was that of the Bishop of Pella, who said:

"What not long ago was lookedupon as an absurd and impossible demand is now a commonplace of national life. Let women use their vote, so hardly won, and use it widely in all questions affecting the well-being of the community, especially women and children, and to defend the rights of the Catholic Church and Catholic education."

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The extremely low cut back is exemplified in the black satin frock indicated above. The front of this frock is cut fairly high.

(By Mary Marshall)

I understand that the fashion for everying frocks cut low at the back is not popular in Paris, and as frequent-happensly happens with unpopular fashions in France, English women are blamed for it. A French journalist has hit upon the clever idea of finding some connection between the fashion for bare-backed gowns and the fact that women can't cook and that families are smaller than they should be. The really maternal, domestic type of woman, he seems to think, would prefer to have her gowns cut low in front.

Not a very logical deduction, it seems to me, because English women never could cook as well as French women even when they wore front decolletages and the birth rate is no lower now in England than in France. Besides, if French women don't like the bare-back evening gown they don't have to wear it because fashionable English women do like it. Certainly Paris has never followed the lead of London in the matter of clothes before.

I suppose M. Maurice de Waleffe means to indicate that it is only because women follow the fashion of being very slender that they prefer the low-cut back—and his impression seems to be that only plump women care for babies or like to cook.

I think, however, that a simpler, more obvious explanation of the bare back gown comes nearer the truth. Interest in jewelry has been tremendously increased. It is the fashion to wear all sorts of lovely necklaces, brooches and pendants and lovely stones may be displayed to better advantage on the smooth surface of satin or velvet, lame or lace than on bare skin. At least the jewelers and dressmakers seem to think so.

Women tried as a fad to wear their neck chains with the ornaments hanging down at the back, but they found it better to let them hang as they always had hung and to change the position of the decolletage.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

HOOKED rugs are a great demand just now and again we are going back to the days of our grandmothers and great-grandmothers. This is just one of the many things which they did in their day, for hooking rugs was among their daily tasks and is as much an art as sewing or quilting. I heard a woman say the other day that quilting was getting to be a lost art too. There are hundreds of children in our city who never saw a quilt quilted let alone seeing a rug being hooked. One American lady while visiting in the city noticed some quilts being made and thinking the color combinations so lovely, that she ordered some to be made. One can hardly imagine all the work that is put into them, the cutting, of the little pieces of cloth, sewing them into a pattern with the proper colors together, and then the quilting.

• • • • • •

But go back to the hooked rugs. Hooking rugs is an old craft, it originated back in the 17th century in Belgium and Germany, and the English fishing coasts. I was reading an article recently on hooked rugs which said to hook as it ought to be hooked, all you need is a wooden frame 7 feet square, a hook, a large piece of burlap, rags or yarn of every description, the patience of Job deft fingers, a sense of line, a knowledge of perspective and color, a month to spend at the task and a sweet disposition. You see, it takes a great amount of patience and time, beside the work which you put into it. The hook which is used resembles that of the shoemaker's awl with a wooden handle but the steel part is thicker at the end like a crochet needle.

• • • • • •

There is a lady in New York who has been devoting her entire life to making hook rugs since 1922. She learned the art in Nova Scotia where she was born. "Any little girl could knit a pair of socks or mittens" she said "and nearly everybody could make a quilt, but it took a woman to hook a rug. We used to have parties at the end of the winter and exhibit our treasures."

• • • • • •

Of course, the women and girls had more time in which to do these things than they have to-day, but they would work very hard in order to turn out something which would be worthy of note. One lady said if you were trying to hook a rose into a rug and spend day after day over it, and then at the end of that time you couldn't almost smell it, jou just pulled it out and started all over again. A very popular type of rug to-day is made in the hit-or-miss pattern and the color scheme may be anything you desire.

When the baby is learning to walk, or is lively enough to jump around in the high-chair, the mother has a lively time, too, beside the housework to watch them. One lady who said she was always afraid her children would rock their high-chairs over on them, or when learning to walk would pull the high-chair over on top of them, got her husband to put an ordinary screen-door hook on the back of the chair and a screw-eye in the woodwork in each room where she kept the baby. She just hooked the chair to this and there was no danger of toppling the chair over. She had these on her porch, too, so that she might put the baby out doors. This would save many an anxious moment and much time for some mothers.

Frequently just the night that we plan to have the cold supper turns out cold itself and we are afraid the cold meal will not be enjoyed. Just take down a can of cream soup on the occasion and start the meal with that. It will add just the piping hot touch needed.

• • • • • •

At this season of the year there are so many lovely flowers growing along the roadside that it is hard to resist the invitation they seem to give to pick them. By flowers, I do not mean the products of the florist shop, but the ordinary so-called weeds. Do we never think how lovely a bunch of clover, or buttercups or Queen Anne's lace really looks? Try it some day and see how much cheer these posies will bring.

• • • • • •

Here is a way to keep them fresh until one can get them home to their waiting vases. A rubber apron and a wet towel will do the trick, and it is no trouble to tuck them away in the car when you start on an outing. When the flowers are picked lay them on the wet towel, roll the bundle up, and put the rubber apron around the wet package. When you get home you will not have a bunch of withered flowers ready for the garbage can, but lovely flowers as fresh as when they left the field.

TROPICAL GINGER BREAD

Contributed by Mrs. D. Wellman, Bonarlaw.)

Half cup of butter; half cup of sugar; 2 eggs; one teaspoon of soda dissolved in ½ cup of molasses; 1 teaspoon ginger; one of cinnamon; 1½ cups of flour; ½ cup of cold water; pinch of salt; 1 cup of grated cocoanut.

Bake in a moderate oven 40 minutes. Ice heavily and cover with a generous sprinkling of cocoanut.

TRAVEL-LOG.

MUSINGS BY DRACHMANN'S MOUNT

Two friends had followed me from Copenhagen to Odense from there to Silkeborg and Aalborg, and were contemplating taking the steamer at Frederikshaven for Sweden. "If I thought we could see something more than more beautiful lakes and farms, I would like to see more of Denmark," said one of them.

"Then," I answered, "miss this boat to Sweden and run up to Skagen with me." And they did.

Every time I have heard from them since, they have referred to the pleasure of that Skagen trip. Here where the Kattegat, and the Skagerak shriek, roar and rush at each other in an everlasting battle of Jutland, Denmark is certainly different. But we did not dwell long over the facts that here the king has a summer home, that the fine old lighthouse is worth climbing, or that the brave life-boatsmen here first taught the world how best to rescue wrecked mariners, we went over the shifting dunes and stood by Holger Drachmann's lonely tomb and thought of the poet who gave Byron to Denmark and who in his East of the Sun and West of the Moon and his Nanna and The Cruise of the Wild Duck immortalized for the race the sturdy lives of the simple folk.

To clean gas stove burners boil them in a strong solution of washing soda and water for about half an hour. This will remove all the grease. Rinse thoroughly, dry and put back into the stove.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dear Marion:

In your letter to Ruth you remarked that parents should not joke their children on personal peculiarities. Do you think you are right? Isn't it better for them to make the children feel used to these peculiarities?

I think your page is wonderfully interesting, and certainly The Examiner made a good move in acquiring your services. I sometimes think it too bad that one who can write so charmingly should hide under a pen name.

Sincerely yours,
Eunice."

I believe, Eunice, that everyone is meant to make her life fine and beautiful; I believe that everyone can do so; I believe that children's minds are particularly susceptible to suggestions; I believe that if the idea is implanted in a child's mind that in some way he is inferior, that impression will stay wth him all his life. When you simmer all of these down together you arrive at the conclusion that if lives are to be beautiful and happy, and no handicaps placed upon the young people in that aim, their minds must not have injected into them in scolding, banter or play the idea that life for them will be anything else but beautiful. Don't you agree with that? Not joking, or ever-repeating pity, will help overcome childish difficulties but an understanding comradeship of older persons. To be twitted on some peculiarity just sours the unfortunate individual on the world.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I have a boy friend who seems to care for me a lot. We've gone out together nearly a year. Whenever we go to parties and I dance with someone else he gets pale with anger. He says it's love, not jealousy. What kind of love it that anyway?

Sincerely,
Marguerite."

Not any kind of love, say I. Just silly, vain, possessive, egotistical jealousy, and you'd better nip it in the bud before it gets a habit.

This business of a woman being a man's chattel is long since past, it is obsolete as the dodo. Tell your young man that if he cares to keep your respect and maybe make you love him, he had better treat you like a human being and not like a puppy on a leash—muzzled at that.

And, by the way, it's a lot the girl's fault that she lets herself be bossed. The best way to banish unreasonable jealousy is to laugh at it. The next best way is to simply disregard it.

Otonabee: I am very glad to give you the information about the bloodstone. It has been regarded as especially lucky by primitive peoples living in widely distant quarters of the globe. From the most ancient times the Egyptians and Hebrews held it in high esteem, using it in connection with their religous ceremonial, and the North American Indians quite inndependently used it to ward off the evil spirits. It is a stone that is said to bring strength and courage and is appropriate to anyone starting out on a dangerous enterprise. By all means wear one while learning to swim, not to keep you from drowning, but to keep you from having fear of the water.

THE NEW HAT.

By Selma Hart.

Bill Kemp, the head of the exchange department, looked up wearily from his desk. It had been a day of odd jobs—refunds, complaints, exchanges. Everything had been relatively unimportant and yet everything demanded instant attention. Had Bill Kemp been ten years older than he was he would not have taken it all so seriously, and consequently would have been as fresh at the end of the day as he was early in the morning.

"I wanted," said a pair of violet eyes, at least Bill Kemp would have sworn that it was the eyes that spoke, so timidly and questionably did they regard him, "I want to know if I could do something about my lace hat."

Bill Kemp sighed. They were such marvelous eyes. And then to be mundanely interested in a hat—a silly lace hat.

"Well," he said gruffly, "what did you contemplate doing about this lace hat? If it's been worn it cannot possibly be accepted for exchange or refund."

The latter words issued mechanically from his mouth, and he wondered subconsciously how many hundreds of times he had uttered that same sentence—sometimes about gloves, sometimes about hair goods, sometimes about shoes.

"Oh, it hasn't been worn!" came the soft voice again. The voice sounded as though it were full of tears and he looked at the violet eyes again. Sure enough, there were large tears there.

Bill Kemp steeled himself. All women used tears as a means to an end and he determined that he would not be taken in. "Well, go on, go on," he said as testily as he could.

"You see I decided last Saturday that I could take it—it's a beautiful hat. Oh, it was really the most beautiful hat in the whole world, I think," she said wistfully. "I looked and looked at it—before, you know—and on Saturday I paid a deposit on it, a deposit of a dollar. I was to take it this Saturday, but——" the lips that were soft and pink closed firmly. "I—I believe that I shan't need it after all."

"And so you want the dollar back again I take it?" he said, tapping his pencil against the desk and regarding it coolly.

"Oh my, no," she said softly. "Of course they wouldn't give back the dollar, but I went to the millinery department and the clerk said that I had agreed to take it and I would have to finish paying for it. I—I have the money but——"

"Will you sit down?" said Bill Kemp, rising suddenly, wondering why it was that he had not thought of it before. "I haven't been head of the department long and I am at a loss to understand one thing. Why do women buy a thing, take it home and then run right back here to return it?"

The violet eyes crinkled at the corners, and the soft pink lips twitched. "I don't know," she confessed. "I never do myself. It's not that I probably wouldn't if I had the chance, but I work and so scarcely have time to buy what I need let alone buying things for the fun of thinking I really owned them for awhile before I returned them. It must be lots of fun, mustn't it?"

"But you want to leave this flower hat on our hands," he expostulated.

"Oh, oh, not flower!" she exclaimed in horrified tones, "it is lace. And besides, I don't want to leave it on your hands. I'd love it myself only I heard about this Mrs. Benzingen whose husband is in the hospital and whose children are all so small that she can't work. It wouldn't be right to wear a lovely hat when they might be—hungry. If you say I don't need to take the hat I'm going to take a basket out there to-night." She looked at her watch. "It's 'way, 'way out in——"

"You run along and get the basket and I'll see about the dollar refund. Then when you get the basket filled come back here and get the dollar and I'll take the basket out for you—wherever it is. You can't be running all over town—a girl like you——"

He listened to her words of thanks with an air of abstraction. "We ought to get a bite of supper at a restaurant first, maybe," he said nonchalantly, quite as though he were in the habit of asking strange girls to eat with him. He sent the call boy for the dollar and pulling a card from his pocket, wrote down:

"She'd like a hat—lace—later."

And the violet-eyed Mrs. Bill Kemp with her still shiny wedding ring was happily surprised on her birthday a few months later with a round hatbox tied with a huge violet bow. The hatbox held a hat of lace.

AGED LADY DIES.

Mrs. B. W. Wyman, 90 Years. Lived in Strict Retirement.

VICTORIA, B.C., Aug. 21.—In her 90th year a sister of Bret Harte died here recently. Mrs. B. H. Wyman continued through life to regard closely her association with California, although for the past four years she had made her home with her daughter and son-in-law here. She lived in strict retirement and by express request, only relatives attend the funeral, including two daughters from California, who had been summoned to her bedside. The remains will be interred at Oakland, California, on account of the family associations.

"A delicate subject —but these girls must be told"

—a dean of women says

Unfortunately this delicate subject is seldom discussed. Now, a new patented process deodorizes this scientific sanitary pad completely

EVEN among girls who are very frank with each other, there is a question of daintiness, of fastidious personal care that is unfortunately seldom mentioned. Yet many women are unconsciously guilty. At certain times they are seriously offensive to others. With realization comes constant fear and worry.

Today these fears are ended. Science has discovered a way to counteract this offense.

Kotex now completely deodorizes

Kotex has brought a new idea of feminine hygiene to women all over the world. In the past ten years they have learned new comfort, new ease of mind through this sanitary protection. Now, after years of work, a process has been perfected that completely, amazingly ends all odors. In Kotex laboratories the one remaining problem in connection with sanitary pads is solved.

Shaped to fit, too

Because corners of the pad are rounded and tapered, it may be worn without evidence under the most clinging gown. There is none of that conspicuous bulkiness so often associated with old-fashioned methods. And you can adjust the filler, make it thinner, thicker, narrower—to suit your own special needs. It is easily disposed of, no laundering is necessary. A new process makes it softer than ever before.

Buy a box today... 60c for twelve. On sale at all drug, dry goods and departmental stores.

Deodorizes . . . and 4 other important features:

1—Softer gauze ends chafing; pliable filler absorbs as no other substance can;

2—Corners are rounded and tapered; no evidence of sanitary protection under any gown;

3—Deodorizes—safely, thoroughly, by a new and exclusive patented process;

4—Adjust it to your needs; filler may be made thinner, thicker, narrower as required;

and

5—It is easily disposed of; no unpleasant laundry.

BLACK CATS DEFEAT TORONTO LEAFS 4-1

TAKE LEAD IN EIGHTH

Leafs Fail to Hit Behind Collins in Hurlers' Duel.

SCORE IN LAST

TORONTO, Aug. 21. — Toronto Leafs gave a close up view of why they lost nine straight games on the road in making it ten here yesterday afternoon. Jersey City who started them down grade sliding beat them in the opening game of the series here 4 to 1. The game told only half the story, however, and that was the failure of the Leafs in hitting. They could do nothing with Horn after the second inning.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—The Buffalo Bisons romped over the Newark Bears in the opener of the series here yesterday by a score of 9 to 5. Luke Urban featured at the bat for the Bisons, driving home four runners with a long triple and single. The Bisons suffered a severe pitching loss when Wertz twisted his knee in sliding back to first base in the seventh inning and had to be assisted from the field. Wertz may be lost for ten days or more. Up to the seventh, Wertz hurled winning ball and had a good lead. The Bisons paddled three Newark hurlers vigorously and had the game sewed up after the second inning.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Rochester's Red Wings opened their home stand here yesterday afternoon by beating the Reading Keys, 6 to 3. The Wings tallied three runs in the eighth inning with the score tied at 3 all. Lefty Irvin pitched good ball throughout for Rochester.

GIANTS WIN FROM REDS

Retain Lead in National League by Winning 5-3 Victory.

HEAVY HITTING BATTLE

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—The Giants retained their lead in the National League pennant race yesterday by pounding out a 5 to 3 victory over the Reds at Cincinnati.

The breaks as well as the hitting helped the Giants to win. The second run came in when Dressen, trying to catch Welsh at the plate, hit him with the ball.

New York's scoring was confined to the third, fifth, and sixth innings after the Reds had sent two runs over in the first.

Cohen's triple to right in the sixth with Terry on first practically settled the game by putting New York two runs ahead. Andy scored the Giants' fifth run in the same inning.

An orgy of hitting seldom seen on Wrigley field, Philadelphia crushed the Cubs, 11 to 2, in the opening game of their series. It was the first victory in nine starts here this season for the Phillies, but their fifth straight over the Cubs, who dropped a four game series to the cellar occupants recently at Philadelphia.

The Phils batted four Cub pitchers, Jones, Bush, Weinhert and Holley for 18 hits, which netted a total of 32 bases. Zeach, Klein and Welsh lashed out home runs, while Thompson and Hurst got two doubles each. In the eighth inning, when they scored four runs, the first four batters got two homers and two doubles in succession off Bush and Rolley.

Homer for Wilson

Jimmy Wilson's single with the bases full in the ninth inning gave the Cardinals a 2 to 1 victory over the Brooklyn Robins here yesterday and kept St. Louis only two points behind the Giants in the National League pennant race.

The St. Louis victory broke the winning streak of Dazzy Vance who had won seven games in succession. His last defeat was at the hands of the Cardinals with Jess Haines, yesterday's winning pitcher, in the box. Haines came in to relieve Fred Frankhouse in the eighth with the score tied.

Boston took the first game of the series from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 14 to 11 in a battle which lasted for two hours and fifty eight minutes, although it was settled in the regulation nine innings.

Burleigh Grimes and Bob Smith were the opposing hurlers through the greater part of the conflict but the Pittsburgh ace was relieved after five and one third frames by Dawson.

Boston went into the last half of the seventh with a lead of eight runs, but Pittsburgh came back with seven in the same inning.

LAKEFIELD WINS TENNIS MATCHES

Norwood Defeated in First of "Inter-City" Series.

(Examiner Correspondence):

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 21.—The first of the series of "inter city" tennis matches was played on Wednesday afternoon, when Dr. Sutton of Norwood and his party matched forces with Dr. Smith's stalwarts. The visitors met defeat, as in the four doubles and three singles played, the home club won 6 games out of 7. The visitors expressed themselves as having enjoyed the afternoon, despite the fact that the luck had all been with the cement town. The return visit will be made on Monday next (August 20th). This annual exchange of visits has become a feature of the season, and the fact that the custom has become established means that it is enjoyed by both towns.

The following is the score:

Doubles.

Dr. Smith and Reg. Lockhart defeated C. S. Patterson and H. Willis (Norwood), 6-4, 6-4.

N. S. Osborne and Hutchison defeated Fred Kempt and A. G. McDermid (Norwood), 6-3, 12-10.

J. C. Ridpath and A. M. FitsGerald defeated Dr. N. F. Sutton and Percy Kempt (Norwood), 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

G. J. Elmsley and N. J. C. Smith defeated C. S. Patterson and H. Wilkes, 6-4, 6-3.

Singles.

O. A. Langley defeated P. Kempt (Norwood), 6-2, 6-3.

N. S. Osborne defeated Dr. N. F. Sutton, 6-3, 6-3.

A. G. McDermid defeated Mr. Hutchison, 6-2, 6-1.

The latter was Norwood's only win.

Good Sports Programme Provided At Field Day

VIEWS ON SPORTS

For the remaining two games left in the city softball league, it has been decided to call on the games at 6 o'clock sharp.

The C.G.E.-Harrison game scheduled for Wednesday night will be played on Thursday night while the K. of C.-Harrison game postponed on account of rain from last night is dated for to-night. This concludes the schedule of the softball league except for the play-off series. DeLaval are in the lead and if the North-Enders win to-night's game they still have a chance to be in on the play-offs. Announcements regarding the series for a district softball championship will be announced later.

* * * *

While the Motor City were quite sure of bringing home the honors for the different hardball groups they suffered a setback for one championship on Saturday when their intermediate team lost by a one-run margin to Cobourg at Port Hope.

* * * *

With the Kiwanis eliminated from the juvenile race and the Royals going strong in the junior the eyes of the hardball fans now swing to the bantam entry, Riley and Hickey who fought their way to win the city championship through as tough a group of clubs as had been seen in the city league in many years. Given a bye in the O.B.A.A. play-offs the Clothiers have been practising steadily and will be in fit condition to meet whatever team they are called up to play.

BOOSTER FOR CANADA

Mark Kelley, writing in the Los Angeles Examiner, took the United States coaches to task the other day for making alibis for the defeat of their track athletes at Amsterdam.

In doing so, he had some nice things to say about Canada and its athletes, and as a result he received letters from several indignant correspondents, accusing him of being a Canadian, but he denies it, saying his motto is fair play for all. Here is an additional little reminder he wrote for his readers:

"Now, on recapitulation, one finds that Canada made great improvement, Germany injected a factor that was felt, Japan showed improvement, Ireland horned in, Italy took a bad slump, as did Switzerland.

"Please remember that in the 1928 totals I have not tumbled the women's results, because of some discrepancy in the tabulations which will be later ironed out. Canada, U.S.A. and Germany would have fatter totals if these were available. Also more firsts to add to their laurels.

"Unofficially Canada got 34 points to lead in the women's Olympic field, with Uncle Sam in second place with 28, Germany third with 23 and Poland breaking in with 10. Therefore, add these totals to those above under the 1928 banner—if you must be painstaking—and you've got the figures.

"All right, say you, where's the sermon?

"Right under our noses. Germany fifth, Canada sixth in the men's division. Canada first, Germany third in women's events. Neither a contender in 1924. Both darned serious in 1928.

"Now—Watch out for 1932, Uncle Samuel.

"Watch and wait—and keep up your guard else a loose punch may reach the chin."—(Hamilton Spectator).

MANY FROM DISTRICT ATTEND ANNUAL GATHERING

Six Teams Compete in Softball Tournament for Silver Cup.

HARDBALL GAME

(Examiner Correspondence.)

PONTYPOOL, August 21. — Ideal weather conditions favored the 9th annual field day held in the Memorial Park on Wednesday last. Practically every place in a 30 mile radius was represented by large or small numbers. A large number of old Pontypool boys were on hand to meet and have a good time with their old friends. Probably the largest contingent came from Orono, with Bethany, Oshawa, Toronto, Millbrook also turning out in goodly numbers. The sports program consisted of a softball team tournament for a silver cup with 6 teams competing, horseshoe pitching tournament for a silver cup and a baseball game between the old rivals Orono and Bethany.

The first game scheduled was in the softball tournament, between Tyrone and Millbrook, was a very close game, the final score being 8-7 in favor of Millbrook.

The line-up:

Tyrone: Goodman, Moore, I. Smith, Richards, Goodman Hooper Goodman, Smith and Woodyard.

Millbrook: Burnham, Fitzroy, Dr. Yonge, Russel Dawson, Ball, Skitch, Gray and Donnelly.

Umpires: Vance, plate; Byam, on bases.

The second game was between Kirby and Orono, the latter being victorious 8-2.

The line-up:

Kirby: Taylor, Brown, Bannon, Cavalry, Lawery Lunn Hogg Webb Bigelow.

Orono: Milson, Winters, Rolph, West, Mercer Cornish Pearson, Winters and Dean.

Umpires: Ken Hall, plate; Percy Lum, bases.

The third game was to be between Kendal and Pontypool, but only a couple of Kendals were on hand to play. This necessitated the locals having to play an all-star team picked from Bowmanville, Orono and Bethany. It turned out to be the best game of the day, for in the last half of the seventh the locals scored two runs to tie the score, but lost out in the eighth. Chapman's batting and work of all the infield featured for Pontypool.

The line-up:

All Stars: Cooper, Osborne, Scotty, Wood, Hay, Alexander, Little, Sisson, Thorndyke.

Pontypool: Chapman 2b; Graham lf Mitchell c; Logan ss; Wright 1b; Hamilton cf; Payne 3b; Andrews p; Gray rf.

Subs: Sayles and Stewart.

Umpires: Vance, bases; Johnston, plate.

By innings:

Pontypool . . . . . .13110021— 9
All Stars . . . . . .01210402—10

The hard ball game wasa heavy hitting affair, Orono getting the decision 9-6, Bethany refusing to finish the agme.

Bannon, Orono, had batting honors with two home runs to his credit, while West also contributed a homer. Johnston of Bethany did some nice work in the outfield and if the game had gone the full innings the result might have been different.

The line-up:

Orono: Bannon c; McBride lf; Philip 3b; Staples ss; Ryley 2b, Dawe 1b; Russell p; Johnston rf; Thorndyke cf; Reynolds c.

Umpires: Sisson, plate; Mercer, on bases.

Horseshoe Pitching.

The horseshoe pitching tournament was won by a Bowmanville team composed of Messrs. Ames and Witheridge, and was presented at the concert to the winners.

The last softball game was between All Stars and Orono and was played after the baseball game, Orono being victorious, Thorndyke being the star performer for the Stars at first. This will leave Orono and Millbrook to play off which takes place in Pontypool on Monday, August 27 when the trophy will be presented.

Good picnic lunches were served by the ladies on the grounds and the ice cream booth was well patronized.

The concert put on by Burt Lloyd & Company was largely attended and about 100 couples stayed for the dance bringing to a close a real day.

Proceeds amounted to nearly $500.

MENIE RETAIN SOFTBALL HONORS

Decision Reached at Meeting of Rawdon League Executive.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BURNBRAE, Aug. 21.—Menie softball team again captures the cup in the Rawdon League by virtue of a decision handed down by the league executive at Stirling on Thursday night. The meeting was a result of the disputed game called because of darkness on Tuesday evening at Glen Ross. Menie was leading 8 to 4 at the time play ceased and the score reverting to the previous inning still gave them the game. Glen Ross objected and the Menie players, after consideration resolved to take a sporting chance and invite the Glen to replay the game at Menie on Friday. However, the league officials stepped in and as a result Menie gets the cup without further play. This makes the second year that this team have won the league. Last year they won out in the finals after fighting from third place through a hard double series of six games. This year Menie led from the start and finished the season, play-offs and all, with the proud record of eleven wins, one tie and one loss. Their record with Glen Ross shows a standing of three wins, one tie and one loss, so that the other finalists were the only team to give them a struggle for the honours.

COBOURG TO PLAY RAYBESTOS NEXT

Oshawa League Title Decided in Sudden Death Game On Saturday.

Cobourg, leaders of the Oshawa District Intermediate Baseball League, eliminated Oshawa on Saturday afternoon in a sudden death game. Cobourg is now scheduled to meet the Raybestos, winners of the East Peterborough League. The Rays will travel to Cobourg on Wednesday afternoon and the return game will be played here next Saturday at the Exhibition Park. The Rays after their heavy schedule of games last week, are now rested up and a great struggle is anticipated between the two teams. Many fans are going to accompany the team to Cobourg on Wednesday and the management anticipates the filling of the large grandstand on Saturday afternoon. Coborough has a real smart team which has made a most enviable record this summer in its league. They were easy winners but had to play off with Oshawa, the second placers.

YANKS GAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Athletics 5½ Games Behind New Yorkers Owing to Yesterday's Defeat.

BROWNS WIN 9-2

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—The St. Louis Browns gave the Athletics' pennant hopes a sad blow yesterday when they scored nine runs in the last three innings, at Philadelphia, to win the first game of a series here by a 9 to 2 score. The defeat put the Athletics 5½ games behind the Yankees.

Jack Ogden held the Philadelphians to four hits, one of which was a triple by Jimmy Fox in the fourth inning that accounted for both of the Athletics' runs.

The Browns fell on Howard Ehmke and Joe Bush, who went into the box in the ninth, for 13 hits. Frank O'Rourke and Heinie Manush led the attack with four hits apiece, each getting three singles and a triple. O'Rourke was knocked unconscious in the last inning when he crashed into Manush while both were chasing Bing Miller's fly to short left.

Faber of the White Sox held Boston to six hits and pitched his team to a 6 to 4 victory over the Red Sox in the final game of the series at Boston. Walter Shires, 20 years old, first baseman from Waco, Tex., played a great game for Chicago. He made three singles and a triple, scored twice and drove in a run besides covering his position perfectly. Outside of the third inning when Boston made four runs, Faber was master of the situation throughout.

CANADIAN RUNNERS WIN WYOMING CUP

Capture Trophy at Joint Meeting of Scottish Clubs.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press Cable).—A quartette of Canadian Olympic runners won the Wyoming Cup relay race, principal event of a joint athletic meeting of the Hearts Football Club and the West of Scotland Harriers at Tynecastle Park yesterday.

Running on a heavy grass track, six laps to the mile, the Canadian team composed of W. A. Wilson of Montreal, Percy Williams of Vancouver, J. Fitzpatrick of Hamilton, and J. Ball of Winnipeg, ran the mile in 3 minutes 44 3-5 seconds to win the trophy, valued at $300.

Williams received a vociferous reception from the crowd when he was introduced as the winner of the 100 and 200 metres sprint events at the Olympic Games.

Cyril Ellis, British Amateur Athletic Union champion, won the half-mile race, B. Little of Winnipeg winning second place. Wilson was third.

Ball ran unplaced in the quarter-mile handicap race, and Ralph Adams of Hamilton, though qualifying in the 220-yard race, was unplaced by a narrow margin in the final.

The Canadian athletes were entirely unsuited to the conditions of the grass track and sharp bends.

The Canadian team will meet Scotland at Hampden Park, Glasgow, in an international meet on Wednesday evening.

CANADA NEEDS MUCH WATCHING

U. S. Sport Writer Comments On Success at Olympics.

Mark Kelly, in the Los Angeles Examiner, resented the alibis of the American team for the poor showing at the Olympic games. "We are an outstanding nation in our achievements. But we are not a nation of supermen. This country of Canada, for instance, produces some mighty fine athletes. I believe that one of the most brilliant chapters in the World War was also contributed by this sister nation to the north of the United States. One of these days we are going to engage more in lively friendly competition with this next-door neighbor and we'll be surprised at their prowess. Baseball, for instance, is becoming a national game with the Dominion. The youngster of Canada takes to it with even more relish than our sprouts, because it's a bit newer with him. Yet their proficiency in baseball is equal to ours, and in some cases among the amateurs superior. Toronto and Montreal turn out tremendous baseball crowds. In hockey, in curling, tennis, golf, track and field sports and several others not considered "hot" in the average Yankee reckoning Canada has it all over us. A Canadian youngster, unheard of here and unheralded, steps into a field of the world's greatest sprinters, and wins. "What?" we exclaim in awed surprise, "beat Wykoff? Something must be wrong. The only thing wrong about it is our own cockiness and self-assurance. That a handful of Canadian girls show heels to our own Yankee women is another jolt. That we failed to take Canada into our reckoning is merely our own oversight. I, for one, am having it gradually pounded into my national self-satisfaction and national 'high-hattiness' that this Canada nation needs a lot of watching and a lot of friendly competition in sport as in everything else. In short, this under-publicized neighbor of ours is quite a guy, and sooner or later we'll begin to believe it. He's making us say 'Uncle.'".

SCHOOL GIRLS TOURING CANADA

STEAMER REPORTS SEARCH IS FUTILE

Has Found No Trace of Amundsen Party—Letter Found On Island.

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press). — The Norwegian steamer Michael Sars, which has been searching the passages to the southwest of Esperance Island for traces of the lost explorer Raold Amundsen and his party reports it has found no sign of the missing men.

On Esperance Island the searchers found a letter dated August, 1928 written by the Dutch journalist Van Hogendorp, who said he had been disembarked on the island by mistake instead of at Spitzbergen. He was without arms or provisions, he wrote.

A thorough search of the island failed to reveal his whereabouts and it is presumed he was picked up by a passing ship.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC SUCCESS

Millbrook Church Young People Enjoy Afternoon at Wallace's Point.

PROGRAM OF RACES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, August 21.—The Sunday school at Saint Thomas' church enjoyed a delightful picnic outing at Wallace's Point, Otonabee River, on Thursday afternoon, more than sixty of the members and their friends being in attendance.

The extreme heat was the only drawback to the thorough enjoyment of the occasion, but a good sports' program was run off, and social intercourse, and a dip in the river for most of the younger folk, filled the time pleasantly through the afternoon and the early evening before the return trip was made.

The assistant clergyman of the parish, Rev. P. C. Howard, the superintendent of the school, E. H. Barnes, with the other teachers and officers, were in charge and did all in their power to make the event as successful as possible.

Preceding the races a softball game between the girls and the boys created plenty of interest, the latter winning by a score of 31-27. The prize list included the following winners:

Primary children's race—Maud Raper, Mary Raper, Joy Howson.

Boys' race, 7 and under—Bim Abbott, Eric Abbott.

Girls' race, 11 and under—Marjorie Vance.

Boys' race, 13 and under—Dalton Brown, Lyal Nattress.

Girls' race, 13 and under—Nancy Whyte, Winnie Lord.

Girls' race, open to all—Marguerite Lang, Eva Howson.

Boys' three-legged race—Gordon Armstrong and Gerald Raper, Vincent Sanders and Henry Gray.

Girls' peanut race—Nellie Miller, Marcella Lang.

Slow race (3 minutes to pass a given point) Eddie Nattress and Mary Vance, Elizabeth and Burton Russell.

The long tables were well shaded by the time the supper hour had arrived, and there was no doubt about appetites being well sharpened for the abundance of good things provided when all the hungry guests had been seated, and the business of waiting upon the picnickers was well under way. The teachers and officers of the Sunday school looked after the preparation of the meal, and served the guests until all had been fully satisfied.

The picnic was voted 'the best yet' in the long list of these enjoyable annual events which the school has to its credit.

BARN IS BURNED NEAR HASTINGS

MOST OF CROP LOST.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, August 21. — On Monday morning about eight o'clock the barn and most of the season's crop of John Sullivan, was completely demolished by fire.

Mr. Sullivan had his fall grain in, and was just threshing when fire broke out in the straw stack, which gained such headway little could be done to extinguish it. The separator was pulled from the barn just in time to save it from being burned. Mr. Sullivan had threshed some few hundred bushels on the Saturday evening previous and all his grain was burned. He had some choice seed wheat which he had been storing for the past two or three years in his barn also. Several hogs perished in the flames, as well as some poultry.

His loss is partially covered by insurance.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

BILLIE DOVE IN NOVEL PHOTOPLAY

An old Hungarian custom provides a novel and dramatic scene in 'The Stolen Bride' Billie Dove's latest starring picture for First National, which is now showing at the Regent Theatre.

The custom is that which decrees that the bride-to-be shall bring in the betrothal cake upon the announcement of her engagement, and this fact fits in perfectly with the movement of the picture's story.

The heroine's father announces at a banquet that his daughter is to become engaged to a man she does not love, an officer in the Hungarian army.

Her real lover—the officer's orderly—waiting in attendance, is horrified at the announcement and the heroine, realizing the shock to him, remembers the custom and seizes upon it as an excuse to go to him with reassurance that the wedding will never take place.

"The Stolen Bride," written and produced by Carey Wilson, was directed by Alexander Korda, himself an Hungarian, recently brought to Hollywood by First National Pictures.

Lloyd Hughes plays the masculine lead opposite Miss Dove, with Lilyan Tashman, Armand Kaliz, Cleve Moore and others in the supporting cast.

IRENE RICH PLAYS CABARET MOTHER

Irene Rich takes her audiences behind the scenes of New York night club life in "Dearie," her latest starring vehicle for Warner Bros. Directed by Archie Mayo.

On the surface, the night club is all gaiety. Its entertainers and patrons seem to have not a care in the world. Joy and festivity reign supreme. Yet this is but one aspect of night club life.

Miss Rich is seen as a sheltered wife who is suddenly forced to shift for herself. Determining that her plight shall not interfere with her son's college career, she seeks support in the only profession in which she has had any experience, musical comedy.

Failing there, she hunts desperately until at the lowest ebb, with even her dearest keepsakes in pawn, she becomes a night club entertainer, and rises to notoriety as "Dearie," hostess of the club. Beset with pitfalls, her way soon becomes a labyrinth in a wilderness of human greed, passion, intrigue and misunderstanding.

William Collier, Jr. Anders Randolph, Richard Tucker, Edna Murphy Arthur Rankin, Douglas Gerrard and David Mir compose the excellent supporting cast. "Dearie" comes to the Regent Theatre Wednesday for a run of two days.

An outstanding aviation record was thatmade in Australia last year, when airplanes in regular service covered more than 500,000 miles without the slightest injury to a pilot or passenger.

District Churches

Holy Trinity Church, Haultain.

The special preacher at the service held in Holy Trinity Church, Haultain, Sunday, August 19, was Rev. J. J. Robbins, of Markham, Ont. Mr. Robbins was formerly incumbent of the Stoney Lake Mission of which Holy Trinity Church, Haultain, is one of the churches.

In the sermon Mr. Robbins took as his text I Cor. xv:1 "Brethren, I declare unto you the Gospel which I preached unto you which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also you are saved if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you."

Through the text, the preacher illustrated three aspects of the Gospel, as follows:

1. Simplicity. The simplicity of the Gospel involves absolute trust and confidence in God. Religion presents many problems which apparently are unexplainable. It is our duty to remember that trust and confidence in God and in the Gospel must come before explanations of the various problems. "The wisdom of God is broader than man's mind." The great hope for the future lies in the fidelity of Christians to Christ and His precepts.

2. Naturalness. The Gospel must be natural above all things, because it is to be world wide, and appeal to all classes. As the Gospel is perfectly natural, so must we be in our attitude towards it. Christ was not unnatural, and He calls upon us to follow "in His steps."

3. Progressiveness. To be progressive the Gospel must be living. The intention was not that the message of Christ should be a dead thing and written merely on the pages of a book. It must be alive, and therefore inscribed in the hearts of men.

In conclusion the preacher remarked that if we turn the simplicity of the Gospel into complexity and its naturalness into unnaturalness, the effect will be reproduced on our lives, and the result will not be spiritual progression but spiritual stagnation, and the latter we must avoid at all costs.

BETHANY UNITED CHURCH.

The evening service in the United church on Sunday was well attended, being in charge of Rev. James McMullen, of Belleville, who is holidaying here at his old home during the month of August and who is in charge of the home church during the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. Poulter, in England.

Rev. Fred Baine, of Cresmore, preached the sermon. Mr. Baine read for his lesson part of the 8th chapter of Romans and took for his text the 28th verse, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose." His subject was "One Increasing Purpose" and his sermon was most inspiring and interesting and filled with fine thoughts to be carried by his hearers all through the week.

Pontypool Circuit.

A. H. Monk took charge of the services on the Pontypool circuit on Sunday due to the absence of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Boomhour on his vacation.

New York Markets Appeared Stronger

NEW YORK, Aug 21 (Canadian Press).—The stock market gave an impressive demonstration of strength to-day as pool operations were resumed on a broad scale in a wide assortment of rails and specialties.

Nearly two score issues were elevated to new high levels for the year or longer, on gains ranging from one to nine points. Trading showed a marked expansion in volume. The market appeared to have thrown off the restraint recently imposed by the tight money rates. Call money was renewed at seven per cent as against six yesterday, and held steady at that rate.

Operators for the advance concentrated on issues reporting larger current earnings, or in which favorable trade developments are pending, and increased attendance and activity at commission houses indicated that they were attracting a larger public following.

Prospects of heavy crop movements this fall stimulated buying of railroad shares. Texas and Pacific, St Paul Preferred and St. Louis Southwestern, all reached new high ground, the first named climbing seven points. Pere Marquette jumped five points and Southern Pacific two.

Montgomery Ward again was one of the most active features, climbing nearly nine points to a new top at 201¾. Sears Roebuck moved up nearly five to a new top of 139¾. Commercial Solvents, National Tex. American Smelting, Radio, United States Realty, National Biscuit and American Radiator sold four to nine points higher.

Prices Uncertain On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Price changes were uncertain on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning with stocks, however, gone really firm. Noranda was strong and an active leader, showing a net gain of 1.50 at 54.00 at the noon close. Barry Hollinger was active and steady at 38, while Dome improved fifteen at 7.80. McIntyre and Wright Hargreaves were steady at 20.65 and 3.48 respectively though Teck Hughes shaded off 25 cents and Kirkland Lake Gold itself lost four at 1.45. Of the Western issues Jackson Manion was the firmest, gaining two at 95, with Central Manitoba firm at 92. Mandy Mines lost six at 2.63. Sherritt suffered a reaction of twelve points at 6.30.

International Nickel Dominates Market

TORONTO, Aug. 21. —(Canadian Press).— International Nickel and Massey-Harris dominated the trading this morning on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Nickel opening at 100%, subsiding to 99½ and closing strong at noon at the opening figure, a total of 1325 shares changing hands. Massey-Harris closed at 44, dropping off a quarter point in brisk trading. There were 1745 shares of this stock traded in. Brazilian Traction continued strong, closing at 54⅝ for a gain of a quarter of a point. Cockshut Plow was actifely traded in, closing at 37 for a loss of ¼ point. Canada Bread closed at 151½, showing a gain of half a point. In the unlisted section Hiram Walkers was leader in point of sales, 330 shares of this stock being traded in, for a gain of a quarter at noon closed. British American Oil finished this morning strong at 37½.

Frost Suggestions Strengthen Prices

CHICAGO, Aug. 21. —(Canadian Press).—Suggestions of frost in Canada likely to cause crop damage gave a considerable firmness to the wheat values early today. On the other hand official reports indicated prospect of about four per cent. larger world supplies of wheat this season than last. Opening ¾c lower to ⅛c higher, wheat prices later rose all around. Corn and oats were easier, with corn starting at ⅛c off to ¾c gain and subsequently showing a general decline.

Openinf prices were: Wheat, September, 109½; December, 114⅝. Corn, September, 91⅝; December, 73¼. Oats, September, 35¾; December, 39.

MINING CORPORATION

TORONTO Aug. 21. — A report from our field man in Rouyn states this company are about to sink a further 730 feet on the Murray claims previously held by United Verde Extension, and immediately adjoining Noranda on the north. Its south boundary is only about 1500 feet from Noranda's No. 3 shaft, or about the same distance north of their famous "H" ore body.

The work previously done on the Murray claims by the United Verde consisted of sinking a vertical shaft to a depth of 280 feet, and four crosscuts were driven on the 250 foot level. One crosscut was driven in a westerly direction paralleling the boundary, and another was driven north under Osisko Lake. During the course of this underground work, which totalled some 5,700 feet, a small fissure vein carrying good copper values was encountered in a northwest crosscut. This was not of commercial size, and after a drift was run for 45 feet work was stopped.

The large diabase dyke running north and south alongside of which most of the Horne ore lies, extends through the Murray claims. An east and west fault has occurred approximately 2,000 feet north of Noranda's north line, and it was only during recent surface work done by the Mining Corporation that the northerly extension of the diabase was found.

The property has a splendidly equipped, electrically driven plant and a large head frame. Approximately $125,000 was spent by the United Verde Extension before selling their option to the Mining Corporation. It is conceded that Mining Corporation have a real chance to get at least a portion of Noranda's luck at depth, and the decision to immediately proceed to 1,000 feet would appear to be a sincere effort to prove up the depth theory.

Amulet

A large hoist has been ordered by this company in preparation for the time when this mine will get into production. It will take about three months before delivery will be made, and in the meantime the present hoist will be used for further exploration underground. When the work atp resent contemplated on the 150 foot level has been completed, consisting of drivers over to the "B" ore body and to a point immediately over "C" ore body, where a diamond drill station will be cut, the shaft will be deepended to the 250 foot level. While sinking is proceeding, diamond drilling of "C" ore body will be started again from the 150 foot horizon. Two diamond drills ar still working from the surface, one on the "D" orebody which lies about three-quarters of a mile north of the shaft and one on the No. 3 ore area northwest from the shaft. The "D" orebody is one of the earlies of Amulet's showings, and is chalcopyrite. The first hole on this a week or so ago has already indicated about eght feet of massive chalcopyrite at a depth of around 90 feet.

Don Rouyn

Shaft sinking on this property, which lies west of Noranda in the Rouyn distrct, was recommenced last week. During previous operations the shaft was sunk to a depth of 60 feet. The present plans are to continue this to the 70 foot level where a station will be cut and crosscutting will commence to determne the grade of ore in a mineralized zone which parallels the vein of high grade copper on which the shaft was sunk. The large mineralised body carrying low values in copper is composed of disseminated chalcoyprite running up to 1 per cent. It is hoped the values in copper here may be increased, together with the gold values, sufficiently to prove the ore up to commercial grade.

Ticker Talk

By H. O.
(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets)

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.—By far the outstanding feature on Friday was International Nickel. The News which came out on the stock was of a very bullish character and exceeded most expectations, as it was not thought likely that both an increased dividend and rights would be offered at the time.

The news was received with mixed feelings, and immediately the Street was officially advised of what had transpired, considerable selling of a profit taking nature developed which carried the issue down to below the 100-mark. However, a rallying move developed, and at the close the security was near the high for the session. The stock touched a new record high of 103¾ in New York.

The company will receive close to $13,000,000 in cash from the new offering and this should be ample to take care of its Frood developments for at least another year. The management was apparently satisfied with conditions at the property and with the outlook for the future, otherwise they would not have decided to raise dividend disbursements until such time as the Frood Mine had fully proven tself.

On stock which has soted extremely well during the recent reaction in the market is Canadian Bronze; this stock is to-day quoted around 86 bid as compared with its high of 94 early this year. Although no definite figures are available regarding current earnings, it is understood that they are running at a very large satisfactory figure and the company is further stated to have a large volume of business on hand. At the present time, the outlook for the company appears to be distinctly encouraging, profits for the 9 months ending December 31st, 1927 amounted to $5.44 per share of common or the quivalent of 7.25. for a full year.

It is understood, on good authority that for the first half of this year, earning were slightly better than the dividend requirements on the common for the entire year.

Shareholders of Dryden will be interested to learn that the reason the company has not as yet been taken out of the hands of the receiver is because there are taxation advantages as long as they are in receivership and they are taking advantage of this situation. Dryden is understood to be experiencing a very good demand for it products and is finding it necessary to increase its plant capacity to take care of the surplus demand.

General Steel Wares on Montreal Curb Market has been grounding bottom the past few days. The selling is understood to be coming from tined holders who had purchased the security well in the thirties. The writer understands that the company in the first six months of this year, earned $2.35 a share on the stock and consequently it is apparent that the issue is selling out of line.

The coming conference on the newsprint industry between Premiers Taschereau and Ferguson is expected to produce some information likely to be advantageous to newsprint stocks.

CALVERT FAMILY HOLD RE-UNION

Eighty-fourth Anniversary of John Calvert Celebrated at Annual Gathering.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, Aug. 21.— The fifth annual gathering of the Calvert clan, the third in succession to be held at Crowe Lake, Marmora, was held on Wednesday, August 15, being held earlier than usual this year, in order to celebrate the eighty-fourth anniversary of the birth of the patriarch of the family, John Calvert.

John Calvert is the only living representative of his generation. He was born on the farm where he still resides with his eldest daughter and her family, lot 14, concession 6, of Huntingdon. His parents were William Calvert, who came from Ireland many years before, and his wife, Janet Ray.

The re-union took the form of a motor party to Crowe Lake, Marmora. There were present with Mr. John Calvert, five daughters with their husbands and families, two sons, William of Bayside and John of Flint, Michigan, being absent. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCauley of the old homestead, and two daughters, Mona and Margaret; Mr. and Mrs. A. McGuire and small daughter, Anna, of Tweed; Mr. and Mrs. S. Wickens and two sons, Charles and Bertram of Ivanhoe; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McMullen and three daughters of Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. S. McMullen and two daughters and son, Madeline, Bernice and Carmen of St. Catharines; Mrs. I. J. Brough, Mrs. Benj. Brough and two sons, Arthur and Frank, and their guests, Mrs. T. L. Nickle and daughter Jean, of Madoc, and Mr. F. Craig, Tweed.

After an early start, the party arrived at Crowe Lake in time for a morning dip in which many of the younger members of the party participated, after which a sumptuous dinner was spread, not on tables, which were noticably lacking, but in true old picnic style.

The birthday cake was a prominent feature, also a beautiful bouquet of flowers, which had been thoughtfully provided by Mrs. McCauley.

Mr. John Calvert occupied the seat of honor and was presented with many birthday gifts and showers of good wishes for long life and many happy returns of the day.

After dinenr games were indulged in, and then the majority of the party again donned bathing suits, and water games and sports were the order of the day, even those not favoring swimming being unable to resist the lure of the water, and discarding conventional footwear, waded in the water, wishing they had brought bathing suits.

Early tea was served and soon the different sections of the party were reluctantly obliged to end a most perfect picnic day.

MINOR DAMAGE DONE BY STORM

Utilities Wires Crossed and Telephone Circuits Harmed.

NO DELAYS CAUSED.

Peterborough was not hard hit in spite of the severity of the storm that came upon the city so suddenly at one o'clock, accompanied with huge scurrying black clouds and heavy winds.

The fire department reported everything O.K., no fires from the lightning or no trouble with the alarm system throughout the city.

The Utilities Commission did not have the same luck. While there was nothing serious the lines were considerably blown about and some trouble was experienced in the south end with crossed wires, but nothing serious.

The Bell Telephone answered to The Examiner's query with "A lot of it and we're not through testing yet." However, all the trouble is minor and there was no tie-up experienced in the "Hello" system.

Wedding Bells

MANLEY—SANDERSON.

A pretty wedding was solemnized quietly at the Manse of St. James' United Church on Saturday afternoon at half past two o'clock, when Lillian Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Sanderson, of Millbrook, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Charles William Manley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Manley, of Keene. Rev. James H. Dudgeon officiated.

The bride wore a charming frock of pink Celanese crepe with hat and hose to match and shoes of black patent leather. She wore the gift of the bridegroom, a string of pearls and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and gypsophila.

Attendants were Miss Mae Easson and Mr. Gordon Manley.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bridesmaid was a bar pin set with pearls and to the best man a pair of cuff links.

After a short honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Manley will reside in Otonabee.

WOMAN HURT IN COLLISION

Mrs. Mary Whibbs, of Norwood, Taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

CARS DAMAGED.

In a collision between two motor cars, which took place on the Warsaw road about midnight on Saturday, Mrs. Mary Whibbs, of Norwood, was seriously injured, and was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering from several fractured ribs, shock, contusions and possible internal injuries.

The collision took place between a touring car driven by William Whibbs, containing his mother, two sisters and three brothers, and a sedan owned by Harold Dunsford and driven by Fred Bell, with Mrs. Fred Bell and John King as passengers. Both cars were apparently hugging the centre of the road when they met. Both said that they applied the brakes at once. Bell claimed that he was driving slowly and Whibbs said that the light from the other car blinded him. The lighter car was not upset or damaged to any extent, while the touring car turned over crosswise on the road but did not take the deep ditch near which the accident occurred, otherwise the injuries to the occupants would have been more severe.

Mrs. Whibby was pinned beneath the rear door and sustained serious injuries, while the other occupuants of the car escaped with a severe shaking up. The car itself is in a generally dilapidated condition, with one wheel, door and windshield smashed, as well as the front fender, the axle and the top. No one in Bell's car was injured, but the fender and running board were damaged.

Mrs. Whibbs was removed to Dr. J. M. O'Brien's office and was taken later to St. Joseph's Hospital.

PREMIER FAVORS FEWER FORCES

Thinks Consolidation Would be Good Thing for the Province.

ADDRESSES POLICE CHIEFS

TORONTO, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—An intimation that the consolidation of the various police forces operating in Ontario would be a good thing for the province was given by Premier Howard Ferguson, speaking to the convention of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada here to-day. After saying that he preferred the term "law observance" to "law enforcement," the former being procurable by tact and good judgment on the part of policemen, the Premier said: "We have a multiplicity of police organizations and I am not sure it is a good thing."

FOURTEEN SAILORS SWEPT OVERBOARD

Steamer Reaches Panama With Tale of Battle Against Storm.

PANAMA, Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press.)—The story of a fierce battle with sea and wind, in which fourteen lives were lost is recounted in the log of the Mysetic Line steamship W. S. McKenney, which docked here last night long overdue from Seattle.

The log shows that on August 8, the ship while fighting a strong gale lost its steering control. A heavy sea struck the vessel and the whole deckload of lumber went overboard. All hands were trying to cover the hatches, the covers of which had been washed off, when a wave threw fourteen sailors into the sea. None was rescued.

REPORTS OF S.O.S. BEING INVESTIGATED

Planes in Hudson Bay Area May Aid in the Search.

(Special to The Examiner).

OTTAWA, Ont., August 21. — Reports of S. O. S. messages received from the Greater Rockford airplane which left Cochrane, Ont., on Saturday noon for Mount Evens, Greenland, on the second leg of the proposed flight from Rockford, Illa; to Stockholm, Sweden, are being investigated by the radio experts of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, but none of the government stations have any news to offer.

Intimations that Bert Hassell and Parker D. Cramer came down somewhere around Cape Chidley early on Sunday brings the Hudson Bay expedition of the R.C.A.F., into the picture. The nearest station to Cape Chidley is Port Burwell, where there is a Fokker plane and a number of Canadian air men, skilled in northern flying. If the Rockford plane came down within 75 miles of Wakeham Bay there is a good chance of rescue, unless the plane crashed east of the shore ice in the bay.

WEST ABSORBING MINERS AS THEY REACH WINNIPEG

Sons of England, Scotland and Wales Are Made Welcome.

GREATLY ENCOURAGED.

Jobs Assigned To Nearly Everyone Upon Their Arrival.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22.—Sons of England, Scotland, Wales, with the Scottish leading the parade by virtue of bagpipes, kilts and everything, made their first visit to Western Canada yesterday and found it good to look upon. Within a short time of their arrival in Winnipeg, the majority of them were speeding westward, bound for the harvest fields of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, for they were the vanguard of some 400 harvesters due to reach Winnipeg during the next two days on special trains which the Canadian National Railways are operating from the boat sides at Quebec and Halifax.

The party which reached Winnipeg last night were from the mining districts of England and Scotland, with a few Welshmen included. There were approximately six hundred in the party which walked down the gangplank of the ss. Regina at Quebec on Saturday morning, and they were started westward within a short time on a special train which was waiting at the boat side.

Discuss Wages.

Most of them had been "on the dole"—some for weeks and many more for months. To them the chief interest in Western Canada was that there was work in sight; the next important thing that they were to be paid wages for their work. Wages were a subject of conjecture all the way across Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba, and last night most of them were satisfied since they learned that the promise of "three to five pounds" which was made them in the Old Country would be lived up to.

Discussions of plans for the future with the great majority of miner harvesters, as they are called, elicited one outstanding thing. Not a man on the Canadian National special indicated that he desired to return to the Old Country if he could find work to keep him in Canada. They were not all miners by any means. In the party were some skilled tradesmen, some whose work had been along the docksides in Liverpool or Glasgow or Blyth, on the Tyne, but all of them professed at least to have a chief interest in remaining in Canada, if they could find a job after the harvest season ended.

Passed Rigid Test.

The party which reached Winnipeg in Monday night's special, were a good-looking body of men, most of them well used to hard work. The examination they had passed before their acceptance for the party ensured that, for they had passed what was practically the army "A1" test. The majority were below middle age, but they were men who had found little chance of permanent work in the Old Country and were looking toward Canada as a place where they could find something worth while. Some of them have left wives and families behind, and are planning to send for them after they have found jobs for themselves, while others have relatives already in this country.

Jobs Are Ready.

Arriving at Winnipeg, the harvesters found provincial employment agents waiting for them in the immigration quarters in the basement of the Union Station. The majority, within an hour of leaving the train, were ticketed out to points in Saskatchewan and Alberta, where jobs are waiting for them, and where they will be at work within the next thirty-six hours. A smaller number drew the Manitoba assignments and will leave Winnipeg during the morning hours. By 10 o'clock they will all have left for work on the farms, and in their footsteps will follow the other thousands who are following on the special trains from half a dozen other steamships, which arrived at Quebec and Halifax since Saturday morning. On leaving Quebec on the special train which carried them westward in in Winnipeg station, there was but one answer to the question of whether or not they were going back, and the answer was "not if we can get jobs in Canada."

Levine To Try Again, This Time In Junkers

LONDON, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—Charles A. Levine, of New York, left to-day for Berlin, where he will purchase a Junkers plane to be used in an attempted east-west crossing of the Atlantic. The plane will be flown here to undergo tests. Miss Mabel Boll, who accompanied Levine to Berlin, said she probably would accompany Levine on the Atlantic flight.

KIWANIANS GIVE BOAT TO CAMP

Local Club Adds To Gifts To Bowmanville Training School.

BOYS UNDER CANVAS.

Peterborough Kiwanians paid a visit yesterday to Camp Scofield at Bowmanville, and presented the boys at the camp with a boat. This camp is the summer camp of the boys' training school at Bowmanville, and is ideally located on the beautiful shore of Lake Ontario. Here the boys from the school spend the summer out of doors. The Peterborough Kiwanians always have taken a great interest in this camp, and further expressed their good will in yesterday's presentation.

There are twelve military tents erected, and a large dining pavilian, which accommodates the seventy-five boys who are spending the summer at the camp.

Dr. Raymond and his wife welcomed the visiting Kiwanians, and accepted the gift as it was presented by District Trustee Harry Huffman. In replying to the presentation, Dr. Raymond not only thanked the Peterborough delegation for their useful gift, but also expressed his greatest delight in the intense interest of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club had taken in the camp, which he considers as valuable, if not more so than the boat which was presented to them.

The boys entertained the visitors by exhibitions of dancing, musical numbers and school yells, all under the supervision of Dr. Cunningham of the staff.

The staff of the camp then played the Peterborough men at handball, and showed their superiority to the disadvantage of the visitors.

The boat that was presented was purchased from the Peterborough Canoe Company here.

The visiting Kiwanians were: Herb. Gilgour, Herb. McCanan, Harry Huffman, W. Merrill, Frank Dawson, J. John, Ivan Lillico, Vern. Morphet, and Charlie Saunders.

BANK ROBBER IS ARRESTED

Maurice Ayette Pleads Not Guilty to Robbery Charge When Arrested.

REMANDED ON BAIL.

HULL, Que., Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Maurice Ayette, 20, Plantagenet, Ontario, pleaded not guilty in police court to-day to the charge of attempted bank robbery. He was remanded until Tuesday on a bail of $500. When Ayette was arrested police were watching at Gatineau Mills Royal Bank after receiving a report that a plot was afoot to rob the building.

WILL HELP IN CANADIAN HARVEST

Here is a picture of a party of Welsh miners just before they entrained at Quebec for Winnipeg, where they will be distributed for harvest work on the farms of Western Canada. The smiles on the faces of the newcomers to this Dominion would indicate that they are imbued with the spirit of adventure and quite enjoying their experience. These Welsh miners constitute part of the advance guard of some 8,500 who are being brought to Canada to help with the harvesting of Canada's crop, which, it is estimated, will be approximately 700,000,000 bushels.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

A BRIEF REVIEW OF THE HISTORY OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION IN CANADA

This is the first of a series of articles on the subject of Vocational Education in an endeavour to give the public the information that it requires as to the functioning of the school before it opens. A. M. Moone, the writer, is to be Shop Director of the vocational department of the Collegiate.

In 1910 at the request of organized labour the Dominion legislature after consulting the provinces appointed a Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education.

This Commission was requested to inquire into the needs and present equipment of the Dominion as respects industrial training and technical education, and into the systems and methods of technical instruction obtaining in other countries, particularly in Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States.

A moment's reflection and you recall that under the B. N. A. Act education and the administration thereof became a responsibility of the provincial governments; however communications interchanged between the Honourable W. L. Mackenze King (then Minister of Labour) and the premiers of the various provinces resulted in the formation of the above mentioned commission. It was considered that such a commission would render valuable service to the Dominion as a whole.

Work of Commission

The inquiries of the commission reached a survey of the needs of workers in (1) Manufacturing; (2) Agriculture; (3) Commerce and Transportation, and (4) Household Arts.

Much information was obtained from this survey both in America and on the continent. The equipment possessed by Canada as regards industrial training was investigated before proceeding elsewhere in order that information so gathered be of greater value.

Findings in Canada

The commission found that Canada was much behind the times. The training of young workers respecting manipulation and technique and to an understanding of the principles and sciences basic to all trades and industries was not provided for in any courses. There was no organization of means for preparing young workers to become the best qualified artisans, farmers and housekeepers in the world. Canada's growing wealth warranted such organization but to the contrary educational work was becoming bookish in the extreme and was developing into school systems that had few points of contact with or relation to industrial, agricultural or housekeeping life. In other words education then provided only the needs of about 5 per cent. of the people.

In consequence of the survey in Canada the commission concluded that some form of industrial training and technical education should be provided in order that: (1) Boys and girls might develop along their particular aptitudes and gain a clearer conception as to their working and living. (2) Organized educational supervision of some form be extended during adolescence. (3) "All might become qualified to the fullest extent of their capacities to fill their places as individuals, as contributing earners, as citizens and as members of the race. (4) The nation as a whole be more intelligent, capable and prosperous.

(For further information consult report of commission on industrial and technical education.)

In the next article read: "Definite steps to provide industrial training and technical education in Canada."

The statement says the election of Herbert Hoover is vital to the success of the project.

SMITH ENTERS RACE TO-NIGHT

Formal Notification and Acceptance of Nomination Will Take Place.

AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—Halted four years ago from rising to greater political heights, Alfred E. Smith found his way clear to-day to assume the national leadership of the forces which will battle to win the Presidency for him in November.

On the steps of the state capitol he will be notified this evening of his nomination as Democratic standard-bearer and in his acceptance speech inform the nation where he stands on the issues of the day.

The address, in which the Governor had promised to discuss all subjects, including his attitude toward prohibition, in "clear, unmistakable language," will formally launch the Democratic drive for a change in the administration at Washington.

WITNESS FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

Leigh Di Bernarde Shot in His Automobile Under a Viaduct.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—Sought as a witness for special election frauds grand jury, Leigh Di Bernade was found shot to death in his automobile under a viaduct on the west side to-day. Police began investigation of Di Bernarde's slaying on the theory that he was killed because he knew too much about the killing of Octavius Grundady, negro candidate, opposing Morris Eller, for the 20th ward committeemen, who was assassinated on primary election day.

TWO ACCUSED OF PRESENTING FALSE CHARGE

Young Woman Recently Acquitted In Court Is the Complainant.

SLEPT IN GARAGE.

Says Officer Made Advances To Her Which She Spurned—Arrest Followed.

(By Henry Somerville. Special Cable to The Examine. Copyright).

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The London police are again in the limelight with the trial to-day of two policemen, John Clayton and Charles Stevens, on a charge of conspiring to make a false charge against Miss Helene Adele after she had spurned advances made by Clayton. The incident took place in a taxi cab in a garage where the woman went to sleep because it was too late to get to her lodgings. During the course of a seven hour cross examination the young woman flatly denied that she had concocted her story against the police and also repudiated charges that she had said that if the police ever arrested her she would maintain they had interfered with her. She was asked about a married man called Tom Abbott who had associated with her and who was to appear as a witness supporting her story.

Miss Adele said that Hayes, another friend, became unfriendly to her because he was jealous of Abbott and for other reasons. She declared that Hayes had said after this case started that he would make things hot for her.

The case first came into prominent on July 6 when a charge brought by the two constables against the young woman "of using insulting words and behavior" was dismissed in Clerkenwell Police Court.

Miss Adele, who is 21, admitted that she had spent the night in a taxi in a garage. She saw both the officers, and Clayton made a suggestion to her which she resented, she declared.

They said they would make a false charge against her, she said. She took refuge in the garage office and they brought her out and charged her, she stated.

Evidence was introduced that the two policemen, who have long records of merit, told the garageman that the girl had been speaking to another policeman and that it would be serious for them if she told the sergeant, and to clear themselves they would have to "pinch" her.

Peter Pan's Statue Tarred And Feathered

LONDON, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—The children of London are deeply resentful over the indignity inflicted upon one of their dearest friends, the statue of Peter Pan in Kensington Gardens, which during the night was tarred and feathered by unidentified vandals. When park keepers endeavored to remove Peter's ugly covering this morning, children applauded.

LIQUOR FIRMS INTERLOCKED

Illegal Sales Between Companies Charged By Prosecution Counsel.

CASES CONTINUE.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—Delving deep into the sales activities of the Erie Transit Company, Gordon H. Shaver, K.C., special government council, insisted to-day that he had proved the company guilty of illegal sale of liquor to other exporters, both here and in other parts of Ontario.

It was apparently the crux of his case against the company on a charge of keeping liquor illegally, and the first of forty-six such cases to be tried.

During to-day's session in Windsor Police Court, before Magistrate D. M. Brodie, Mr. Shaver continued his grilling of Walter Hardie, secretary of the Erie Company. At noon Mr. Hardie completed two full days in the witness box. During that time, information has been drawn from him from which Mr. Shaver tried to prove that the Erie Transit Company, Loew, Leon and Burns, and the Seagram and Carling agencies were interlocking concerns.

Syrup Boils Over Fire Brigade Called

Two gallons of syrup that boiled over on a gas heater about 2.15 to-day in the basement of the store of E. P. Mason, 429 George Street, gave the firemen a run this afternoon, in response to a telephone call.

The whole brigade turned out, as this is in the business section of the city. From all appearances it looked a lot more serious than it really was. Dense clouds of smoke filled the store and came out on to the street through the grating in the sidewalk, while in the cellar it was very dense, flashlights being called into use to pierce the mist. Investigation revealed it to be the syrup boiling over which gave cause to the thick smoke.

Mr. Mason stated that there would be no loss suffered from the smoke.

BRITAIN MUST FINANCE MEN SAYS PREMIER

Emigration is Essentially a British Problem, He Believes.

WILL CO-OPERATE.

Ferguson Looks Forward With Great Optimism To Success of Proposed Scheme.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—While Ontario is willing to co-operate in every way possible in bringing the immigration scheme suggested by Lord Lovat to fruition, Premier Howard Ferguson expressed the opinion to-day that the matter was essentially a British rather than an Ontario problem.

Discussing the conference held with Lord Lovat in his office yesterday, the premier stated that he looked forward with great optimism to the final result although he admitted that the paramount question of finance had not been definitely settled.

"It is Britain that wants to send their men overseas and they will have to do a great deal in financing the undertaking" stated the premier. "You cannot bring men to this country and dump them on our shores."

WOULD FOLLOW LONDON SYSTEM

Attorney General Thinks Toronto Needs Metropolitan Police Force.

WOULD COVER OUTSKIRTS.

TORONTO, August 22 (Canadian Press).—That the Metropolitan police force system of London, England, might with advantage be followed out in the case of Toronto and its outlying districts was the suggestion made in an address by the Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario, to the convention of the Chief Constables' Association here to-day. Mr. Price also observed that the police services were gradually undergoing evolutionary process and he said that the Ontario Government was practically ready to go to the counties and say, "Let's get together for better organization of the police."

Mr. Price said that the outskirts of Toronto were a lair of criminals and that a metropolitan force would materially assist to eliminate this.

Radio Great Help.

Police departments all over the world are using the radio in hunting criminals, and this latest adjunct to police efficiency has proven of inestimable value, said Chief A. G. Shute of Edmonton, Alberta, who today addressed the convention. Chief Shute said he would not speak too highly of the results obtained in Edmonton in tracing lost children stolen automobiles and missing persons.

CATHEDRAL CITY LEADS IN DRUNKS.

LONDON, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press Cable).—According to the official statistics of convictions for drunkenness in England published to-day, the most sober city is the historic seaport, Plymouth, and the city with the most proportionate convictions is the pretty but rather sleepy cathedral town of Norwich in Norfolk.

GIRL IS DEAD BUT BOY WILL GET BETTER

Woodstock Parents Block Wedding and Couple Attempt Suicide.

TAKE CHLOROFORM.

Youth Wakes To Find Dead Body of Girl Clasped in His Arms.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Examiner.)—Demands for a complete and rigorous investigation of the whole circumstances attending the tragic death of his twenty-year-old daughter Gertrude, allegedly in a suicide pact with her fiance, Robert Childs of Woodstock, marked an interview by George Yelland at his home here to-day.

Mr. Yelland states that never till last night had he heard that Ald. Fred Childs, of Woodstock, father of the boy in the case, had raised any objection to the marriage. Such objections are now claimed in Woodstock to have been the reason given by young Childs, for he and his intended bride having driven into the country Monday night for the grim purpose of embracing death together.

Childs is an all round athlete and last year had a tryout with the Windsor pro hockey team.

Childs, who is in care of his father, suffering from the effects of the chloroform which failed to kill him as it did the girl, has volunteered to appear at the inquest to-morrow evening and give a full account of the manner in which the girl came to her death.

Childs staggered into his home yesterday morningand collapsed. His father went to the car outside and found the girl's dead body crumpled up in the back seat.

Childs recovered sufficiently later in the day to tell his story to the police. The dose of chloroform taken by both was strong enough to kill the girl, he said, but only put him to sleep.

Finds Dead Girl in His Arms.

In the morning Childs recovered consciousness on a deserted road near Bower Hill to find his affianced bride dead in his arms and the chloroform with which he had intended to end his own life all exhausted. Dazed, he decided to return home.

Child's recollections of the night and morning are still hazy. He told the police that his parents had raised objections to his marriage. It was after this that the young couple had decided to end it all.

The youth secured the chloroform at local drug stores and on Monday night the couple motored to Bower Hill, not far from Woodstock. There they opened their bottles to start the long sleep that was to last forever.

In a moment or two both were under the effects of the self-administered anaesthetic. The girl, however, apparently received a much more powerful dose.

POLICE LEARN BANDIT'S NAME

John Popovich is Described By Girl in Office He Visited Before Crime.

TRIAL POSTPONED.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Aug. 22 (Special to The Examiner).—Police believe they have identified the accomplice of John Burowski. He is known as John Popowich and had been in Parry Sound previous to the mail robbery and murder of Thomas Jackson. The police have questioned Miss Edna Gentles of the office of Weeks & Hett as to the description of the suspected man.

Popowich entered the office of Mr. Hett the latter part of last week and Miss Gentles talked to him.

The police believe they can corral this man and large posses are searching the surrounding country for a man who will answer to the description of Popowich.

The preliminary hearing of the charge against Burowski of the death of Jackson was adjourned until Thursday morning at 10.30 o'clock. Two witnesses, the mail clerks on the C.P.R. train which was robbed last Saturday morning, were unable to be present to-day.

Beg Your Pardon.

The name Harold E. White should have appeared in the story of the Peterborough letter in the mail robbery, instead of Albert E. White as was published. Harold E. White is the assistant postmaster.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office, Toronto, Aug. 21.—Pressure is high over the Upper Lakes and Central States and low in the Western Provinces, while the depression which was over Georgian Bay has passed eastward to Quebec. Showers and thunder storms have occurred in Ontario and parts of Quebec. Elsewhere the weather has been fine and warmer in the West.

Probabilities.

Lower Lakes and Geoergian Bay—Moderate westerly winds; fair and warm.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh southerly winds; mostly fair and warmer; followed by local thunder storms.

Manitoba—Mostly fair and warm with local thunder storms.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly fair and comparatively cool.

SAILS TO-DAY.

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, left the Capital last evening for Quebec to sail on the Empress of Australia to-day for Europe. With Premier King, Mr. Dunning will attend the meeting of the League of Nations opening at Geneva next month. The Prime Minister is already on his way across the Atlantic aboard the Ile de France, and will reach Paris in time to sign the multilateral treaty outlawing war on Aug. 27.

'FROG' ORCHESTRA PLAYS AT APSLEY

Pittsburgh Visitors Provide the Music For Dance at Parish Hall.

APSLEY, Aug. 22 (Examiner Correspondence).—The parish hall was packed on Friday evening to welcome the Jack's Lake Frog Orchestra from Pittsburgh, who last summer played for more than one dance gratuitously. On this occasion the event was in aid of the renovating of the hall and parsonage, and the sum of $18.75 was realized, which was augmented by two donations of $10 each generously given by R. H. Marks, the genial manager of the party, and H. M. Emmal of Pittsburgh. It was a most enjoyable dance, both round and squares being indulged in, many tourists attending, to whom the squares as danced here were a decided novelty. The party numbering sixteen arrived from Pittsburgh on Thursday, and the following legend was noticed printed on the cover of the spare tires: "Dummy and His Famous Jack's Lake Frog Orchestra of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Apsley, Ont."

Hay $40 a Ton Winter Of 1868

(Examiner Correspondence)

Discussing this year's hay crop with two old residents of Sharbot Lake, both octogenarians, The Examiner learnt that hay never reached so high a price in their experience as 60 years ago when forty dollars a ton was paid for it on February 4, 1868, they declared. Snow ushered in the Lenten season of that year to such an extent that feed became extremely scarce. Branch of maple and bass were cut to act as substitute with the result that every barnyard in that vicinity took on the complexion of a large brush pile.

TOKIO SEES TROUBLE EASING

Japanese Consul Reports China Ready To Agree On Essentials.

WANG DEPRECATES NOTES.

TOKIO, August 22. — Relations between Tokio and Nanking seem about to acquire a better footing judging from accounts of Nanking's attitude which reached Tokio yesterday from two sources.

Consul General Yada at Shanghai, who arrived to confer with Premier Tanaka on questions outstanding with Nanking, fresh from seeing Nationalist leaders, told Japanese newspaper men that the recent friction had been needlessly magnified.

Mr. Yada excused Nanking's abrogation of the Chinese-Japanese commercial treaty and pointed out that the step was not directed against Japan especially, but followed similar action in regard to European nations. Mr. Yada added that he did not believe Nanking could formally withdraw the abrogation and then he showed that withdrawal was unnecessary because Dr. C. T. Wang, the Nationalist Foreign Minister, and Chiang Kai-shek, Nationalist generalissimo, had promised they would not enforce the provisional regulations against which Japan's note protested so strongly, but would continue to operate under the existing treaty until a new one was negotiated. If this correctly represents Nanking's attitude the main cause of the recent disagreement is removed.

Mr. Yada also declared that the present Nationalist regime is stable, and likely to last. In regard to Manchuria, he said, foreigners made more of the recent "advice" to Chang Hsueh-tiang than the Nationalists.

This moderate talk is confirmed by an interview the Jiji Shimpo's correspondent at Nanking had with Dr. Wang. Dr. Wang assured him that the provisional regulations would not be enforced and complained that Tokio had misunderstood Nanking through lack of sympathy and had not made any allowance for Nanking's difficulties. Dr. Wang said the diplomatic exchanges were only a matter of saving face and that Nanking wanted a practical solution of the questions pending with Japan.

The correspondent was left with the impression that Nanking is too busy with other matters to worry about Manchuria at present.

POPULAR WHEAT NAMED FOR FINDER

Robert Dawson Found Plant Which Stood Up Well After Storm.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, August 22.—Now that reports of Field Grain Competitions in fall wheat are coming in from various sections, it may be of interest to learn something of the history of the two varieties, Dawson's Golden Chaff and O.A.C. 104, which are principally used, and which are the most popular winter wheats in Old Ontario.

The first named had its origin in this province, a farmer living near Paris, Robert Dawson by name, while walking over his fields in the summer of 1881, after a particularly heavy storm which had flattened out the grain badly, noticing a plant the stalks of which still stood fairly erect, and were apparently stiffer than any other on the field. Gathering the grains carefully, he stored them until fall when he found he had sufficient to sow a small plot not far from his house. From the harvest reaped the following season came the popular variety called "Dawson's Golden Chaff."

Outstanding characteristics of this variety are its high productiveness, and the stiffness of the straw; being rather soft, however, it does not make the best quality bread flour. To improve the latter condition experiments were carried on for some time by the Field Husbandry Branch at the Experimental Farm, Guelph, and a cross between Bulgarian wheat, which has but a medium yield but which makes excellent flour, was effected.

Selection was made from the plants of the hybrid grain which resulted, and the one labelled "O.A.C. 104" was chosen as the best. In production its averages, on the whole, higher than the parent grain, Dawson's Golden Chaff, and its baking qualities are practically equal to those of Bulgarian wheat.

Name of Box Holder On Mail Would Help Rural Courier Sort It

If those who are either guests or employees at any house, would have their correspondence addressed in care of the head of the house where they are staying instead of just the rural route number they might receive their letters more promptly, as well as save the postmaster or a courier, or perhaps some box-holder a great deal of trouble. More than once mail has gone wandering around for an owner. Recently a letter was placed in a box. Evidently that particular box was chosen because the owners were known to have friends who visited there by that name. The letter was returned to the post office and again deposited in the same box. On enquiry the postmaster had seen the letter and sent it out over the route named. It seemed up to the one in whose box the letter was placed to try to find an owner. It took a good half hour to do so. All the trouble and delay could have been saved by the employer's name being put on the address. In a distributing station among farmers where removals are infrequent, the box-holder's name is almost more important than the number of the route.

BRITISH OFFICIALS SCOUT TALK OF POOLING NAVIES

Authorities Say Accord With France is Misunderstood in Paris.

BLAME 'FANTASTIC SURMISE'

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Serious misunderstanding concerning the nature of the tentative agreement between Britain and France on the principles which it may be desirable to follow in further naval limitation apparently exists both in Washington and Paris, British officials said yesterday on receipt of news from the United States that President Coolidge was greatly perturbed by his first study of the Anglo-French agreement.

This misunderstanding is held to be largely due to half truths coupled with "fantastic surmises" which have been propagated in the French press and relayed from Paris to the United States. The French public apparently believes that the agreement practically amounts to a naval alliance whereby in certain extraordinary circumstances the two nations would pool their naval strength

There has even been talk of conferences between the French and British navy chiefs whereby France will keep guard over the Mediterranean and Britain over the North Sea and Atlantic thus making the two navies practically one.

French Effusion Embarrassing

These surmises have gone to such lengths and received such apparent credence on both sides of the water that British officialdom intimated to-day that the grateful embraces of France and her demonstrations of warm affection at the

SHED FOR BICYCLES.

Central School Pupils To Have Shelter For Their Wheels.

A shed that will house 60 bicycles has just been completed at Central School. For a number of years it has been felt necessary that there should be some kind of housing for the pupils' wheels so this year the Board of Education has had a shed built large enough to house the bicycles of the boys who attend the school.

CRAZED SON CHAINED ALONE BY MOTHER FOR ELEVEN YEARS

FAIRPLAY, Aug. 22.—Torn between love for her son and fear that he would die if removed to an insance asylum, Mrs. Anna Deeler, 69, chained Harry, 45, to the floor of a dark room in their log cabin, where he remained for eleven years.

Officers who visited the cabin after neigbbors had complained "all wasn't right," found the half-crazed man, with heavy shackles about his nude body, in the room.

One chain was attached to his ankle and another wound around his waist. They were so arranged that Deeler could move about within a radius of four or five feet.

The mother had pushed food into the darkened room daily for eleven years as she kept her secret from the outside world, officers learned.

Deeler gazed wildly at Sheriff Fred L. Richards and his deputies and chattered as they entered the room. He was wrapped in a blanket and taken to the county jail, where a sanity hearing will be held.

His mother declined to say anything to officials about her son's imprisonment other than she feared harm would befall him if he became separated from her.

Deeler was ordered released from the state insane asylum years ago. He had been removed to the asylum while serving a term in the state penitentiary for cattle theft.

LATE GRAIN CROPS GOOD

Warsaw Farmers Find Barley and Oats in Splendid Condition.

THRESHING BEGINS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, August 22.—Thanks to the splendid harvest weather, farmers have been able to handle the grain that was ready to cut. Many fields of barley and oats have been cut, and much of it is in splendid condition. Some report they have never handled better grain.

The pastures are still green. There are splendid fields of corn, generally. Even early potatoes are large and so far no rot has been reported. There was a fear of it when there was so much wet weather. Some think the arsenate of lead prevented the rot and others that frequently scuffling so letting air in, did the deed.

SOME THRESHING DONE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, August 22.—Some threshing has been done in this immediate neighborhood, principally by those who had privately owned outfits, but comparatively few farmers are as yet ready for the regular threshers to be constantly on the road.

E. Armstrong, west of the village, threshed his alsike recently the yield being but two and one-half bushels to the acre; others report a like low yield, and several lost their crop altogether on account of the rainy weather. W. Fred Fallis threshed a mixed grain, wheat and barley, last week realizing forty bushels to the acre; another farmer on the same line threshed barley, the yield per acre being but little more than twenty bushels. H. A. Earle drew in his barley, without stooking, and will find it useful only for feed.

Gain Freedom from Perspiration Odour from Bath to Bath

WHAT a simple, delightful way to avoid the unnecessary social error of perspiration odour . . . to refresh one's skin from top to toe regularly, in a bath with the cleansing, blandly antiseptic lather of Lifebuoy Soap.

Perspiration is natural . . . even healthful. Physicians say the average human body exudes from one to two pints of moisture daily in the form of perspiration.

But this moisture need not be offensive. Lifebuoy Soap in the bath opens the pores and cleanses and purifies them, keeps them sweet and breathing. Lifebuoy Soap gives you cleanliness that no other soap can give. . . . antiseptic cleanliness.

Lever Brothers Limited

You Perspire in both Winter and Summer

Perspiration is not caused by warm weather, exercise, or heavy clothing alone.

Joy, fear, or any emotion increases the flow of moisture through the pores of the skin. To keep well, drink lots of water, perspire freely—and prevent perspiration odour by using Lifebuoy Soap.

SILVER WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. William Collard, of Campbellford, Were Married in England.

BRIDESMAID PRESENT.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 22.—Saturday, August eleventh was the silver anniversary of the wedding of William Collard to Eliza Baker. Mr. and Mrs. Collard were married in the Anglican church at Street in Somerset, England, by the Rev. Mr. Reid who was rector of that church then. Nineteen years ago they came to Canada and directly to Campbellford, where Mr. Collard has been an employee of the Weston Shoe Company. During the war he served in Canada, England and France, proceeding overseas with the 59th Battalion Canadian Infantry.

There were twenty-two relatives and friends to sit at the tea table at five-thirty. This number includes Mr. and Mrs. Collard, their daughter, Beatrice and their son Charles. Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. John Lunn and son James, of Hamilton, Ont., Miss Beatrice Collard and Miss Molly Hanlin of Preston, and Ensign Cooper, of the Salvation Army Training Garrison at Toronto.

The house was beautifully decorated in pink and white and Mr. and Mrs. Collard were the recipients of many costly and beatuiful gifts. Among them were a silver tea service from Mr. Collard's family, silver flower basket, silver casseole, several silver and pyrex pie plates and a cheese and cracker dish of crystal and silver. The evening was spent with much enjoyment of games. Perhaps the most entertaining number was a mock marriage.

Perhaps the most distinguished among the guests was Miss Beatrice Collard of Preston. Miss Collard was bridesmiad on the occasion twenty-five years ago. In November, 1926, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Collard, Preston, parents of William Collard, celebrated their golden anniversary. Mr. Collard and his son were present on the occasion, but Mr. Collard was unable to leave her daughter Beatrice, who was ill at the time.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH STAPLES

SPRINGVILLE, Aug. 22 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Friday, Aug. 17, the funeral of the late Joseph Staples of Woodville took place from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Myers of Argyle, where for the fast few years he has made his home. Rev. W. E. Doe of Woodville conducted the funeral service. Interment took place in the Ninth Line of Cavan cemetery.

Mr. Staples was a former resident on the Provincial Highway. He was in this ninetieth year and until the past few months enjoyed good health. He is the last member of a large family of twenty-two. His wife predeceased him several years ago.

He leaves to mourn his loss three sons—John of Oshawa, Frank of Whitby, and Clark of Peterborough; also two daughters—Mrs. Hiram Rogers of Whitby and Mrs. Thomas Myers of Argyle.

His pall-bearers were six grandsons—Messrs. Roy Staples, Clifford Staples, Esmond Rogers, Clare Myers, Wallace Myers, and Clarkson Myers.

MILITIA MEN AWAY TO CAMP

Campbellford Company and Northumberland Regiment Band Leave.

MOSTLY YOUNG MEN.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23. — The local company of the Northumberland Regiment and the Band entrained for Barriefield Camp yesterday morning. The detachment left under the command of Major J. M. Bygott. Although numbering less than fifty men, the parade had a smart and soldier-like appearance as it moved down the street. The band was led by William Pearson, regimental bandmaster, and although all the bandsmen were unable to leave their several occupations to accompany the unit to training quarters, practically every member was on parade to play the troops to the station.

Noticeable was the absence of ex-service men from the ranks. The majority of the men were young men in their late teens or early twenties. Their appearance was very smart. The ex-service men were well represented among the spectators who gathered to give the boys a send-off. For them there was no thrill in just going to camp, but more than one expressed the wish that they were once more in uniform and back in the ranks of their war-time units. While the troops and civilians awaited the arrival of the train, memories of the days of the Great War were revived. Campbellford has long enjoyed the reputation of a militia centre, and during the war had an unusually high percentage of overseas men among her citizens.

FRONT STREET PAVING CENTRE

Surface, Base and Sewer Gangs All Engaged There.

WON'T PAVE CROSSING.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 22.—Everything was in readiness to resume the paving operations yesterday. The broken shaft at the heating plant had been replaced and the surfacing proceeded. There remained less than half of the intersection of Bridge, Tice, George and Grand Road to be surfaced on the west side of the river.

Front Street is the scene of all the paving operations at the present time. The top layer is being laid on the business section of the street, beginning at the north end and working south to the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets. Immediately north of this, the concrete base is being laid from a point midway between the intersection of Front and Rear South to meet the end of the base at the intersection of Market Street. Excavation is completed to about half-way between the intersections of Rear and Ranney Streets with Front, and the town men are busy installing cross sections for water main and sewer connections. It is a case of concentrated efforts for one part of the work to keep ahead of the other.

Yesterday the Council viewed the situation at the intersection in front of the Baptist Church. After considering the matter thoroughly, it was decided not to extend the pavement as had been requested. Additional cost was one of the main features which caused the work to be passed over for the present. The petition to pave River Street from Mill to Front has not yet been sufficiently signed.

"Use About 50% Low Grade Coal"

Pease MOGUL BOILER

Heat is obtained at exceptionally low cost from the Pease Mogul Boiler, so great is its efficiency. The experience of Mr. W. G. Orvis, Bloomfield, Ont., is eloquent testimony to this feature. Mr. Orvis writes:

"The Pease Mogul Boiler is giving excellent satisfaction in every particular. We are having no difficulty in heating the part of building in use with only about one-third of firepot capacity and are using about 50 per cent. low grade coal."

A striking feature of the Mogul is its perfect metal to metal water joints. These joints are permanently water-tight and are infinitely superior to rubber gasketed or packed joints. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1928

SEASONAL SHADOWS.

Intimations of the approaching season are beginning to intrude upon the summer scene. Nights are closing in earlier,and the day becomes dilatory in opening its eyes and shaking off the chill dew.

The sheaves are in the barn, the golden corn is in the pot, and apples are reddening upon the branches.

The days are drowsy and silent; the nights are vocal and langurous. Birds are already departing, and their song is hushed. The ecstasy or Spring has modulated to the ripened wisdom of fulfilment, tinged perhaps with disillusion.

Beneath the new moon gardens and meadow are murmurous with the cadenced rythym of cicadas, katydids, crickets, weaving a mysterious tapestry of sound, a magic carpet upon which the tired spirit sleeplly reclines, and is suddenly carried off across the dark, still waters of Lethe.

August is a month of fruition. It seems static, but in reality the glass of the hours is slowly upturning, and the sand is beginning to trickle in the opposite direction as the year begins its long declension.

WHEN MR. MARTIN COMES.

The people of this city and district will leave one of three impression with the Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture in the Ontario Government, when he visits the Peterborough Exhibition on Thursday September 13th.

If the attendance be small,—but it won't be, so we can dismiss that dismal prospect.

If the attendance be fairly satisfactory, ten thousand people, for instance, the Minister of Agriculture will not be affected by any abiding and stirring sense of the importance of the Peterborough Exhibition and of the extensive agricultural district of which annually it is the chief attraction.

If the attendance be large, twenty-five thousand or more, and nothing less than that will satisfy our community ambitions, then the Hon. Mr. Martin will remember our Exhibition as deserving of official consideration when government monies are being allotted to fairs that are definitely and substantially promoting the industry and other interests of the farmers of this province.

By thus extending a hearty greeting to the Minister of Agriculture we can at the same time show him that the people of this city and district desire to co-operate to the fullest extent with the Exhibition Board in their representations for the higher rating which they claim and which we believe, they deserve.

This is a demonstration in which we can all take part. We cannot importunate our guest in behalf of the Exhibition Board. And we don't need to. The most cogent petition we can present to the Minister will be an attendance of twenty-five or thirty thousand country and townspeople. Hon. Mr. Martin would form his own impression of such a crowd, and it would certainly be favorable.

Men who have to work that afternoon can at least encourage their wives and families to go to the Exhibition.

If you are sincere about your part in this community effort you should buy your strip or two of tickets this week. Four tickets for one dollar, accepted at both the gate and grandstand.

Make it Thursday, September 13th!

ELECTING A PRESIDENT.

Many readers maynot understand the method of indirect voting by which the United States presidential elections are determined. Several enquiries indicate an interest in our neighbour's quadrennial disturbance that suggests these brief comments.

The United States Constitution is said to have been conceived in a spirit of high idealism, and this reverence for the new institutions which the young democracy was establishing especially surrounded the arrangements for the election of the president and vice-president.

Instead of voting directly for presidential nominees, the people were to vote for Electors, and to this general body of Electors was given the name of Electoral College. It is composed of 531 members. Hence Mr. Smith or Mr. Hoover will not be elected by a popular majority, at least not necessarily, but by a majority in the Electoral College. The successful candidate requires 266 votes in the Electrocal College to secure election.

The Electors are chosen by the various States, and consist of as many members as the State's representation in the combined houses of Congress.

Thus each State has two Senators and its members in the House of Representatives, the lower House, are chosen every two years on the basis of population, the original ratio having been one member for every 30,000. This has been raised from time to time by the Electoral Commission. Three is the smallest possible vote in the Electoral College. That is New Mexico's representation. But New York has 45, Illinois 29, Tennessee 12, and so on.

The "Fathers of the Republic" evidently intended that the Electors would constitute a council of the ablest men in the nation, and that they would exercise an independent choice for the presidency and vice-presidency. But one commentator has remarked that this Utopian theory has never been a fact, and after the third election not even a pretense. The several parties nominate their candidates. Then comes the formal notification and acceptance. However, the original principle has been retained in the indirect electoral vote. For example, if the Republicans on November 4th carry New York State, they thereby obtain that State's vote or representation in the Electoral College. If Tennessee gives a majority for Smith, the Democrats receive that vote in the Electoral College, and so until the fifty eight States have reported their returns. On the second Monday in January immediately following the elections, which are held on the first Monday in November, the electors from each State forward or register their returns. This is a mere formality. Usually the county knows on the night of the election which party has received the people's favor.

It is recalled that Woodrow Wilson received a minority of the popular vote of the United States in 1912, but he received a large majority of the electoral vote, and therefore, was declared elected. In 1916 he had a plurality of the popular vote, and although this reached 400,000,he might easily have been defeated for the Presidency had the electoral vote in one closely contested State failed him.

It is not difficult to see that the election of a President by direct vote would practically throw the office into the hands of the more populous states, and into the hands of the larger cities. New York States, for example, might give a plurality for its favorite that the contrary pluralities of half a dozen smaller states could not overcome.

A HIGHWAY MENACE.

The more one uses the provincial highways and country roads generally, the more he must be impressed with the fact that it is imperative to make provision for the safety of pedestrians. At present, countless numbers of people are walking along the highways by day and by night. Very frequently someone is hit and either killed or seriously injured. For every accident of this kind that is heard of, however, there are hundreds of narrow escapes.

Walking on motor highways is dangerous at all times. It is particularly dangerous at night. It is dangerous for motorists as well as for pedestrians, because, in turning out sharply to avoid a walker, the driver of a car may easily run his machine into another. Indeed, it is not difficult to conceive of a situation in which half a dozen persons might be killed through a motorist trying to avoid one highway pedestrian.

The way to largely overcome the present dangerous situation is to place a decently wide footpath alongside every highway and at the same time to compel pedestrians to use it. Most walkers, of course, would use the path from choice and a natural desire to preserve life and limb. For the few others the law would be effective and motorists would be enthusiastic in seeing that it was enforced. Certainly something must be done and done immediately to cope with the present dangerous situation.—Border Cities Star.

CLEANING UP THE BORDER.

Sir Henry Drayton's expressed determination to clear up liquor conditions on the Windsor-Detroit border, where, some people appear to think that the Ontario Liquor Control Act makes lawlessness permissible, deserves general commendation. Unfortunately, when the people and Government of Ontario decided to do away with the O. T. A. and to try something else to promote true temperance, a certain class among us mistook this action to mean that Ontario must be "wetter," and that thereafter the authorities would wink at any form of alcoholic moisture regardless of method or source. Nor was the situation made less difficult by the fact that some of our American cousins conceived the erroneous impression that Canada had become a sort of promised land of wetness, and that all they had to do to quench their thirsts, or to engage in the profitable task of quenching the thirsts of others, was to come over here, buy all the liquors they had cash to pay for, take them across the border, and sell them at a profit. In this, it must be added, they have been aided and abetted by a certain class of Canadians.

This practice, becoming notorious, led some wag to pen the following lines, now listed in Detroit, it is said, as a Canadian Folk Song:

"Four and Twenty Yankees,
Feeling very dry,
Went across to Canada
And bought a case of rye.
When the case was opened
They began to sing:
To heck with the President,
God save the King."

Now it was never the intention of the people of Ontario to make this Province a bar-room for thirsty Americans. Neither was it their wish that Ontario should become a whiskey commissariat for sufferers under Volsteadism. What they voted for, when they put the Ontario Liquor Control Act on the statute books, was for a law which, as far as was humanly possible, would abolish the bootlegger, wipe out the prototype of the New York "speak-easy," and place the consumption of liquor upon a reputable basis. To that end they gave to the Ontario Liquor Control Board almost unlimited powers. It was to be exempt from interference from either the Legislature or the courts, as we recall it, in carrying out the broadly defined activities provided in the bill, including the issuance of permits, the determination of the location, hours and sales of liquor stores, the control of breweries and distilleries and the amount of liquor each permit holder might buy.

If, as seems to be the case, there are people on the border who are violating either the letter or the spirit of these provisions, then the Ontario Liquor Control Board is right in getting after them, and in getting after them relentlessly. Such offenders must be taught, and taught in a way that will make them remember, that Ontario is not "wet"—not wet at all events in the sense that some people seem to interpret wetness. This Province, unless we are very much mistaken, is just as much for true temperance, just as much against the saloon and the beer parlor and the bootlegger, as it ever was.

Further: if among us there are those who supported the Ontario Control Act on the sole ground that they thought it would make this Province "wetter," or that it was a first step toward the beer-parlor, or even toward the return of the saloon, then, by taking liberties with the new law, they are acting (from their own viewpoint) with uncommon folly. Because the Ontario Control Act is on trial. It is being watched, and sharply watched, by thousands of citizens. They regard it as an experiment; and if they find that it permits any or all of the conditions it was supposed to abolish, then, at the first opportunity, they will do away with it. Just as when, exasperated by the folly and arrogance of the men who made the saloon a scandal, they rose up in their might and destroyed the saloon, so they will rise up and abolish the Control Act. They will go back to prohibition with a vengeance.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that Sir Henry Drayton is remorseless in his new campaign. Once and for all time the bootlegger should be taught that the Ontario Control Act is his enemy, not his ally.—Ottawa Journal.

GOD'S MINUTE.

I called upon the Lord in distress; the Lord answered me.—Ps. 118:5.

Our Father, Who are in Heaven, we thank Thee that Thou art our Father, that we are not orphans, but sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty! Hallowed be Thy Name. May it be the work of our lives to render holiness to the Name of the Lord in all the earth. Thy Kingdom Come in the plentitude of its power and fullness of its blessing and be spread abroad upon the face of the earth until the kingdoms of the world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. We know that it is done gladly, joyfully and cheerfully by Thy creatures in Heaven, and may it be so done by Thy children on earth. Give us from day to day our daily bread, and teach us that, having food and raiment, therewith to be content, for godliness with contentment is a great gain.

Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from the Evil One with all his power and perils and Thine shall be the Kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever, through Jesus Christ, our Saviour. Amen. Rev. Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana.

A Thought

KINDNESS

The Greek word for kind is chrestos. The Latinized form of the derivative from this word for "the kind people" is chrestiani, which might equally well describe the followers of the Chrestos—"the Kind One." Tertulian, the old African father who wrote in Latin, tells us that in his day among the heathen Christus became Chrestos—the christiani, Chrestiani, so characteristic a feature of the Christians was this virtue of kindness.—W. E. Chadwick.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—Trade was steady with all prices about the same as Monday's live stock exchange yesterday morning. The bulk of the cattle market was composed of medium to poor quality cattle, including 400 of those left unsold from Monday. There was a demand for the better-priced cattle, and consequently the market was rather dull in poorer animals.

Baby beeves were strong at 14 to 14½c, and cows steady with no change. Bulls, with the exception of bolognas, found a good market, and trade was steady. The calf market kept up the strong tone it started Monday.

Sheep were steady at Monday's prices, and the lamb trade was slow at 14c. There weer no sales in hogs, Monday's close being 13¼c f.o.b. and dealers were asking a quarter more.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 22 (Canadian Press)—There was some demand from exporters for grain here yesterday and sales of quite a few loads of No. 3 Northern were made at 5 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and No. 1 feed oats sold at 9½ cents per bushel, c.i.f. Montreal, and a round lot of oats was worked for shipment to the lower provinces. The trade in cars was quiet and prices were unchanged.

The trade in spring wheat grades of flour was moderate, but the undertone to the market was easy owing to the further weakness in cash wheat prices at Winnipeg. The demand for winter wheat flour was quiet but prices were unchanged.

The undertone to the market for millfeed remained steady under a fair demand. The market for standard grades of rolled oats continued quiet and prices were steady.

There was no improvement in the demand for eggs, which to a large extent was attributed to the continued warm weather, but the undertone was firm. Receipts were 2,024 cases.

The condition of the market for imported beans remained very firm owing to the limited supplies coming forward. There was a moderate demand for small lots, and sales of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.10 per bushel, ex store.

The undertone to the butter market continued firm and prices were again a fraction higher, with a moderate amount of business passing. The receipts were 24 packages.

The local and foreign demand for cheese was fair and a moderate trade was done at steady prices. Receipts were 9,115 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—Wheat values melted away quickly yesterday in the face of predictions of warmer weather in Canada that nullified danger there to crop damage by frost. Meanwhile, too, official reports indicated a prospect of about four per cent larger world supplies of wheat this season than last.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy 1¾ to 1¾ net lower, with corn ⅞c to ⅞c down; oats ranging from ⅝c decline to ⅛ shade advance, and provisions unchanged to 10c off.

Until nearly the end of the day, nervousness over Canadian reports of frost having appeared at several points was manifest in the wheat pit here, and prices were swinging upward the greater part of the time. No evidence of any actual damage from frost developed, however, and toward the last the market suddenly gave way under selling pressure from the northeast and as a result of late weakness of quotations at Winnipeg. In addition to likelihood of warmer weather favorable for the Canadian harvest now in progress, a bearish feature was that export demand yesterday for wheat from North America had reached only small proportions, although the business done included some hard winter wheat to go out via the Gulf of Mexico.

Apparent assurance of a big crop in Canada was supplemented by advices yesterday telling of a larger wheat yield in Europe this season than previously expected, with the quality of this year's crop in Europe very good, much better than a year ago. Moreover, an authoritative forecast of 209,000,000 bushels production this season in Australia was reiterated and was coupled with a statement that this volume would exceed any heretofore harvested by Australia, furnishing 140,000,000 bushels for export.

Under such circumstances, the wheat market here turned turtle in the last hour, and finished at sharp declines, with the open interest here 115,000,000 bushels, the largest in a long time.

September delivery of corn was decidedly weak yesterday and prices of new crop future deliveries were also on the down grade. Buying power was limited, and the break in wheat depressing. Rains over the corn belt were also bearish factors. Nearby deliveries of oats touched a new low price record for the season, chiefly as a result of hedging sales.

Provisions were upheld by steadiness of the hog market.

Aviation Patrols in Far North Report Lack of Success.

MAY BE IN INTERIOR.

OTTAWA, August 22 (Canadian Press).—Radio experts of the Department of Marine and Fisheries established communication last night with the Hudson Strait expedition, and although a keen w atch has been kept by aviators of the Wakeham Bay, Nottingham Island and Port Burwell stations, no trace has been obtained of the Rockford fliers.

Canada's patrol ship Boethic, located off the east coast of Baffin Island, has been requested to join in the search.

Even if they landed safely in Northern Quebec, the Rockford fliers would probably take two weeks to reach a point where they could communicate with civilization, it was stated by an official of the Mounted Police to-day. It is thought that if their navigation instruments were undamaged, the aviators would probably follow the natural waterways north towards Port Burwell.

Five Hundred Men Working To Save California City's Watershed.

SAN BERMARINE, Calif. Aug. 22. —(Canadian Press). —Fighting fire with fire, 500 men centred on the brink of Devil Canyon to-day, had a fifty-fifty chance to save this city's vitally important watershed from the flames which for four days have swept the San Bermarine Mountains.

Resorting to back firing almost on the edge of the Canyon, men had set a counter blaze which was rapidly burning toward the advancing forest fire but a mile from the watershed district to-day. On all the other nearby fronts flames were under control.

HUMANE SOCIETIES MAY AMALGAMATE

Ontario Manager Suggests the Union of Peterborough and Port Hope Branches.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Humane Society was held in the Chamber of Commerce, Thursday evening, August 16. The President, Dr. Thomas Johnston, presided. The minutes of the previous meeting were read an dadopted. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $269.61. A vote of thanks was passed to the city for their grant of $150. A letter from the city was read asking the Society to remove the dog house on Townsend street, which had been used for stray dogs. Mayor Denne was present and explained that this action was taken on account of complaints of residents in that neighborhood. It was not decided when or where this building would be moved.

A letter was read from J. M. Wilson, Manager, Ontario S.P.C.A., regarding the amalgamation of Peterborough and Port Hope societies. It was felt that that this needed careful consideration and was left over to another meeting when the secretary of the Port Hope Society would be asked to attend to discuss it.

In view of the coming Cat Show and Dog Matinee, which are to be held in the Armouries during the Made-in-Canada Exposition, it was decided to give the prize to the best local short-haired cat and to the best local uncropped dog.

The inspector's report for the month read as follows:

Examined horse in Smith Township with sore shoulders. Sores being treated.

Destroyed stray cat and kittens.

Examined sick dog. Advised treatmen.

Went to Cavan Station, for head office, and examined car load of mares and colts shipped in from Saskatchewan. Found several hurt, three dead.

Investigated complaint about horse being driven with a bad leg. Horse being treated.

Destroyed three stray cats.

Went to Port Hope to examine another car load of horses.

Went to Campbellford regarding horses working on road. Ordered horses with sore shoulders off work.

Called for stray cat.

Called to see sick dog.

Took wounded collie to veterinary surgeon for treatment.

Destroyed cat.

Investigated complaint regarding dog tied in hot sun.

Called for sick dog. Giving treatment.

Got home for stray kitten.

Got stray dog out on highway.

Attended market. Gave two warnings regarding defective harness.

Got home for stray cat and kittens.

Destroyed stray cat.

Destroyed old dog.

IN POLICE COURT

Thomas Calvert was arraigned on a charge of vagrancy, but was remanded until Monday without entering his plea. Inspector Read asked for the remand as he believes Calvert is the man who is wanted by the London police for forgery

Daniel O'Keefe pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and acknowledged having previously been convicted on the same charge on July 17th. The bench gave him the option of one month in jail or $200 and costs. He took the term on the hill.

A local man pleaded guilty to stealing hens, the property of Mrs. Young, Smith township, and was remanded until Tuesday for sentence. County Constable Pearson made the arrest and in asking for the remand said there had been considerable chicken stealing in the township of of Smith lately and he wished to make further inquiry before the prisoner was sentenced.

The arguing of the George B. Clapper case was postponed until Tuesday, as Crown Attorney Hatton is sick.

WILL LAY CHARGE AGAINST OFFICER

Policeman To Be Accused Either of Manslaughter or Murder.

TORONTO, August 22 (Canadian Press).—Officials of the Provincial Attorney General's Department stated yesterday that a formal charge of either murder or manslaughter would be laid against Plainclothesman William Dinnen, of the Toronto police force, as a result of the death of Albert Samson, struck by a bullet from the policeman's revolver as he attempted to escape from him. The Department pointed out that the laying of the charge was the only way to dispose of the case.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. FRANK McCOY

"The Fast Way to Health"

BREATHING IN ASTHMA

Most people understand that diaphragmatic breathing is superior to chest breathing, but do not know how to go about it in making the change. When one is asked to take a deep breath, he invariably raises the chest and attempts to expand the ribs which apparently fills the upper chest with air. This may be called chest breathing, and is wholly unnatural and really harmful in certain ways.

If you will watch an animal such as the horse when he breathes, you will see that the breathing is done in the upper part of the abdomen, and that there is practically no movement of the chest or of the lower abdomen. Every successful athlete either unconsciously breathes this way or has developed the diaphragmatic breathing through practice.

If you will stand sidewise before a mirror, you can watch your faulty breathing, and practice how to correct it. Remove all of your clothing and stand so you can watch the entire torso, from the pelvis to the chin. When you inhale you will probably notice that the chest gets larger in the upper part, the upper abdomen smaller, and lower down the belly will protrude. This gives you a sort of hour-glass appearance, which is all wrong.

Now try, when you inhale, to make your abdomen larger just below the ribs. Imagine you are drawing the air into the upper abdomen, swelling it out and keeping the lower part from protruding. The position of the ribs should change but slightly, and no movement should be noticed in the upper chest. After you have inhaled, exhale slowly, contracting the upper abdomen, and holding the entire abdomen rigid, now allowing the lower part to protrude.

Keep on practicing until you can do all of your breathing with the upper part of the abdomen, just below the sternum and ribs. In this way you will learn to develop the diaphragmatic muscle which you must do in order to be healthy and to completely overcome asthma.

If you do not seem to get the idea at first, go outdoors and take a short run up and down the yard, then rest and place your hands on various portions of your chest and abdomen and you will notice that you are naturally breathing hardest in the diaphragmatic section. For practice, just keep up this same breathing, and if you again forget how, take another run and again make a careful examination to see where the most contraction and expansion occur.

After the asthamtic has properly trained the diaphragm, he will find that the practice of singing will be a pleasing way to keep the diaphragmatic muscle properly exercised. Any good singing teacher understands the necessity for breath control, and will give the pupil exercises through the practice of singing. A strong, resonant speaking voice can be thus developed.

The tone of the asthmatic or tubercular voice is always very poor, due to the tight diaphragm which always exists. The cure of either one of these disorders cannot be accomplished with the development of a normal diaphragm.

I have prepared a special chart of exercises that I will be glad to send to anyone who will send a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Alex M. writes: "Specialists tell me I have no hydrochloric acid in my stomach. Have taken bottle after bottle of it until it has affected my teeth. What is your idea of a cure?"

Answer: The cure of too much or too little stomach acidity depends entirely upon living on a well-balanced diet. The more hydrochloric acid you take internally, the worse your condition will become eventually.

Question: Housewife asks: "Are carrots, string beans and beets a good combination with meat and stewed fruit? If so, is it all right for me to have this combination regularly every day?"

Answer: The combination you ask about is an excellent oen, and can be used with benefit at least once a day."

Question: E. M. asks: "Are cold shower baths daily each morning good for a person?"

Answer: Cold baths are very invigorating and help to increase the blood's circulation. Some people who are anemic or nervous cannot take a real cold bath with benefit until they have practically recovered from their trouble.

Question: Mother asks: "What do you suppose is the cause of a boy of thirteen always picking at his nose? I have given him the worm remedy, but still he picks at each side."

Answer: Your boy may be troubled with adenoids or chronic catarrh. In some cases, the nose picking is simply a habit which you can correct by having him wear mittens or gloves as much of the time as possible.

INITIATIVE

The world bestows its big prizes both in money and honors, for but one thing. And that is Initiative. What is Iniative? I'll tell you; it is doing the right thing without being told. But next to doing the thing without being told is to do it when you are told once. That is to say, carry the Message to Garcia; those who can carry a message get high honors, but their pay is not always in proportion. Next, there are those who never do a thing until they are told twice; such get no honors and small pay. Next there are those who do the right thing only when necessity kicks them from behind, and these get indifference instead of honors, and a pittance for pay. This kind spends most of its time polishing a bench with a hard-luck story. Then, still lower down in the scale than this, we have the fellow who will not do the right thing even when some one goes along to show him how and stays to see that he does it; he is always out of a job, and receives the contempt he de serves, unless he happens to have a rich Pa, in which case Destiny patiently awaits around the corner with a stuffed club. To which class do you belong?

BRITISH OFFICIALS

tightening of the entente were distinctly embarrassing.

Strictly speaking, there is not any final and definite Anglo-French naval agreement. There is merely "a stage that has been reached after much difficulty in the proceedings of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission of the League of Nations." It is the "stage," British spokesmen point out, which the United States hoped Britain and France could reach between themselves, since until these nations reconciled their conflicting viewpoints the work of the Preparatory Commission could not go on.

Now that the French and British agree, officials here see no reason for American perturbation. The agreement is only for the purposes of the coming discussion at the Geneva disarmament session, and if the United States representatives there object to it in toto as useless and ineffective in the task of further limiting navies it is sure to be tossed aside.

The British believe, however, that the United States will not object to it entirely, but that the admittedly varying viewpoint of the United States may be brought to bear on some modifications made in it and "this stage of agreement" be a useful step towards a larger agreement embracing other nations.

Therefore the tentative Anglo-French agreement on policy for future disarmament negotiations, the British point out, is far from the alliance which the French and apparently some Americans think it is. British officials discount entirely the charge made in a portion of the Liberal press that the French agreement with British policy in matters of naval limitation was obtained at too great a cost when Britain consented to abandon her opposition to the French policy towards land disarmament.

CHEMONG SERVICE.

Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, of St. John's Anglican Church, was the speaker at the open air service at Chemong Park on Sunday evening. He spoke from the text 1 Cor. 12: 8, 9,10: "For to one is given by the spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same spirit.

"To another faith by the same spirit, to another the gifts of healing by the same spirit.

"To another the working of miracles, to another prophecy, to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues."

He said: "The first thought implied in this passage is that the spirit energizes us in every department of our lives. All our activities are the direct outcome of the holy spirits influence upon us.

"Secondly, the spirit enables us to realize God apart from the holy spirit, no man can ever get to know God.

"The apostles' grand conception here is that of an ideal commonwealth in which each individual will contribute his quota into which he will bring his particular gifts. This does not mean that each individual member of this commonwealth is equal for their gifts differ, but each gifts is valued and absolutely essential to the welfare of the commonwealth. It is not what we receive out of it, but what we bring into it, that is the great thing and when we all are willing to play their part or contribute their gift under the influence of the divine spirit then this ideal commonwealth will be realized and the kingdom of God will have come."

The Salvation Army Band under the leadership of Frank Robinson sustained their already high reputation in three splendid selections. They also accompanied the singing of hymns.

Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial Church was in the chair.

The speaker next Sunday evening will be the Rev. J. E. Todd of George Street United Church. There will also be special music by members of George Street Church under the ladership of G. F. Liddel.

W.C.T.U. PLANS MEETING PLACE

Would Have Madoc Boys and Girls Meet Under Proper Care.

MADOC NEWS.

MADOC, Aug. 22 (Examiner Correspondence).—The August meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held at the cosy home of Mrs. John Tucker. The meeting was on the verandah, and twenty ladies were present to enjoy the wonderful view and also a very happy meeting.

The president presided and took as the topic for the meeting, "The religion of clean hands." A Bible reading on the use of the hands was taken part in by several ladies. Mrs. Revers gave a short talk on these readings, and Mrs. George Harris read an article on the subject, followed by a clipping read by Mrs. McMeachan.

Responsibilities in the use of the hands was well discussed, also responsibility to the youth of the village.

It was felt by all that some meeting place, under proper care, should be prepared for the boys, and girls in the evenings. A social half hour was spent, and all felt rewarded in the bright program, the magnificent view and the kindly hostess for climbing the hill on an August afternoon. A splendid collection was taken up and several ladies closed the meeting with prayer.

GATINEAU LINE RECORD CIRCUIT

Biggest Thing Electrically Ever Undertaken, Says Hydro Engineer.

DUPLICATE PLANNED.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, Aug. 21. —Ontario's supply of electric energy will be augmented by 125,000 horse power on October 1 when the transmission line carrying Gatineau power from the Ottawa River to Toronto is put in operation, and E. T. Brandon, electrical engineer of the Ontario Hydro, states that is "the biggest thing electrically ever undertaken in any part of the world."

The cost of the project is said to be in the neighborhood of $12,000,000 to $14,000,000 and it is understood that another transmission line parelling the one now being rushed to completion, will be built next year, making in all a quarter of a million additional horse power available for the province.

The new transmission line is 202 miles long, starting at the interprovincial boundary below Pitmoy harbor on the Ottawa River and connecting up with a "tie" line at Leaside.

Hydro engineers say that the line is built over the roughest country so far encountered in Ontario. The line will not be tapped on the way from the Quebec boundary to Leaside.

The route the transmission takes is as close to a straight line to Toronto as possible, some of the points passed being Bannockburn, Havelock, and Millbrook.

JAVA VISITOR TELLS OF HOME

Brother of Dr. McPherson is Here On Leave Of Absence.

CUSTOMS DIFFER.

Dr. A. W. McPherson and Mrs. McPherson have for their guests for a few days the doctor's brother, Livingstone McPherson, his wife and family, of Java, where he has resided for the past fourteen years and is in charge of the branch for that country of a large American concern.

Mr. McPherson is given a six months leave of absence every four or five years and this is his third similar visit to Peterborough. The trip here occupied about six weeks.

Mr. McPherson says Java is a very fine country with a population of about thirty-five million people but a very small white population. The seasons are not as we have them here, four of them, but instead two, the wet season and the dry season.

The wet season lasts about four months and it rains every day. It occurs at around four o'clock each day with such regularity one could almost correctly tell the time of day. Rains for a few hours and turns out fine until the next day, repeating the previous day's performance for a four months periods.

Labor is very cheap and in most cases is inefficient. Through this fact it costs more to build a home in Java than it would here. Their household staff of seven or more men and women costs about as much as a first class cook here.

The country is mountainous, but very fertile and the principal industry is agriculture. Whites whose occupation keeps them out of doors most of the time gradually get almost as dark as natives. Mr. McPherson's work is inside and consequently he has the appearance of having spent a couple of months at Chemong or Stoney Lake.

Some customs are very different in Java to those on this continent. The native women do not eat with the men, and if the home affairs are not to the liking of the lord of the home he does not spare the rod and if he is altogether dissatisfied with his better half he just tells her to get out and outs she has to go. The man can practically do as he likes and no questions asked.

Mr. McPherson, his wife and family are leaving immediately on the return trip which will take them two months. They are going by Switzerland, where the children will be placed in school, as educational facilities are not to be had in Java.

THE MARKETS

Winnipeg Grain

WINNIPEG, Man. Aug. 22—(Canadian Press).—Wheat prices broke to a new low for the season on Tuesday's grain market. October dropped to $1.06½ as offerings became heavy when buyers backed out of the market and prices were unable to stand thep ressure. Final quotations were 1c to ⅝c lower than the previous close. During the first part of the session there was some fairly good buying which was suggestive of export business and prices moved up 1¼c to 1⅝c above Monday's close. Gains were well held until after mid-session when support left the market and the break appeared.

A fairly good demand existed for Nos. 3 and 4 wheat on the cash grain section and prices advanced slightly. Other grades were quiet.

Barley and rye were the active grains on the coarse grain market. Oats held firm in a fairly dull market while flax, as the result of some fairly good buying moved up about 3 cents.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—So far this week the Toronto wholesale egg market has held steady owing to the evenness of the demand on the part of the consumers. This ready clearance of the receipts continues to be a feature of the Toronto egg market this season. Though egg quotations are unchanged, the market is firm, and the prospects that prices will not change materially for a few days.

Reports from outside centres show that in some markets the prices are advancing owing to the lightness of the receipts.

The Toronto butter market continues firm and steady.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BEAR'S PUDDING

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time the Fuzzy Fox called at the den of the Woozie Wolf and, after sticking out his red tongue, which showed that he was hungry, the Fox growled:

"Do you think Uncle Wiggily can make a pudding?"

"Make a pudding? Indeed he can't!" sneered the Wolf. "Well do I remember that once I had him caught and he said to me, 'Excuse me and I'll make you a pudding.' Well, I excused him and what do you think that rabbit did?"

"What did he do?" asked the Fox, who was no good at guessing riddles.

"Why he mixed up some talcum powder and soap and hard stones and gave it to me, saying it was a fine pudding. And when I bit into it I broke some of my teeth on the stones. No, indeed! If you want a pudding don't ask Uncle Wiggily to make one!"

"I wasn't going to ask him to make me a pudding," chuckled the Fox. "As a matter of fact, I'm just as glad he can't make a pudding, for it will help along the trick so much better."

"What trick" asked the Wolf.

"The trick I am going to play on that rabbit," was the answer. "Listen here. I'll have my friend the Bushy Bear to go down to Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow some day. The Bushy Bear will wait until Mr. Longears is all alone and then he'll go in and growl: "I'll nibble you if you don't make me a pudding!' And, of course, if Uncle Wiggily can't make a pudding the Bear will have a right to nibble him; won't he?"

"I suppose he will," said the Wolf. "But how will that help us?"

"Well," said the Fox, "when the Bear begins to nibble Uncle Wiggily on account of not making the pudding, we'll rush in and also get a few nibbles."

"It sounds very clever," said the Wolf. "But suppose Uncle Wiggily does as he did with me—excuses himself and fakes a make-believe pudding with stones in and the Bear breaks his teeth? What then?"

"I'll tell the Bear not to bite into anything that isn't a real pudding, with milk and sugar and eggs and vanilla and cornstarch in," said the Fox.

"Then," said the Wolf, "everything ought to be all right. Fine and dandy! Go on with the trick!"

So the Fox told the Bushy Bear to watch his chance, go to the rabbit's bungalow, ask for a pudding and, if he didn't get a real one to catch the rabbit and begin nibbling him.

Now Uncle Wiggily knew nothing of this trick. So one day he was all alone in the hollow stump bungalow, twinkling his pink nose and wondering what adventure would happen next when, all of a sudden, he heard a scratching, on the door.

"Maybe that's an adventure now," said the rabbit gentleman. And he most politely called: "Come in!"

"Gurr! Wuff! Whoo!" growled the Bushy Bear, as he stalked into the bungalow. "Ah, ha! I've caught you, Uncle Wiggily. You must at once give me a nice pudding, with eggs and milk and sugar and vanilla and cornstarch in or I'll nibble you and I'll not excuse you."

When the rabbit heard this he did not know what to say. First he had an idea he might be excused and slip out to play a trick on the bear. "But the Bear must have heard how I fooled the Wolf," said Mr. Longears to himself. "What shall I do? I can't make a pudding and that Bear looks hungry. Oh, dear!"

"Quick! I want a pudding!" howled the Bear and just then in came Stumble, the little rabbit boy, his paws filled with things from the grocery, where he had gone for his mother. And Stumble was so surprised at seeing the Bear in the bungalow that the little rabbit boy dropped his bundles. In the bundles were milk, sugar, vanilla, eggs and cornstarch, for Mrs. Longears was going to make a pudding when she came home. And when the eggs and other things fell in a heap on the floor they mixed themselves up in a yellow puddle and Uncle Wiggily cried:

"There's your pudding, Mr. Bear! Eat it up quickly and get out of my bungalow or I'll call the Police Dog!" And the Bear had to eat the funny scrambled accidental pudding. For he had said he would not nibble if he got one and he didn't dare break his word.

"Well, we're fooled again," said the waiting Wolf to the Fox. "No nibbles for us, either." So everything came out all right.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLVII.

Dream!

Jennifer turned into a hairdresser's, and sat down to wait her turn. They were very busy, so the woman told her.

"I don't mind. I can wait," Jennifer said indifferently.

She took a chair opposite a long mirror and stared at herself. She had had no new clothes since she left Baker Street, and she knew that her shoes were shabby, and her hat unsmart.

"If he still loves me he won't mind," she told herself. "And if he doesn't love me any more it won't matter."

It was nearly seven before she left the shop.

"I must get some food before I see him," she thought. "Besides, he may be at dinner now, or he may be out."

Her heart seemed to stand still with sudden dread. What would she do if she could not find him—if he were away as Chesney had been?

She would not allow herself to think of it. She went into a teashop and ordered an egg and some coffee, but she could not touch the food when it came.

She felt all nerves and racing pulses. Her sudden decision to go to Gaunt had keyed her up to such a pitch that she hardly knew what she was doing.

She was like a castle of cards built by a child's hand which sways and totters beneath its final strain before crashing down to earth.

The waitress looked at Jennifer's untouched plate in concern.

"Isn't the egg nice?" she asked solicitously.

Jennifer forced a smile to her trembling lips.

"It's just that I'm not hungry," she faltered.

She paid and went out into the street again.

It was a cold evening with a slight mist hanging around the lamp posts like wraithveils which were blown softly hither and thither by every breath of wind.

Jennifer walked the distance to Gaunt's house.

Six months ago in an expensive gown she had driven there with Malcolm Chesney beside her, and now she came on foot like a beggar who asks for alms and is in terror of being refused.

She heard the bell go ringing through the house, but it sent no fear to her heart. This was the last throw of the dice, and if she lost again it would be the end of all things.

The manservant who opened the door looked at her curiously, perhaps recognizing her, but when she asked for Gaunt he hesitated.

"Mr. Gaunt is at home, madam, but . . . what name shall I say."

"Mr. Gaunt is expecting me," Jennifer answered. "I am Miss Fry," and in desperation she slipped past him into the hall.

She felt as if she were acting; as if she were walking a stage with blinding foot-lights, as if with cruel fingers she was keeping a tight grasp on every nerve in her body, conscious that success or failure lay with the next few moments. The man followed her as she crossed the hall.

"Mr. Gaunt is in the library, madam, but if you . . ."

Jennifer turned on him fiercely.

"I tell you that Mr. Gaunt's expecting me." Every second that passed, every word spoken seemed a fresh menace.

The manservant bowed, and led the way to the library door. He had heard Jennifer's name more than once during the past months, for where there is a large staff, things filter through a house in the strangest manner, and there was an interested gleam in his eyes as he opened the library door.

"Miss Frey, if you please, sir."

Jennifer went blindly forward.

At first she was only conscious of the glare of light in the room, and the warmth of a wood fire, and of a man who rose to his feet, his hands still clutching the arms of his chair as he stared across at her. And then when she would have spoken, she saw that he was not alone. There was another man with him, a grey-haired man with a wise, kind face, who rose hurriedly.

"All right, Gaunt. I was just going."

As in a dream she knew that it was Winter, whom she had met that night at Dolly Harrup's party; as in a dream she knew that he walked past her and was gone, shutting the door behind him.

And then a great silence seemed to fall on the firelit room, out of which Jennifer struggled like a drowning man coming to the surface for the last time.

She tried to speak.

"I came . . I came because . . ."

Her voice was faint and broken, and then it failed her, and she could only whisper Gaunt's name as she had done when she walked along the street to find him. "Nicholas! Nicholas . . ."

But Gaunt did not move towards her; he stood there white to the lips, his eyes like those of a man who sees a beloved face and knows he but sees it in a dream.

And when at last he found his voice, it was harsh and unwelcoming.

"You've come . . why have you come?"

And Jennifer laughed dazedly. This was what she had expected, to be turned from his door, to find after all that her only friend was the river. She tried to say:

"I came because I've nowhere else to go, because I haven't any money. Because I can't pay for my room. Because I can't get any work, because I must have help or I shall die—" But instead she heard her trembling voice:

"I came because I love you. Because I can't live without you any longer." Then she hid her face in her shaking hands. And Gaunt drew a deep breath which was half a sob and crossed the space between them.

"You mean that you have really come to stay this time, Jennifer?"

She looked up with blind eyes, not daring to understand, not daring to hope, stammering her reply:

"If you will have me."

"If I will have you?"

He pulled her into his arms, hurting her with the strength of their clasp.

"If I will have you? Jennifer, Jennifer, when I've been searching for you day and night, night and day since you went away."

And he laid his head down on her shoulder, hiding his face against her, holding her to him as if even now he feared she would escape.

"You've been cruel to me, Jennifer—you've punished me more than I deserve. If only you had let me know you were well—if you'd only sent me one line. But all these months, to leave me without a word."

Jennifer put up her hand and touched his hair. It was no dream, he was real, and his arm held her.

"You mean . . . you still love me?"

"Still love you? Still love myself you mean, because you are myself. Where have you been? Where have you been hiding? I've searched London . . . I thought you must have died. I've been half mad . . ." He seemed hardly to know what he was saying; his words were disjointed, almost incoherent. "Let me look at you, Jennifer! Let me make sure it is really you!"

He raised his head, turning her round so that the light fell on her face.

"You've suffered too. I'm glad you've suffered. It wasn't fair that I should have it all to bear. Let me take off your hat." He took it off, throwing it down on a chair. "Let me kiss your hair . . ."

Jennifer was sobbing and laughing together.

"I had it waved to please you. My last shillings, Nicholas. And I'm going so grey . . . I thought you would send me away. I thought you didn't want me any more."

"Not want you! . . . Look at my eyes, Jennifer, and see." He let her go suddenly, turning away from her, and brushing a hand across his eyes like a schoolboy. "I'm ashamed! I want to cry like a woman, Jennifer . . ."

"My dear, my dear——"

They were clinging together again, kissing and whispering foolish things, explaining, asking for forgiveness, and forgiving in a jumble of words that had no meaning, till suddenly he felt her relax against him.

"Nicholas . . . I'm so tired . . ."

He put her into the big chair by the fire and fetched some wine, gently insisting that she drink it, then he knelt beside her, holding her in his arms.

"You always come back to me when you're a tired little girl. Do you remember that time in Cornwall? If only I'd stayed with you then, Jennifer. I've thought of it so often and cursed myself."

"You'll stay with me now," she whispered.

He kissed her hair.

"Can we ever make up for the wasted years?" He turned her face to him, searching it with eyes of passionate tenderness. "We're not very young any more, Jennifer. You talk about the grey in your hair. Look at mine!"

She leaned her head back against his shoulder; her face was quite colorless, and she felt tired, desperately tired.

"What have you been doing to yourself?" he asked almost angrily.

She lifted his hand and held it against her cheek.

"I want to tell you, but there seems so much to tell I don't know where to begin."

"I saw Dolores three months ago, and she said she had met you. She told me you looked well, and that you said you had plenty of money."

Jennifer turned her face away.

"That is what I meant her to believe, but I was really quite poor, even then. Work was so difficult to get. Oh, the number of times I tried, till I was desperate."

"But yet you would not come to me?"

She shook her head.

"I thought you might not want me; besides . . ." For the first time she thought of Edith Gaunt, and a sudden trembling hsook her. There was still the same bar to their happiness, only she knew that now she meant to ignore it.

To put the thought from her she spoke of little Timothy Webber.

"You would have loved him, Nicholas, but he died . . . I always seem to lose everything I love—"

"You still have me."

"Yes, but——" Her head went down again on his shoulder, and she hid her face.

"If only you were free. If only I could really have you," she sobbed.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Although this is not an important day in planetary direction, according to astrology, it is nevertheless a time for cautious action.

Routine should be followed at this time when many plans may be considered and discussed. It is wise to defer important action.

All the signs appear to presage much befuddled thinking and confusing reading matter. The press will be much criticised as well as patronized.

Under this sway may be much secret plotting and a stimulation of intrigue, for the rule encourages deceit and even dishonesty, according to the seers.

The planetary direction is read as foreshadowing for manufacturers much activity in public affairs. May will profit greatly.

All through the middle west and the states of the Atlantic seaboard there is to be a tendency toward united public action in politics and civic matters.

While this configuration prevails there may be a prevalence of prejudice and fixed ideas of many sorts may become noticeable through disputation and argument.

Both men and women should guard against irritability or loss of temper while this rule prevails. It may be difficult to be pleasant in all crisis under this sway.

This should be a fortunate day for selecting schools or colleges since education is well directed.

There is a good sign for domestic arts. It is a lucky rule for cooking or diet experiments.

This is not a promising government of the stars for first meetings with persons of opposite sex. It may be easy to make a bad impression.

Aviators should be careful under this sign which makes for less caution than usual and leads to accidents. Motor cars and electricity propelled vehicles are also subject to unusual dangers while this rule prevails.

Persons whose birthday it is have the augury of a fortunate year, but they should take no risks. These subjects of Leo are on the cusp and partake of Virgo characteristics. They partake of fire and earth qualities which make them usually exceedingly forceful, talented and successful.

Children born on this day become great travellers and may attain real fame. The subjects of this sign often have supreme power of concentration. Many writers and artists belong to Leo.

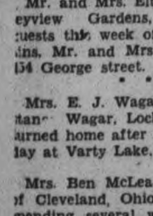
"PINKHAM'S COMPOUND IS WONDERFUL"

Read This Letter from a Grateful Woman



Vanessa, Ont.—"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is wonderful. I have had six children of which four are living and my youngest is a bonnie baby boy now eight months old who weighs 23 pounds. I have taken your medicine before each of them was born and have certainly received great benefit from it. I urge my friends to take it as I am sure they will receive the same help I did."—MRS. MILTON McMULLEN, Vanessa, Ontario.

Printed instructions for cutting and making the new coolie coat for beach, evening or boudoir wear, with sketches.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The sleeve at the top is of printed chiffon with ruffle below the elbow. Just below this is a sleeve from a frock of black satin with a ruffle at the wrist held with a white satin band and tiny rhinestone buckle. In the center a new sleeve of chiffon and lace. The coat sleeve shows the new arrangement of fur; and, lowermost, a lace sleeve with a floating panel below the elbow.

Many of the new sleeves show trimming below the elbow, and before long you will be wearing sleeves with frills and drapery of the sort that trail in the soup if you don't watch out. Sleeves have remained rather unimportant for so long that it seems as if the effort on the part of many of the dressmakers to bring them back into greater prominence ought to meet with success. And with all the agitation for greater elegance and more pronounced femininity sleeve trimmings surely are in order.

Almost always the trimming appears in the region of the forearm, sometimes in the form of a falling frill just beyond the curve of the elbow—rather medieval in suggestion—and sometimes in the form of a frill a few inches above the actual cuff.

Sleeves on the coats designed for autumn frequently show an arrangement of fur between wrist and elbow—a practical advantage, since there is less direct wear on fur so placed than on the old-time deep fur cuff. Usually the frock sleeve is close about the wrist, puffs and frills being mounted on a close-fitting foundation. But coat sleeves usually show a tendency to flare slightly below the elbow—a rather necessary arrangement when there are frills and puffs on the frock worn beneath.

And speaking of autumn coats, I understand that warm browns and rust tones are expected to meet with approval. There is a new dark greenish blue called gracklehead blue that is spoken of as a color for street things this autumn.

Well-dressed women have worn more color and brighter color this season than they have for years and years and years. I am sure I cannot remember ever to have seen such a resplendant display of vibrant hues. And most of us, I think, have found the medley of bright hues less trying than the medley of pastel hues was a season ago.

Just a Joke

AN OPTIMIST

"To think," exclaimed the enthusiastic husband, "that by the time we get all this furniture paid for we shall have genuine antiques."

SILKER TRACERY

A cobalt tulle evening frock has a flowered pattern traced in silver across its bodice and hip yoke while the uneven fullness of its skirt is plain tulle.

The fluttering and feminine beauty of mid-summer is caught in the fan godets, of slender, long beauty, in a lilac chiffon frock, with wide sleeves that end in frills and a pleated circular cape back.

FAVORITE RECIPE

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE
(Sent in by Mrs. N. C.)

4 tablespoons of butter;
1 teaspoon corn starch;
1 cup of brown sugar;
½ tablespoon vinegar.

Mix the sugar and corn starch and then add the other ingredients, boiling the whole until a soft ball will form in cold water. This must be served at once, and hot. It is good with vanilla ice cream.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

INTERESTING, isn't it, to read about and to wait excitingly to see the new fashions for fall? It seems rather early to be thinking of seeing them appear in the stores, but long before now someone must have been thinking of them or we might be minus anything new in the way of clothes for fall. In talking with a Peterborough man who is greatly interested in what women are going to be adorned in this fall, he told me of so many different styles which are to appear that it might be rather hard to relate them.

• • • • • •

Although the coat silhouette is straight it is the side flare which will add interest. This fulness will be created by ripple treatment, semi-detached drapes or panels. Tiers are also introduced and appear on both the front and back of the models and are usually straight. A great amount of fur is being used as trimming, great collars appear and our finger tips will peep from huge and interesting fur cuffs. The cuffs are deep, with points set in various positions. The bell cuff which starts at the elbow and ends at the cuff is also being shown as well as the gauntlet cuff which will be frequently used. Brown fur on black as used last season will again be given preference.

• • • • • •

While red is pronounced as the color for the fall coat, with gren, beige and grey closely following, black is given first consideration. Coats for sports wear and travel will appear in rough tweeds while the dressier ones will be of duvetyne, silk broadcloth, wool crepes and kaska materials, trimmed with Fitch as first place and beaver lynx and fox following.

• • • • • •

The back fulness still continues in the evening frocks while the most important fabrics will be printed velvets, satins, moire and chiffon. The hips are swathed in gypsy-like girdles and the bodice will be slightly bloused. The V shaped and square neck will be a new feature in the gown for evening wear.

• • • • • •

Not one single day time frock should have a high or fitted collar. One business dress may have a soft round collar but all the rest will be V shaped knotted, butoned or stitched. Handkerchief scarves are still to be used, one interesting design is shown in black crepe with a four-color scarf caught on one shoulder with the ends hanging. Another was in grey with the handkerchief knotted in front of the lefts houlder. The uneven hemline will still be carried on.

• • • • • •

Grey covet cloth will make a suitable tailored business dress with a V shaped neck and a deep yoke, from which box pleats may start. The hipline should be belted with a buckle in front.

• • • • • •

For more formal wear, black satin trimmed with white now makes it's appearance. One model has a fold of white draped from shoulder to shoulder in the back, rolled like a collar and continues down the front opening. It is held in place with bright bits of trimming similar to rhinestone buckles. The skirt drapes are pointed tiers that flare, while the cuffs are soft folds of white.

• • • • • •

To keep in lines with the huge fur collars which are to appear on our new fur-trimmed coat, our fall hats must therefore, be very snug. The new notes seem to strike these soft tones—berets, cloches and turbans. Closely fitted to the head, these hats will lie in choice of materials. They will appear in velvets and satins fur felts and plushes. One of these new materials is "satin mossu" a special plush.

• • • • • •

A cute design shown is in Earhart blue, tip tilted to the right and tied in place over the ear with a tiny knot. Turbans that are close fitting appear in velvets and felts, while velvet will be the keynote of the better class hat and will be beautifuly made.

• • • • • •

Considering that we each must be in style and yet each must have her hat distinctive and different, is not this, the miller's artistry the more amazing? She can put a felt hat on your head, take three little tucks above the eye, four little folds at the nape of the neck, cut a piece out of the brim and turn it back with a pin—and lo, you behold yourself in a very smart hat!

• • • • • •

I noticed a headline in a paper recently saying that snakes must die for Milady's footwear. The vogue for lizard snake and even alligator skin garb has been increasing, and brown and white lizard will be in good taste for sport shoes this fall. The double narrow strap over the instep tied with cord and tassels will also be continued as it has been all summer. For the evening frocks, there will be good lines shown in fairy lightness. Gold kid and gold paillettes combined with white brocades as one of these. A diamond buckle adorned the strap which rests on the instep. The heels will appear very high. A turquoise blue crepe de chine sandal is ready for the dinner gown. Open spaces are often very cleverly achieved, a single, narrow strap up the instep joins another strap around to the counters. For the black frock there will be as always, the smart satin slipper.

• • • • • •

Belts appear in novelties that will fit almost any sport model, buckles worn in the back is a new feature on ones in blue and tan leather. Slip-on gloves continue in popularity. Natural chamois gloves, hand stitched, are worn slightly large and navy blue and white kid makes another snappy pair with a full gore at the side.

• • • • • •

Special attention has been given to the fastenings in the handbags. Round knobs, sometimes set with jewels are always here. On another straight-line bag, a strap is clevely stitched on one side and slipped through a metal buckle at the top. The colors in bags are as varied as the rainbow.

• • • • • •

A diamond pattern appears in silk and wool hoses for fall sport wear, while wonderful qualities of silks can be had in every color we may desire to match our frocks.

• • • • • •

The fall costume would lack something surely without the refreshing bit of color we have been wearing on our coat collars, in the various folwer knots and bouquets. Soft, clinging sprays are pretty for evening wear, and various colors and designs will appear for our day time frock.

A Tip or Two

When using bananas here are two points to remember: First, fully ripe bananas do not have green tips, but have a golden yellow skin flecked with small black spots; second, never keep bananas in the icebox.

When cleaning the radiators a piece of wet newspaper on top and underneath the radiator before beginning to brush, will catch the dust.

MARION'S MAIL.

Mrs. C.B. (Madoc). While your inquiry is merely about the length of time an eight-year-old boy should sleep, I am going to answer more fully with information I obtained from a Peterborough nurse who has worked under a well-known child specialist. This should interest mothers of children of all ages.

The very new baby sleeps normally almost all the time that he is not being fed, bathed, or dressed. This means from twenty to twenty-one and a half hours of sleep. The 6-months-old child normally sleeps about 16 hours, being awake eight hours out of the 24. Fourteen hours is normal for a year-old child. This is conveniently divided into twelve hours at night and two hours in the daytime.

Gradually the amount of sleep is diminished a little—so that by the time a child is four or five years old he is usually satisfied with twelve hours sleep. And it is a good plan to keep up this twelve hours in bed for several years even when children no longer feel the need of so much sleep.

A child from eight to eleven should have eleven hours of sleep, and from eleven to thirteen he should have ten hours sleep. From thirteen to sixteen, nine hours sleep. In fact, the nine hours of sleep should, if possible, be continued until a boy or girl has attained full growth.

I would not worry about your child not sleeping so long at your summer cottage. Probably the explanation is that the refreshing air helps him to sleep more soundly and therefore he requires less quantity. You know that you yourself do not require the same amount of sleep when living and sleeping in the open air.

"Dear Marion:

A boy of 21 whom I've gone with for a while asks me to marry him. He is good to everybody, his family and mine, and for me he would do anything in the world. He says if I marry him it will never be a mistake. I often think of others—but they don't ask me. Sometimes I think I'd like this man; sometimes not. What shall I do?

Yours faithfully,
Ring."

Just a plain case of not being in love with a man, that's all. And so the answer is "Don't take that engagement ring."

The only excuse for marriage is love. It's hard enough to be sure you love a man even when you think you do. But when you know you don't, and he's only 21 and you are only 19 or so, you'd be a foolish youngster to tie yourself up for life when what you need is to be free to see more of life and men, and learn about them, and about yourself. Has your experience been limited to Bethany? Or have you travelled some?

Perhaps after you have met a few others you will come rushing back post haste to this good chap who is kind to his people, kind to yours, loves you, and is waiting with the ring. Meantime, wait and make sure.

• • •

Jazz: I don't like your letter; I don't think I like you. Marriage shouldn't build an iron cage around a couple, but parties such as you sponsor, and apparently indulge, are outside the bounds of good taste and morals alike. I've staunchly denied that there were many of the breed in Peterborough, and if you had sent your name I would have carried this case farther. It's not you I'd worry about, but the other girls you may snare into your "good times." Good night!

GOOD PROGRESS IN HEALTH WORK

Considerable Amount of Money Spent On Old Schools.

INDIAN WORK.

VICTORIA, B.C., Aug. 22.—Good progress in education and health work is being made among the aborigines of Canada, according to Dr. Duncan Campbell Scott, Deputy Superintendent General, Department of Indian Affairs, who is here on a periodical visit.

The department has spent a considerable amount of money in rebuilding old schools and placing them in more suitable locations. One of the reasons for this visit is to prepare for the new school to be erected by the department at Alert Bay, in connection with the Anglican Mission.

In health work, particularly in the study of tuberculosis, the department is doing a large amount of work for its wards and he points out that the Indians in Western Canada are producing an increasing amount of grain, the aborigines on the prairies in wheat, oats, and rye, being expected to provide a substantial increase in the quantity harvested in 1927.

WHAT THE DAM MEANT.

By Gregory Gray.

In one of the tarred paper shacks which housed the gangs and engineers of the Nesbit Construction Company a man bent over a pile of blueprints. A spectator would have thought him too absorbed to be aware of the beating rain on the unsubstantial roof.

As a matter of fact, Paul Bassett was so dominated by the rain that everything else was driven from his mind. It even made him forget the party on the hill whose foregoing he believed had cost him the heart and hand of its hostess, Claire Hendricks.

This downpour, unprecedented at this season of the year, was threatening his uncompleted dam and with it the labor of four hard years. The weather bureau had prophesied another twelve hours of it and the level guages showed higher and higher with each reading.

"Of course," he had told Claire over the phone, "my common sense tells me the dam will stand. Even unfinished, the factor of safety is ridiculously high."

"Then I should think," said Claire petulantly, "that you could surely come to the party."

"I am afraid not," he said ruefully. "If anything should happen—well, it's like the captain and his ship, 'Duty before pleasure'."

"Imagined duty!" came back Claire's taunt. "Thank Heaven, Abbott Wayne's bonding business is not so demanding!"

With that unkind last word the conversation ended. Wayne was the man Paul had for some time been fearing as a rival.

At midnight there came a sudden lull in both gale and rain and it occurred to Paul that it would be a favorable moment to take a reading of certain guages down at the dam itself which, imbedded in the structure, registered their recordings over wires to special instruments at the surface.

Picking his way by flashlight along the narrow path that skirted the great piles of debris, now being washed and gullied into fantastic patterns, he reached the dam and made his readings.

For a moment he stood watching the turbulent race of clouds over his head. Then, as he turned to go, a glimpse of something moving in the shadow of a derrick caught his eye.

A girl, wrapped in a cape, her hair wind blown, was standing there. For a minute his heart leaped. Had Claire run down for a moment?

Then he saw it was not Claire, but Abbott Wayne's little sister, who had made the dam project her own ever since the first shovel of dirt had been turned.

"What on earth, Dot," he demanded "are you doing here?"

The girl shrugged her shoulders. "I love the racket of the storm. Besides, haven't I seen this dam grow from the very start? I couldn't help worrying about it. Wanted to see if it was all right."

For the first time in the four years that she had had the run of the place, Paul really saw Dorothy. And she wasn't the mere child that he thought. "Why aren't you at the party?" he said.

"Two reasons," she retorted promptly. "Unimportant one being that I'd rather be here. The other—well, I wasn't asked. I may be eighteen, almost, but Claire thinks me a 'kid.'"

Eighteen! Paul would hardly have thought so, but now he saw that it was rather because of her slim little figure and girlish ways than from any real childishness. It flashed across him that she would make an excellent wife for an engineer. She would understand, as Claire never could, that intimate bond between a man and the thing he has created.

She startled him with a little cry. "Look, oh, look! I do believe the old weather bureau was wrong! There is the moon!"

Sure enough, through a rift in the clouds, the whole disc of the moon, just past full, could be seen.

It was true that the crest of the flood might not be reached until noon tomorrow, but the chances were that the dam would hold if the rain was over. Paul felt like seising the slender hands of his companion and whirling her round in a dance of celebration. Yesterday he would have done that very thing. But, somehow, not tonight.

"I must go back," she was saying. "I—I wonder if you would mind walking up to the top of the hill with me where I can see the light in my window. It's really later than I thought. I suppose—" and she threw a glance up at the big house on the hill whence strains of music were floating down—"everyone knows now of Claire's engagement to my brother."

Paul stopped short. "Claire—your brother?"

"Why, yes. That was what the party was for. Abbott told me before he left. But it was to be a grand surprise. Claire loves surprises."

By rights, Paul should have felt as if a knife were being turned in his heart. On the contrary, he felt, and he was amazed at the sensation, as if he had just received a reprieve from some dreadful fate.

The rain had ceased, the girl who could never understand what the dam meant to him was going to belong to somebody else, and he had discovered a lovely, awakening woman in the girl who had watched him build it.

WELCOMES DONATION.

$50,000 Home and Seven Acres Given To Bishop of Kootenay.

VERNON, B.C., Aug. 22.—Mrs. C. L. Wainman, wealthy resident of the Coldstream municipality, who is leaving shortly to reside in England, has donated her $50,000 home and about seven acres of ground to be the permanent residence of the Bishop of Kootenay.

The familiar frilly gown of tulle is seen again in many models. One of the best of this type is shown in Havana brown tulle in what is called the peacock design, in which the skirt is very long at the back and lifted in front, and flares all around.

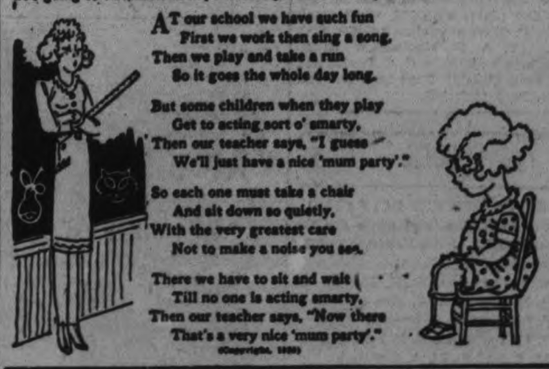
The "Mum" Party

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

DO you know about a "mum party"? I didn't till I walked right into one when visiting kindergarten. There were all the children sitting with exaggerated quietness. When some offender started to giggle or wiggle he was immediately squelched by threatening looks from the others. It seems things had gotten a little boisterous, so instead of punishing or scolding when there was really no need for drastic measures the teacher had simply inaugurated a "mum party" till self control was evidenced. It strikes me such a party is an excellent thing to know about, for it can be used without friction or excess irritation. For instance, why not have one at the table till a certain questionable vegetable is all gone? Such a game can be played in the best of spirits and since keeping still is hard for a child he's going to terminate that particular part as fast as possible.



AT our school we have such fun
First we work then sing a song.
Then we play and take a run
So it goes the whole day long.

But some children when they play
Get to acting sort o' smarty,
Then our teacher says, "I guess
We'll just have a nice 'mum party'."

So each one must take a chair
And sit down so quietly,
With the very greatest care
Not to make a noise you see.

There we have to sit and wait
Till no one is acting smarty,
Then our teacher says, "Now there
That's a very nice 'mum party'."

CANADIAN YACHTSMEN WIN IN OCEAN RACE

CANADA LEADS EASTERNERS 6-4

Gooderham Sails Venturer To Victory in New England Races.

WADE IS IN THIRD.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 22.—The fourth international crew match between the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto and the Eastern Yacht Club began yesterday. The first was held at Toronto in 1922, won by the Royal Canadian yachtsmen. Two years later the Canadian yachtsmen visited here and were defeated in a match sailed with "S" knockabouts. In 1926 two crews from the Eastern went to Toronto for a match sailed in "P" and "R" boats with Caleb Toring, the Eastern skipper, winning easily with the 20-raters, and the Canadian skipper, Thomas K. Wade, taking two out of three matches in the 31-raters.

This year's match is a deciding meeting as each has won one match and split even on another. This year's match is to be sailed in the 25-raters of "Q" class and the following racers have been loaded for the sport: B. Devereux Barker's' Hornet, Edward M. Abbot's Falcon, Frederick H. Prince's Venturer, Isaac R. Edmund's Norn. The skippers of the Eastern crews will be Charles Francis Adams and B. Dexereux Barker, but the make-up of the crew will not be known until to-day.

The Canadian yachtsmen, headed by Rear-Commodore Norman R. Gooderham, arrived in Boston Monday noon and were met by a delegation from the Eastern Yacht Club and taken over the road by automobile to Marblehead, where they spent the afternoon visiting at the various summer homes and in sailing aboard a couple of racing crafts that are to be used in the matches.

Early yesterday the real program of welcoming the visiting Canadians commenced, and as the forenoon progressed it developed into one of the grandest receptions ever accorded any visiting delegation at this somewhat famous and exclusive resort.

The visiting Toronto guests received the official welcome of the governors of Massachusetts and New Hampshire as well as those of the chief executives of north shore cities. It has been a gala morning for the visitors who have again and again expressed their appreciation.

The Royal Canadian crews, alternates and officials here for the fourth match are: Gooderham, Thomas K. Wade, Ralph Roberts, J. W. Bartlett, G. D. Addison, G. Finch-Noyes, Henry Hill, E. K. M. Wedd, C. H. J. Snider, Gordon T. Cassells, and G. Ernest Macrae. The skippers are Gooderham and Wade.

The racing will be in charge of Henry A. Morss, representing the Eastern Yacht Club; E. K. M. Wedd, representing the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, who have selected George Owen as the third member and chairman. Former Commodore Morss' new power cruiser Paladine is to be used as the committee boat. The schedule for the match is for a series of six races, two each day, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with the skippers and the crews changing boats after each meeting. Each crew will consist of the skipper and two corinthians, and it is hoped that the races can be alternated between windward and leeward and triangular.

Skipper Norman Gooderham sailed Venturer, and led from the start. The course was four miles to windward and return in a moderate southeast breeze. At the weather mark Gooderham led his immediate opponent, Skipper Barker in the Falcon, by a minute and eighteen seconds. He held this within two second to the finish.

Skipper T. K. Wade of Toronto sailed Norah against Hornet of Marblehead, three season's fleet champion, the latter being sailed by Skipper Isaac R. Edmands in the temporary absence of Commander Adams. Wade won the start of the fleet and left Gooderham to cover Barker. Wade's course covering Edmand's made him third at the weather mark. He gained on Falcon and almost caught this American at the finish. Wade's boat finished third, beating Hornet by one minute, 26 seconds. Score stands, Canada 6, United States 4. There will be five more races.

L. HOPMAN BEATEN IN NEWPORT MATCH

Crawford Only Representative of Foreign Invaders in Tennis Classic.

LOTT AND DOEG WIN.

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Players from six out of seven foreign countries had been eliminated at the end of the third-round play in the singles of the Newport Casino's 12th annual invitation tennis tournament here yesterday.

Only J. C. Crawford of Australia remained. He won his way into the fourth round yesterday by defeating Arthur Ingraham of Providence, 6—3.

A fellow Australian, L. Hopman, was eliminated by H. H. Hyde of Hartford, Conn., former New England champion, 6—4, 9—7.

In the only second-round match George Lott of the Davis Cup team eliminated Louis Thalheimer of the University of Texas, 6—3, 6—3.

Other third round results:

W. Aydelott, New York, National indoor champion, beat Edward McKnight, Springfield, Mass., 6—2, 5—7, 6—1.

Francis T. Hunter, doubles partner of William T. Tilden, beat J. Brooks Fenno, Boston, 6—3, 7—5.

Nathaniel W. Niles, Boston, beat William B. Bragaw, Madison, Conn., 6—1, 6—0.

John Doeg, Davis Cup player, beat Howard Voshell, New York, 6—4, 6—2.

H. Coggeshall, Des Moines, beat Claude De Ricou, of France, 6—2, 6—2.

Nearl Brown, San Francisco, beat James H. Van Alen, Newport, 6—4, 1—6, 6—1.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

There is no game in the city softball league listed for to-night at Confederation Park

Due to some misunderstanding between the players and the executive of the city softball league, Harrison's failed to field a team for their scheduled fixture with the K. of C. last night and the game had to be called off.

* * * * * *

An all-star team composed of players from the other teams of the league lined up against the clubmen but were knocked for a row in such a way that the score was too high for any scorekeeper to keep track of. If the Knights had fielded such a team as through the season as they did last night they would have given the DeLaval a hard run to attain the position they hold to-day.

Frick occupied his usual position of first baseman on the all-star team but he wasn't so hot at the bat as he has been on former occasions. He failed to connect with any of the offerings of Darling to make the circuit run.

Raybestos, Peterborough's entry in the intermediate O.B.A.A. play-offs travel to Cobourg this afternoon to play with the leaders of the Oshawa intermediate league. Eliminating the Motor city crew in a sudden death game on Saturday, Cobourg is all set to put up a stiff battle for the honors against the Brakeliners to-day.

Harrison and C.G.E. meet in the last game of the city softball league schedule to-morrow night at Confederation Park. Starting at 6 p.m. sharp these two teams will clash for possession of second place in the league standings. If the North-Enders defeat the Industrials, they must play a postponed game with the K. of C. before they can win the right for the position in the play-offs.

Alex. Kay from Peterborough and Ken Colling from Belleville, will do the umpiring in to-day's intermediate battle at Cobourg. The Lakeshore crew will play here in the second game on Saturday at the Exhibition Park.

The first game of the central league play-offs is also slated to begin to-day when Belleville and Oshawa meet in the Bay of Quinte city this afternoon.

Steve Rocco and Marty Gold look like the next principals for a flyweight bout in the Queen city. Hailing from Philadelphia, Gold the poker faced boxer is one of the hardest hitters in the padded glove business and should give the Canadian flyweight a stiff argument. Since acquiring a yen for boxers of the 112 pound class, the patrons of the Shamrock club in that city have been witnessing some neat battles of late.

CHICAGO GOLFER WINS HONORS

Captures Medal in Qualifying Round of Western Amateur Play.

NEAR A RECORD.

Bob O'Link Club, Chicago, August 22, Canadian Press— John Dawson, of Chicago, yesterday won the gold medal in the qualifying round of the western amateur golf championship, with a score of 72-69-141, not far above the record for medal scores in major events. Don Moe, of Portland, Oregon, leader in the first round with 69, finished in second place with 144, slumping to 75 yesterday.

T. P. Perkins, British amateur champion, tied for third place at 145 with Phillips Finlay of Los Angeles, who scored par 72 yesterday despite a bad six on the 17th hole. Perkins had second low of the day, getting 71. Chick Evans of Chicago, eight times winner of the event, was next with 149.

None of the British players qualified, Perkins leading with 145, Dr. William Tweddell being next with 152 and Eustace Storey third with 154. T. A. Torrance was in a tie for the last few places with 165, while Capt. J. N. C. Martin wasjust outside with 166. Dr. A. N. MacCallum, H. H. Hardman and Major C. C. Hezlet had 167 each while H. Hope took 159 and J. B. Beck took 162.

C. G. E. VS. HARRISONS

Teams Lock Horns For Possession of Second Place in Softball League.

ON THURSDAY NIGHT.

Thursday night at 6.00 p.m. at Confederation Square the C.G.E and Harrison's Northenders will lock horns for possesion of second place in the City Softball League. This game should be one of the fastest games of the season as both teams will be at full strength.

The last time these two teams met Harrisons won out 5-4 after a bitter contest. Tomorrow night's game should be even a better battle than the other game as both teams have strengthened since then. Bob Ross is out with the Harrison outfit and strengthens the team considerably, while the C.G.E. will have Crary on their lineup.

Dundas or Nicholls will get the pitching assignment for Harrisons, while Powell will likely heave for the Electrics.

The game is called for 6.00 o'cock sharp and should attract a bumper crowd.

GIANTS HOLD FIRST PLACE

PHILLIES BEAT CUBS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Robins rushed to the aid of the Giants handsomely yesterday in defeating the Cardinals by 6 to 1 in the second game of the series at St. Louis. The Brooklyn victory saved first place for New York who lost to Cincinnati by 3 to 2. Doug McWeeny pitched a steady game for Brooklyn, earning a shade against Flint Rhem. Sylvester Johnson was touched for four runs in the ninth after Rhem had stepped aside for a pinch batsman.

Cincinnati stopped New York when the visitors were beaten 3 to 2 in a hard fought game. The Reds bunched four singles and a sacrifice on Fred Fitzsimmons in the second for all their runs, and the Giants never could fight their way quite up to even terms. Singles by Fred Lindstrom and Travis Jackson, followed by a double steal for one marker in the fourth and Bill Terry's twelfth home run of the season in the ninth represented all of the scoring the visitors managed at the expense of "Red" Lucas, who gave up only five hits.

The right hand shots of Claude Willoughby puzzled the crippled Cubs and Philadelphia took its 6th straight victory over Chicago by 3 to 1. Willoughby allowed the Cubs only five scattered blows, while his mates collected ten from the offerings of Sheriff Blake and Hal Carlson. Cliff Heathcote, who took the place of Hack Wilson in centrefield, stole some of the National home-run leader's stuff by getting a homer, giving the Clubs their only run. Wilson is under a three-day suspension for umpire baiting. Captain Charlie Grimm of the Cubs also was out of the game with a bad leg.

Pittsburg evened the Boston series by winning the second game 6 to 2. Ray Kremer won his sixth consecutive victory, although hit freely by the Braves. Pie Traynor was the hitting hero for the champions with three singles and a double in five times at bat. He also scored half of the Pirate runs.

Manager Rogers Hornsby of Boston will be out of the game for about a week, it was announced, because of a leg injury suffered in Monday's contest.

YANKEES HOLD LEAGUE INTACT

Beat Browns 3-1 As Athletics Wallop Indians 12-4.

DETROIT WINS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22. — The Yankees held on to their lead of five and one-half games in the pennant race by defeating the Browns, 3 to 1, in the opening game of the series here yesterday, as the runners-up slaughtered the Cleveland Indians by 12 to 4. The New York game was a pitching duel between Waite Hoyt, who won his seventeenth game, and Sammy Gray the St. Louis ace.

The Athletics slugged a quartet of pitchers for sixteen hits and trounced the Cleveland Indians 12 to 4 at Philadelphia. The Mackmen batted the length of the line-up on Billy Bayne in the first inning, gathering six runs that proved enough to give Jack Quinn, the ancient spitball pitcher, his sixteenth victory of the season.

Marty McManus's home run off Slim Harriss in the third inning was the deciding factor in a 4 to 3 victory which the Detroit Tigers scored over the Red Sox to open a three-game series at Boston. The Red Sox threatened in the eighth and ninth, but Stoner, who relieved Van Gilder, held the Carrigan team in check.

Adkins held Washinton to seven hits, and the White Sox took the first gam eof the series at Washington, 3 to 1. Nick Altrock, Washington coach, was chased from the bench by Umpire Ormsby in the second inning for "razzing," and Mostil, White Sox centrefielder, was banished from the game in the sevnth after throwing his glove to the ground when Umpire Guthrie ruled that he did not catch Barne's fly.

ORIOLES TAKE TWO FROM MONTREAL

Montreal, Quebec, August 22. — Baltimore Orioles hit hard and timely yesterday afternoon to take the opening doubleheader from the Royals by the scores of 7 to 3 and 10 to 1.

Sherrid on the mound for Montreal in the first game was given wretched support and should have gained a better break on his performance.

The Orioles drove Buckalew from the box in the second game, Barton hitting a home run with two aboard in the first inning and Porter blasting him from the mound with a long triple in the second.

Onslow was the most effective batter for the Orioles, driving home six runs in two games.

The double victory enabled the Orioles to draw in to second place,one half game back of the leading Toronto Leafs. The Royals dropped to 4th place.

DEATH OF GREAT TROTTER PROVES A GREAT SHOCK

Was Destined To Become Leader of His Class.

GREAT RACER.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—Just as cruel a shock as the running turf would have suffered had the gallant Man o' War suddenly died at the height of his career, was the untimely death of the champion trotting colt, Fireglow, to the light harness sport.

Here was a trotter that appeared destined to shatter all three-year-old records and prove the fastest stallion ever to grace the turf. It was extremely unfortunate that an acute attack of indigestion following a race at the North Randall track here last week had to take him from the earth.

Fireglow's appearance here was his only one as a three-year-old. It was enough to convince many devotees of the sport who have seen all the great trotters come and go that the son of San Francisco and Worthy Spirit was the best they had ever seen striding up the lane.

Ideal Race Horse

Fireglow was the ideal race horse. He had extreme speed, perfect manners and gait and gameness. He left a memorable picture in the race at the Randall course. In the first heat, he came marching up the stretch like the monarch he was and only was coastinfi to lead home probably the greatest field of three-year-old trotters ever to go to the post in 2.04 3-5. In the second mile, he won even easier in 2.03 1-5, but suffered the ignominy of disqualification when the judges held his driver, Walter R. Cox, the Goshen, N.Y., veteran, responsible for a spill that sent six drivers and horses crashing to the ground.

"He only walked the second heat," shrewd judges said. "Why that colt should have trotted in two minutes to-day"

As an indication of Fireglow's class, it must be stated that the world rate record for three-year-old trotters is 2.02, held by Mr. McIlwyn, the stallion owned by W. H. L. McCourtie, Dallas, Texas.

Was Favored Race

Fireglow was the favorite for the harness turf's premier classic, the $70,000 Hambletonian, to be raced at Syracuse, N.Y., Monday, Aug. 27. He appeared to have the event at his mercy, as he tow-roped the stars in the Championship Stallion stake he was to have met.

Fireglow's death meant the loss of a $100,000 colt to his owner, W. H. Bradford, Bennington, Vt., and the great horse he always had hoped to own. For Cox, it was the passing of the fastest horse he ever had trained. For his many admirers it resulted in the loss of thousands of dollars wagered on him to win the Hambletonian in the future books.

It is believed the son of San Francisco would have won approximately $75,000 in purses this season. And he might have proved a great sire.

The colt showed his greatness last year as a two-year-old, when he set a new race record of 2.04 in the junior division of the Kentucky Futurity at Lexington, Ky., being timed from where he got away in 2.03¼.

Bradford only paid $10,000 for Fireglow last year. One day he visited Goshen, N.Y., and noted the youngster in his stall. Without even asking to see the horse trot, he offered $10,000 for him and the tender promptly was accepted.

It probably will be a long time before another Fireglow makes his appearance on the trotting turf. His name always will burn brightly in the fires of memory.

STEPS AHEAD OF PROMOTER

Takes Jump On Rickard By Signing Principals For First Fight.

ELIMINATION BOUT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22. — Having beaten Tex Rickard to the draw in the protection of the first bout of the heavyweight tournament that is to result, possibly, in a successor to Gene Tunney, Humbert J. Fugazy yesterday completed plans for his second elimination bout.

This time Jack Sharkey, the Boston strong boy, is to be the opponent of Roberti, Fugazi said. Both Sharkey and the Italian have agreed on the bout, which probably will be held some time early in September, he said, at Ebbetts field, Brooklyn.

No contracts have been signed yet, but the final arrangements are to be completed on Saturday.

Roberti, who won from Johnny Risko, on a foul, last Wednesday, led the Cleveland baker by a shade when the low blow halted the fight, Fugazy said. In proof of his contention he cited the scoring cards of the judges and the referee, made public by the state boxing commission yesterday.

The scoring by rounds, for the first five, follows:

John McAvoy, referee; first, even; second, Roberti; third, Roberti; fourth, Risko; fifth, Risko.

Tom Flynn, judge: First, Roberti; second, Roberti; third, even; fourth, Risko; fifth, even.

Billk Koh, judge: First, Roberti; second, Roberti; third, even; fourth, Risko; fifth, even.

Life or Death.

Sharkey's share in the proceeds from the pending bout were not made public, but current reports said the Boston boxer would clear at least $40,000. And, in addition, any fame he may acquire if he beats Roberti.

A defeat would mean almost certain oblivion for the noisy Sharkey, it is pointed out, and at least that for Roberti.

LOCAL BOWLERS STILL IN RUNNING

J. W. Mayneord's Rink Reaches Fourth Round of Ontario Trophy.

GEORGE CAIRNS LOSES.

Two Peterborough lawn bowling rinks, one skipped by J. W. Mayneord and the other skipped by George Cairns are in Toronto this week competing in the Annual Dominion Lawn Bowling Tournament. In the Dominion Trophy Mr. Mayneodr went through to the third round but was then defeated by N. Richardson of the St. Matthews Club, Toronto. The score was 21 to 15. He then went into the second round of the Ontario cup where he defeated J. N. Raymond of Rushholme by 15 to 14. In the third round he met N. Richardson again and this time he was the victor by 17 to 9.

George Cairns lost in the second round of the Ontario Trophy yesterday to L. J. Harrington of the High Park Club by 13 to 11.

To-day Cairns and Bredin will meet Jamieson and Atherton (Norway), and Bacon and Oke will meet Snedon and Young (Kew Beach) in the doubles.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"DEARIE" HERE NOW
—WITH IRENE RICH
IN GREATEST PART.

Dazzling Picture of Metropolitan Night Life and Mother Love.

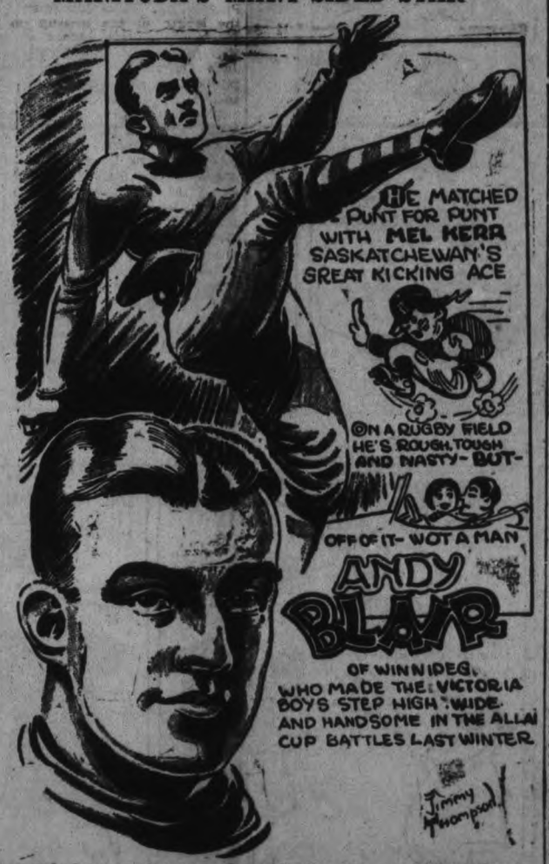
The night club hostess, mysterious and interesting as the character is, has rarely been depicted on stage or screen, but Irene Rich now portrays one of that gracious company, with subtlety and beauty. Miss Rich is the star of "Dearie," the Warner Bros. production now playing at the Regent Theatre.

"Dearie" presents a glittering panorama of modern life. Broadway playhouses, night clubs, mansions and tenements, hospitals, courts and college frat houses, make up the locale, and "dearie" herself is the centre of a brilliant company of players, among whom are William Collier, Jr., Edna Murphy, Anders Randolph, Richard Tucker, Douglas Gerrard, Arthur Rankin, William Demarest and David Mir. Archie Mayo directed.

Miss Rich's star part is that of a mother who, having lost her fortune, takes up singing to keep her son in college. She sings the old favorite, "Dearie," winning the name for herself. The fact that she never let her son know that she is the cabaret singer of whom he hears so much, causes complications which sweep the story on and up to a terrific climax.

"Dearie," the Carolyn Wells story, picturized by Anthony Coldeway, is one of the most unique contributions to the screen, revealing as it does a new type of mother. The millions who remember Irene Rich as Mrs. Erlynne, mother of the heroine of "Lady Windermere's Fan," will not want to miss seeing her in the supreme characterization of her brilliant career—"Dearie."

MANITOBA'S MANY-SIDED STAR



Possessed of an unerring eye and a combination of speed, weight, heart and the ability to think fast and often, a "natural," Andy Blair, Manitoba's stalwart athlete, is only just past his nineteenth year and has already performed on provincial, Western Canada and Dominion championship aggregations, both hockey and rugby. Born in Winnipeg, Blair is a product of St. John's College, Winnipeg, and first took to the ice in the little wooden rink behind the college where so many of Manitoba's famous sons made their debut. Among these, Red Dutton, Herb Gardiner, Jocko Anderson, Spunk Sparrow and Murray Murdoch of the New York Rangers are particularly well known. The last named is a cousin of Andy's.

Skating furiously from midget to senior in a few short years, Blair reached the pinnacle of amateur hockey in Canada, the Allan Cup team. Andy goes well over the 185-pound mark. Playing centre for Manitoba Varsity, Allan Cup champions, he had less than ten minutes off the ice in the memorable series at Ottawa last winter.

Gifted with a wonderful stamina, coupled with an even temperament, Andy fairly romps, too, through a gruelling grid struggle and when he unleashes his powerful boot the pigskin soars to unknown heights. His tackling and broken field running is a feature of any game. Almost singlehanded he won the first Western Canada inter-collegiate title for Manitoba Varsity last fall when he kicked and ran point after point, always piling up a great lead for his team with his brilliant and ever-changing style of play.

In 1923, at the age of fifteen, he played snapback for the St. John's juniors when they won the Western Canada junior rugby championship from Saskatoon. Pulled out of the line to kick when the regular booter was injured, Blair successfully held Saskatchewan's great all-round champion Mel Kerr, back in his own territory, St. John's winning the game and championship handily. Murray Murdoch played on the half line with the same team. Three years later Blair booted the St. John's senior squad to the Western Canada finals. Blair also plays British rugby with the St. John's R.C. who have been undefeated champions since the revival of the game in Winnipeg three years ago.

In addition to football and hockey he also finds time for soccer, basketball and tennis, and during his sojourn at St. John's shone on the track and field. In the summer months Blair hurls a fine brand of ball for one of the local baseball clubs. This summer he has taken up the "royal and ancient" game and as he is shooting his first season in the middle eighties bids fair to become another threat in this game also.

Modest and unassuming he quietly demonstrated that his brilliance is not all outside of the classroom when he graduated in arts this spring from the University of Manitoba, shortly afterward entering the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, where he is employed in the transportation department.

ADVENTIST PARTY CANVASSES CITY

Twenty-two Men and Women From Oshawa Working For Missions.

A party of twenty-two people from Oshawa were in the city yesterday in the interests of the Seventh Day Adventists' Mission Board. The men and women in the roup, which was headed by L. A. Philpott, are employees of the Canadian Watchman Press in Oshawa. This press issues the official monthly publication in Canada of the Seventh Day Adventists, and its employees, along with others who are interested in the movement, are taking part in a campaign to raise $1,250,000 this year to increase and continue the missionary work carried on by the Adventists in foreign lands. The campaign started on August 4th and continues until December 31st. The canvassers make a house to house appeal in places visited. They are taking a day off occasionally to carry on this canvass, return in the intervals to their regular work in Oshawa. They plan later visits to Lindsay, Toronto and other places.

This "Ingathering Campaign", as it is termed, is to raise funds to furnish and equip hospitals, dispensaries and clinics in foreign lands. The Adventists maintain several such establishments in India and China.

The Adventist movement commenced in the New England States about the year 1844, with Mr. and Mrs. James White and Joseph Bates as pioneers. They believe the second Advent is imminent, but do not date the event and observe the seventh day of the week as the Bible Sabbath. They emphasize temperance and promulgate rules of health. Their English centre is at Watford, Herts.

JOINS AGENCY.

Godfrey Humphreys, of Guelph Mercury, Enters Findlay Company.

Godfrey Humphrey, who has been for the past five years Advertising Manager of the Guelph Mercury, has been appointed treasurer for the William Findlay Company Limited, General Advertising Agents, Toronto. Mr. Humphrey has been on the advertising staff of the Ottawa Journal and the Toronto Globe. He was secretary of the Ontario Provincial Dailies for several years and is now a director. He should be quite an acquisition to Agency with which he is now associated.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's roommate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

When Sanderson asks Akers to help Sally he says that he's through with her. Sanderson gives him a black eye.

VII.—ULTIMATUM

As Sanderson entered the ward he saw that Sally was lying with her face turned towards the door, eagerly expectant. There was more color in her face today, and her eyes were bright—too bright, so a keen observer might have thought, but to Sanderson they only meant that she was better.

But his own eagerness died as he saw the sudden shadow which fell over her face when she recognized him; a sort of weary bitterness, and she turned her head away, her cheek close pressed into the pillow. Sanderson sat down on a chair beside the bed. He felt clumsy and ill-at-ease. Akers would have done it all so much more effectively, he told himself savagely; no doubt Akers would have taken one of Sally's thin little hands and gracefully kissed it, or have held it between both his own without feeling a fool, or even looking one. But outward demonstration was impossible to Sanderson; he had to keep his eloquence locked in his heart because he was incapable of giving expression to it; he just sat there stupidly staring at her, till at last she herself was driven to exasperated speech.

"Well, what have you come for again?"

"To see how you are, and to ask if there is anything I can do for you."

"I told you yesterday there wasn't." Her voice was harsh and snappy, like the voice of a woman who is on the verge of broken-hearted tears and dare not give away to them.

"Does the leg hurt?" Sanderson asked. He knew the question was stupid and banal, but one had to say something, and much as he longed to say "I love you. I'd give my life for you. Why in heaven's name can't you care for me instead of for that swine?" he felt as if an iron hand barred his lips, forbidding their utterance.

"Oh, no, it doesn't hurt!" she said shrilly. "In fact, there's nothing to hurt. I'm quite well. I ought to get up and dance. I ought to go back to the Faun tonight, only they won't let me. Did you ever hear of a broken leg and smashed thigh that did hurt?"

"I'm sorry. I'm afraid I'm stupid," Sanderson said helplessly. Big tears fell from Sally's eyes.

"I don't know what you've come for," she muttered brokenly.

It would have been so much easier if he could have answered as he longed to answer, "I came because I'm wretched when I'm not with you. I came because I can't keep away. I came because I want to be with you all the time—all my life!" But instead all he said was:

"Well, if I didn't come I suppose that wouldn't suit you."

"It would suit me a darned sight better," Sally answered; but there was a sob catching her voice that robbed her words of their bitterness.

And there followed another silence which Sanderson broke stiltedly.

"Did you get the grapes and flowers I sent?"

"Yes. Can't you see for yourself?" She indicated the locker beside the bed, upon which the flowers stood in a cheap vase, the big bunch of luscious purple grapes on a plate beside them.

"You don't seem to have eaten any," Sanderson said; and she answered shortly:

"I haven't. I hate grapes."

He bit his lip. He had thought himself immune to all her snappy little ways and unkindnesses, and yet they hurt so much more, now she was ill and weak, than they had done when as the life and soul of the Faun Cafe she had danced her way into his heart. He was conscious of many pairs of interested eyes fixed upon him from the other beds in the long ward, and they all added to his awkward nervousness.

"If there's anything else you would prefer, you have only to tell me," he said bluntly.

Sally pushed the yellow hair back from her forehead.

"Thank you. I'm not a beggar," she said sullenly.

Sanderson sat staring at her, his brows frowning, his lips set in a hard line.

"Sometimes is downstairs," he submitted after a moment.

"Ugly brute!" Sally muttered.

That was the final blow. Sanderson rose to his feet.

"I shan't come again till you send for me," he said.

"You won't ever come again, then," was her retort; but when he had moved a step away from the bed she turned over as well as she could and spoke his name sharply.

"Philip!"

It was not often thats he called him by his Christian name, and his heart thumped absurdly.

"Well?" He stood still, looking back at her.

"You'd be as big a pig as me if you'd got the pain I have," she said.

"I'm so sorry, Sally."

The words were expressionless, and yet his heart was aching with pity for her. His love for her was a burning furnace, locked in his breast and with no way of escape.

"Come and sit down again," she whispered. "I want to talk to you."

He obeyed dumbly, but she was silent for some moments before she said again:

"No one but you and Poppy has been to see me? Don't the others know?"

"They all know at the Faun."

A flicker of pain crossed her face.

"A nice lot of friends they are, then!" she said with weary mirth. "Not a letter or a bunch of violets from one of them."

"I'll send you all the violets you want," Sanderson said; but he knew she wanted no flowers from him—nothing from him.

She shut her eyes, and her mouth folded into lines of pain. He watched her silently, knowing what she wanted to ask him, what she was trying to ask him.

Presently it came.

"Have you seen Josh Akers?"

"Yes."

The blue eyes snapped open.

"When?"

"Yesterday. I took your letter to him—the letter you gave the doctor."

"Oh!" It was a little cry of pain. "Yesterday—and he hasn't been to see me, nor written to me."

"He won't," Sanderson said grimly.

"What do you mean?"

Sanderson was no tactician.

"Because I gave him a black eye which will keep him indoors for a fortnight at least," he said with grim satisfaction.

Sally screamed. She tried to raise herself on her elbow, then fell back with a cry of pain, tears of rage running down her cheeks.

"You brute! You brute! You brute" she said shrilly.

A nurse came quickly across the ward.

"What is the matter? You mustn't scream like that," she said reprovingly.

Sally was sobbing hysterically.

"He's a brute! Send him away. I won't have him here. I hate him! Send him away."

"I'm just going," Sanderson said. He rose to his feet. "I'm sorry, Sally."

She beat the coverlet with her clenched hands.

"I hate you! I hate you! Go away!"

"Yes, please go," said the nurse; but there was a sympathetic gleam in her eyes as she looked at Sanderson.

"And never come back—never come back!" Sally sobbed after him.

(To be continued.)

HIGHWAY PAVING NEAR COMPLETION

Road As Far As Dale Will Be Opened On Thursday Morning.

On Thursday morning the Provincial Highway will be opened as far south as Dale, thus eliminating the detour for motorists going through to Toronto and points along the front. The paving of the Highway has been pushed ahead with great speed this summer and it is expected before the summer ends that the pavement will have reached Port Hope.

Ticker Talk
By H. O.
(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—The list on the local stock exchange displayed, generally, a stronger inclination, and gave rise to the hope that a better situation may prevail with the coming of the autumn months. Underlying conditions are such as to give reasonable basis for such an expectation. There seems to be a very little possibility now of any further drastic liquidation in the market, in face of the very strong business situation which now exists and a record crop of some 600,000,000 bushels of wheat which is about to be gleaned in Western Canada. The big institutions having placed a definite check upon inflation may be taken for granted that the situation in respect of loans is very much better than it was some weeks ago.

All things considered, the Canadian stock markets have given a good account of themselves in the face of a most trying period as regards credits. Securities having worked down to a more reasonable basis, it was only reasonable that a large amount of investment buying should have come into the market and the effect of this already has been seen in a firming in values. The peak of the demand for money for commercial purposes is still some distance away so that no release of funds for speculative purposes need be anticipated, but it is altogether likely that there will be a continuance of the investment purchases that already have been sufficient to induce a moderate upturn in values.

In brief, the situation might be summed up as follows: On one side the credit situation for speculative transactions is distinctly unfavorable; on the other hand, business and general conditions are decidedly favorable. Of the two, it is believed the latter will prevail in the long run and that securities selected in basic industries in regard to earning power; prospects and management will undoubtedly eventually sell at much higher prices.

Two strong features of the local market yesterday were Dominion Bridge and Power Corporation. Both these stocks advanced sharply, the former 75 to 81¼, and the latter from 65 to 68.

The action of Dominion Bridge was particularly impressive, the stock, after opening up 1 point over the week end, advancing to 81¾ for a gain of 6¾ points. Considering the big rise this stock has had during the last two years, it has acted well in the recent re-actions in the market. Most of the buying yesterday was reported coming from Toronto, where it was reported that a big contract, consisting of 12,000 tons of structural steel had been ratified to the Bridge Co., in connection with 28-storey building the T. Eaton Company plans to erect; this, of course, has been under consideration for some months. The action of the stock was also stimulated by reports, unofficial, but regarded as well grounded, that the shareholders may receive a total of $4 in dividends this year. So far the company has been disbursing dividends at the rate of $2.60 per share annually. A $4 rate evidently would mean either an increase in the regular rate or large extras for the remaining quarters.

The strength in power Corporation seems to be the forerunner of the publication of the annual statement of the company which is due shortly. Earnings of the company for the current fiscal year ended June 30th will likely show $5.50 to $6.00 a share on its common stock; this is a marked improvement over last year, when earnings of $1.84 on each share then outstanding was reported.

Toronto Stock Exchange Maintains Strong Tones

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Generally a strong steady tone was apparent in all issues traded in this morning on the Toronto Stock Exchange. International Nickel and Massey Harris were again the features sharing prominence with Cockshutt Plow and Brazilian Traction. Brazilian was unchanged after a brisk trading in this stock, only a half point variation being made. It closed at 63, the opening figure. International Nickel was also at the same level as at opening of trading, 101, although through the course of this morning's trading, it swung up to 101⅝, receding, however, at the close. Cockshutt was traded in to the extent of 765 shares but held firm, with no variation in price. Massey-Harris was also unchanged closing at 442 on the unlisted board. There were more gains than losses, with few exceptions all stocks showing increases of fractions, the most notable of these being Canada Dry, which was propelled 1¼ points up in active trading to 78¼. Imperial Oil gained ¾ points and Imperial Tobacco showed a net profit over its open value of ⅛.

Chicago Wheat Prices Reach Season's Lowest

CHICAGO, August 22 (Canadian Press).—With harvesting general in Canada and crop conditions there reported as ideal, wheat prices here averaged lower early to-day. The bottommost quotations yet this season were touched by wheat. Opening ¼ cent to 1 1-8 cent off, wheat later displayed considerable power to rally. Corn, oats and provisions were likewise easier, with corn starting at 1 1-8 cent decline to 1-8 cent advance, and subsequently showing a general downturn.

Opening prices: Wheat, Sept., 107 5-8; Dec. 112 5-8. Corn, Sept. 88; Dec. 72¼. Oats, Sept. 35 5-8; Dec. 36 5-8.

Further Recovery Noted In New York Stock Prices

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices made a further recovery to-day under the stimulus of pool operations in a wide variety of motor, food, drug, copper, merchandizing and public utilities shares. Railroad shares which had participated in the advance earlier in the week, turned dull on profit taking. Trading showed a moderate expansion in volume, the 2,000,000 share mark being crossed before the end of the third hour.

Money rates continued relatively firm but apparently were disregarded as market factors. Call money renewed unchanged at seven per cent and held steady at that figure throughout the early trading despite the calling of about $15,000,000 in bank loans. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

The leadership of the market was divided among Radio, General Motors and United States Steel, all of which changed hands in large volume. Radio ran up 6¾ points to 190¾. General Motors climbed more than three points to 189 and United States Steel Common advanced to 152¾ or with 1¼ points of the year's high.

was pointed out at the last annual meeting that the management intended doing some work in this section in addition to their underground development. The formation was known to be good but that was as far as their knowledge of the showing went. A strike of considerable free gold and tellurides has now been made at this point. One assay taken at a point where no gold was showing returned values of $700. Tellurides are in plenty and in describing the showing to the Financial News Bureau an official of the company stated that "It is one of the best looking surface showings found in that section of the camp."

A wire from the Pawnee-Kirkland Gold Mines advises that a new vein was cut Saturday night showing meavy mineralization. Syenite porphyry and quartz, over a seven-foot width. The vein cut at the 750-foot level is said to look good. Assays will be available shortly. It will be remembered that Pawnee was crosscutting on the 750-foot level in an effort to cut the extension of the Wood-Kirkland vein. The cut still had some distance to go when this new vein was broken into.

Larger Tonnage for Mandy Mines.

It is learned that the shaft on the Mandy Mines has reached the 525 foot level and a crosscut is being driven at the 325-foot level to reach ore indicated by drilling from the 200-foot level. The crew has been increased to fifty men. Additional drills are to be added to the one at present in operation. Main ore body at the property, estimated 100,000 tons run approximately 19 per cent copper and $5.40 in gold. The shaft is now a depth of 525 feet. Diamond drilling indicated about 100 feet of sulphide with massive chalcopyrite showing at 525 feet. Crosscutting is going on at 300, 400 and 500-foot levels. The ore body encountered in the crosscuts is a new body and while not rich as the original high grade will make commercial ore and is a decided asset.

Mining Briefs
A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 22. — Kirkland Premier mines, situated in the centre of Teck Township, Kirkland Lake, are officially reported to be meeting with favorable results in the diamond drilling campaign now being carried out. Mr. W. F. Empey, president, advises that drill hole No. 14 cut into ore which yielded average assays of over $10 per ton. This hole was put down about 1,000 feet east of the shaft and the ore was cut at around 900 feet depth. Mr. Empey states that four holes have been completed recently and that all cut into commercial ore, varying in widths of from four to seven feet at between 105 and 180 feet in depth. The company plans the erection of a 200-ton mill in the near future.

Percy F. Horton, mine manager of the Salmo-Malartic Mines, wires the head office in Toronto that they have encountered the heaviest mineralization to date in the "B" tunnel. The find consists of galena blend with chalcopyrite quartz. The vein said to look similar to the high grade found in the upper workings of the mine. Previous to this the "B" tunnel cut through a body of ore consisting of antimony, lead, silver, and copper. The work in "C" tunnel is officially stated to be progressing favorably, continuing in high grade galena ore.

Bidgood is about the only member of the low priced stocks which is showing any sign of life these days. Firmness in the issue is attributed to the finding of a new vein on surface at a distance of about one-half mile from their shaft site at Mud Lake. It

—JEAKINS—MACFARLANE

The marriage was solemnized at St. Aiden's Church, Toronto, by the Rev. W. Colton, of Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Macfarlane, and Thomas A. Jeakins, son of the late Mr. C. Jeakins and Mrs. Bateman, of Bedford, England. Mr. and Mrs. Jeakins will reside in Hamilton.

KYLIE—RHEBECK

The wedding was solemnized in Rochester, N.Y., on August 24th, of Elsie Christina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rhebeck of Rochester, and Joseph A. Kylie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kylie of Rogers street, Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Smith at the Church of St. Boniface. Witnesses wer Mr. and Mrs. D. Hayes. Mr. and Mrs. Kylie will live in Rochester.

McLEISH—MURCHISON

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Murchison, Glenarm, on Saturday, August 18, when their second daughter, Effie, was united in marriage to Arthur J. McLeish, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. McLeish, Peterborough. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. W. G. Smith. The bride entered the living room with her father to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Mrs. Murdoch Murchison, Oakwood.

The bride looked charming in a dress of white taffet, with closely-fitted bodice and full skirt, edged with shell pink. Her veil was arranged in cap effect with band of organce blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and baby's breath.

After a dainty buffet luncheon the happy couple left for an extended trip down the St. Lawrence. The bride's going-away ensemble was of navy and beige flat crepe, with coat, hat and shoes to match, and amber fox fur. On their return Mr. and Mrs. McLeish will reside at 312 Frederick avenue, Peterborough.

HILL—CAMPBELL.

A quiet wedding took place at two o'clock this afternoon at the Manse of Knox United Church, when Edna Laura, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Campbell, of 228 Westcott street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Fred A. Hill, of Rochester, N.Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hill, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. McDonald.

The bride wore a lovely gown of rose beige georgette with long sleeves and rounded double yoke of cream silk lace. A large pink silk flower held the draperies of the skirt. Her hat was of rose beige georgette with a band of pink. Her shoes were blonde kid with matching hose and she wore a red fox scarf and a string of pearls. Her corsage bouquet was of Ophelia roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Lillian Campbell, was in blue georegtte with matching hat of mohair, grey shoes and hose and corsage bouquet of Madam Butterfly roses.

Mr. Hugh Morton acted as best man.

Mr. Hill and his bride left later by motor for a trip to Clayton, New York, and the Thousand Islands. They will reside in Rochester, N.Y.

The bride travelled in a gown of navy georgette with tiered skirt and brilliant belt buckle ornament. She wore a small hat of black felt, black satin shoes and silk hose and coat of navy tricotine with satin scarf and cuffs of moleskin.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a purse of blonde leather, to the bridesmaid a purse of brown leather and to the best man a pair of white golf cuff links.

ing made in drifting on the 250-foot level, which was just opened last week. At this horizon the vein matter is said to be over 25 feet wide where crosscut, and well mineralized. A drift ten feet wide has been started south and channel samples across the ten feet gave $16 a ton in gold. They report a further vein uncovered on the surface about half a mile northeast of the shaft. Stripping was in progress when examined by the directors, and it appeared about three feet to the 200-foot level, is stated to be wide and in similar formation to the main vein.

QUATSINO COPPER GOLD MINES

This company has been recently formed with an authorized capital of 3,000,000 shares of $1 par value, and adjoins and interlocks with the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's property, Coast Copper, on the northerly end of Vancouver Island. The properties of the company consist of 33 claims and have an area of 980 acres, and have been well reported on by several well-known engineers. One million shares have been issued as share payment for the properties, and 500,000 are now being offered for public subscription to provide finances for extensive exploration and development work.

AMITY

Our engineer, accompanied by F. W. Scriven, managing director of the Amity Copper and Gold Mines, just returned from making an inspection of this Boston Creek property, and were decidedly pleased with recent development work. In sinking the winze from the 250 foot to the 350 foot level, the management decided to break in to ascertain how wide the vein was at the lower horizon. The first cut showed a width of 3½ feet of massive chalcopyrite and bornite, which assayed very high. In addition to this, a further 6½ feet of chalcopyrite gave assays running approximately 10 per cent copper and an additional four feet which was not considered commercial ore ran 2 per cent.

The manager, S. C. Payne, after consultation with Mr. Scriven, has decided to immediately lower the winze from the 350 foot level to the 550. All their efforts will be spent on this objective with the employment of three eight-hour shifts. Some lateral work will be done at intervals to check up widths and assays in order that shaft sinking and future mill requirements may be reasonably estimated.

AMULET

According to a wire received from Rouyn this morning, the northwest crosscut of Amulet which runs parallel and to the south of "B" ore body has been extended further northwest and is now within a few rounds of "D" ore body, approximately 400 feet northwest of the shaft. A short crosscut was put in on "B" and several rounds taken out. A test shipment of ten tons each from both "B" and "C" ore bodies is being taken out and sent to the testing laboratories of the Federal Department of Mines at Ottawa to determine the feasibility of flotation separation and value, and will also materially help towards the correct valuation of the mine's reserves. No sorting was done on the ore being shipped. It is general mine run in each case and from appearance the approximate assay from the "C" ore body would be 30 per cent. zinc and from the "B" 25 per cent zinc and 10 to 12 per cent chalcopyrite.

FINANCIAL BRIEFS

One reason for yesterday's strength in Dominion Bridge is furnished by the announcement that the company has secured a contract to supply 12,000 tons of steel for the new store being built in Toronto by the T. Eaton Company. The proposed Eaton development is of unusually large proportion, and the present order secured by Bridge is but a small part of the total that will be required. In addition to the above order it is understood that other contracts will be announced in the near future.

NO TROUBLE HERE WITH HOG GRADING

Farmers Benefit By Act

D. A. McKinnon, Local Inspector, Experiences Little Difficulty.

HOGS OF HIGH QUALITY.

Some Drovers Appear Anxious That Farmers Should Not Learn About Quality, He Says.

A number of drovers and members of the Live Stock Exchange at the Union Stock Yards, Toronto, are engaged in a determined effort to defeat the hog grading regulations in the Province of Ontario. A few weeks ago a deputation of drovers waited on the Ontario Government and presented a petition carrying about 3,00 names of farmers who desired a repeal of the regulations which some drovers are now fighting.

D. A. McKinnon, the government hog grading inspector at the Canadian Packing Company, outlined the situation in Peterborough in an interview with The Examiner.

Local Situation

"In regard to the situation locally," said Mr. McKinnon, "little or no difficulty is experienced in the enforcement of the new regulations as amended last year. Mostly all the farmers within a radius of twenty-five miles of Peterborough truck their hogs to the local plant and there they are able to secure their grade and settlement on that basis.

"However, the outside drover and shipper who market their stock through the medium of the local plant are on the whole a very good class of men who are not only interested in bringing the right class of hogs but they are also desirous that the farmer should know the particulars in regard to the quality of his shipment of hogs.

Drovers Co-operating

"These drovers are doing all possible to comply with the regulations and they furnish the necessary manifests as set forth in the regulations governing hog shipments and the difficulty experienced at some of the western stations is not experienced locally.

"It is regretable to learn," continued Mr. McKinnon, "that some of the drovers handling the farmers' products in the province of Ontario are not anxious that the farmers should learn anything relative to the shipment of hogs. They feel that the less that they know in this respect and the more that they are kept in the dark relative to the markets and quality of the livestock, the more that they will enhance their own position.

"The object behind the government in having shippers and drovers supply graders with manifests of hog shipments is that we may get in

DRIVERS TAKE RIGHT OF WAY

Motorist Says Motorists On Stop Streets Do Not Get Rights.

FORCED TO WAIT.

A prominent Peterborough motorist says he finds one serious objection to the numerous stops in this city. "They are rigidly enforced. In fact those who use the through streets insist on having the right of way whether to one's right or left and irrespective of who has got to the intersection first. They come on and on and keep one waiting indefinitely, unable to cross and blaring their horns insolently the while."

"The stop street by-laws and the provisions of the Highway Traffic Act, governing the stops on the lateral roads at intersections with provincial highways, merely requires drivers to stop their vehicles at the stop signs. Having stopped their vehicles they proceed under the right of way provisions of the act, traffic on through streets or arterial streets and highway approaches on their left giving way to them and they giving way to traffic approaching on their right.

"There is possibly no more widely entertained falacy among motorists than that stop ordinances somehow supersedes or compromises the right of way rule of the road. It does not", he declared.

COUNSEL ASKS TO HAVE TRIAL VENUE CHANGED

Says People of Parry Sound District Incensed Over Shooting.

HOBOES ARRESTED.

Thirteen Men Appear in Court To-day, Picked Off Passing Trains.

(Special to The Examiner)

PARRY SOUND, Aug. 23—Roland Hett, counsel for John Burowski, held here on a murder charge in connection with the death last Saturday of Thomas Jackson, Ferguson township farmer, who is said to have been shot by one of three alleged bandits following the robbery of a mail car, has announced he will make application for a change of venue because he contends residents of this district are incensed over the affair.

Jackson had responded to an appeal for aid from a man who said his car had gone into the ditch, and was about to pull the machine back on the road, when the alleged bandits opened fire on three men who were looking for the car which had been stolen from the Parry Sound station immediately after the arrival of the train.

Burowski, who was charged with stealing the automobile and later with murder, yesterday was remanded until Friday by Magistrate Broughton.

Thirteen alleged hoboes appeared in police court on a charge of vagrancy yesterday afternoon. These men have been picked off the bumpers of passing trains and it is supposed they were making their way west. All prisoners pleaded guilty but the crown asked for a remand of a week. Magistrate Broughton, however, refused a long remand, and the hearing was adjourned till 10:30 a.m. Friday.

The proceedings lasted less than five minutes, and the prisoners were led back to the jail.

INTERNATIONAL RING REVEALED

Recent Raid Uncovers Syndicate Operating From Coast To Coast in U.S. and Canada.

LEADERS CAPTURED.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25. — (Canadian Press.)—Prohibition officers said today that their dry raid of Tuesday when a man was shot by a Federal agent, uncovered a liquor syndicate whose activities reach from Miami, Florida to Toronto, Ontario, and from New York to Chicago.

The syndicate was revealed, they said, when the offices of the Paul Morton Construction Company in the Loop office building were raided.

Federal squads continue their raid in an attempt to capture the leaders of the syndicate which they are convinced is part of a widespread liquor ring. Last night they found two of the organization's leaders, they said but they refused to reveal their names.

One Of Finest Collections Of Old Coins Is Owned By W. F. McCarty of Lindsay

LINSDAY, Aug. 23.—In last Friday's paper there was a story about a rare collection of coins that a Canadian woman has made. This collection is eclipsed by a collection in Lindsay, for Mr. W. F. McCarty, jeweler here, has what is thought to be the largest and rarest private collection of coins and medals on the continent. Mr. McCarty has over 8,000 coins representing all the countries of the world.

Below is a list telling of just a few of his rarest coins: Julia Macea, 32 B.C.; Vitelleus, A.D. 69; Gordeanus 3rd 238, 244; Domitianus, A.D. 81 to 96; Julia Domna, B.C. 32, Septimus Serverus, A.D. 193-211; L. Verus, A.D. 161-169; Lucilla, wife of L. Verus A.D. 161-169; Faustina Sr, A.D. 138-161; Valerianus A.D. 211-217; Gallineus, A.D. 263-268; Sabina, wife of Gallineus 253-268; Constantinus 13th, A.D. 1059-1067; Antonius Rus A.D. 138-161; Constans 2nd A.D. 641-668; Philipus 1, A.D. 244-249; Gordianus 3rd, 238-244; Hadrianus 114-138; Liabina, wife of Hadrianus, 114-138; Julia Macea, mother of Severus Alexander, A.D. 13-21.

Mr. McCarty has some Bank of Montreal tokens which are rather unique. He has three one cent tokens of 1842; 16 one cent of 1844; four two cent tokens of 1842; eleven un sou (one cent) of 1837; 75 two cent of 1837 with horse and rider on one side with reverse anchor, sword and ax. He also has the first $1.00 bill issued in Lindsay in 1840 by the Bank of Montreal. Mr. McCarty has a Crombane half penny associated with the Irish Mine Company 1789, and a medal of the First Methodist Church in Canada.

STOREKEEPER CHASES BANDIT

Brockville Man Reaches For Club When Threatened With Revolver.

MAN ESCAPES.

BROCKVILLE, August 23. Canadian Press. — His stern refusal to obey a summons of "hands up," accompanied by the levelling of a revolver at him, late last night, saved T. T. Shaw, proprietor of a grocery and gasoline filling station on the outskirts of the town, the day's receipts that he had just counted as well as other property.

When Shaw turned to serve a customer who entered the shop, after 11 o'clock last night, he found himself looking down the barrel of a revolver, and ordered to hold up his hands. Instead of doing so he quietly placed the money in his pocket, and made for a stout club that he uses in the shop. This action, accompanied by shouting on the part of Shaw's son, Arthur, sent the intruder so much off his guard that he ran out of the door and disappeared.

Neither the Shaws nor the police were able to find a trace of him.

RECORD YIELD IS PREDICTED

Half Billion Bushels of Wheat Expected in Prairie Provinces.

ACREAGE LARGE.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Throughout Western Canada an unprecedented spirit of optimism prevails, with business generally reflecting an improved tone in anticipation of a record grain crop, the harvesting of which is now in full swing in the three Prairie Provinces.

With wheat alone estimated in excess of twenty-three million acres and early indications pointing to a good yield, experts who had made periodical inspection tours of Western fields, are talking of the 1928 crop ranging anywhere from 500,000,000 to 600,000,000 bushels. A crop even closely approaching these figures would constitute a record for wheat production in Canada.

Twin Dollar Days To-morrow and Saturday

The Greatest Shopping Event Yet Attempted in Peterborough.

The largest list of merchants to get together for a Dollar Day in Peterborough has been organized for the purpose of giving residents of the city and district surrounding the greatest range of stores and the best values yet for the Twin Dolair Days to-morrow and Saturday, the first twin summer Dolair Days in Peterborough's history. A number of large daylight baloons will be floated over the city Friday morning. On each is a tag from nine Peterborough merchants and the finder of the tag can get it redemed on presentation at the store named. The Examiner is giving a five dollar prize to the person who gets the balloons that travels the greatest distance.

Entertain Your Friends Peterborough Fair Week

Many residents of Peterborough formerly lived in the district within a radius of fifty miles. What better way could there be of entertaining your old friends than inviting them to come to Peterborough during Exhibition Week, September 10th to 15th inclusive.

You will be proud to show them the fine stores in Peterborough, our well-kept homes, the busy factories, and the further pleasure of visiting the best small City Exhibition in Canada.

This year it will be the finest ever produced here. This is a guaranteed statement by the Fair Directors.

Now just drop a line to your friends to spend a short holiday in Peterborough and both you and you visitors will get much pleasure from it.

Firemen Laying Hardwood Floor

That Peterborough firemen are not only preservers of property but are also constructively inclined was evidenced at the fire all this morning when a number of the men began the work of laying a new hardwood floor in the north end of the building, where the large ladder truck is kept. The flooring is of birch and will represent a long needed improvement.

NO DIFFERENCE OVER RELIGION BETWEEN PAIR

Childs Family Presbyterians and Yellands United Church.

DELAY COUNSELLED.

Parents Did Not Object To Wedding, But Wished Couple to Wait.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Aug. 23 (Special to The Examiner)).—The theory that differences in religion had anything to do with objections to the marriage of Robert Childs and Gertrude Yelland, who entered into an alleged suicide pact in which the girl died as the results of inhaling chloroform, has absolutely no foundation, the boy's mother stated emphatically this morning.

Fred Childs, the boy's father, is today confined to his bed as the result of the strain through which he has been passing since his son staggered into his home on Tuesday forenoon in a dazen condition, leaving the dead body of his sweetheart outside.

All Protestants

"Why, we are not Roman Catholics and never were, and the Yelland family are all Protestant," said Mrs. Childs. "Religion had absolutely nothing to do with it. We are all Presbyterians, and are members of Knox Presbyterian Church of Woodstock. Bob used to attend Sunday school in Chalmers Presbyterian church before it became the United church and the Yellands also belong to the Woodstock United Church. It is disgraceful that such stories should be circulated when the people here know that we are not Catholics. There is another Childs family in Woodstock which belongs to the Catholic church, on account of George Childs marrying a Catholic girl, but it is absolutely untrue that we are Catholics or that religion had anything to do with this affair."

Mrs. Childs repeated the statement made yesterday by her husband to the effect that all they had objected to was an immediate marriage. They simply wanted the young couple to wait until they were a little older.

Boy Much Better

Robert Childs is much better this morning, but is still being kept in his room and no one is allowed to see him. He is prepared to tell his full story at the inquest to-night, but until then there will be no further developments in the case, the police having been unable to find anything to contradict the first story told to them.

MAKES PROTEST AGAINST GUARDS

Cleveland Millionaire Says Cutter Rammed His Yacht in Lake Erie.

FIRED WITHOUT WARNING.

CLEVELAND, Ohio., Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—A protest against the raiding methods of Federal rum fighting fleet on Lake Erie was promised to-day by M. F. Bramley, Cleveland millionaire, who reported that his yacht, Buddy, had been fired on without warning and then rammed by a coast guard cutter.

Bramley said the cutter CG-2331 suddenly sailed out of the darkness while the Buddy was cruising last night about two miles off Edgewater beach, a Cleveland resort, flashed a blinding searchlight and then fired a shot before anyone on the Buddy realized what had happened.

The cutter next rammed the Buddy's bow a glancing blow, while a man standing on the bridge waved a revolver and shouted at the Buddy's passengers, Bramley asserted.

The cutter followed the Buddy into harbor and the Federal men made a search. A coast guard official here said they had received no report of the incident and declined to comment.

TILDEN DEFENDS TENNIS ARTICLES

Says They Were Not News Stories, But Comment On Players.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—William Tilden, in his written defence to be presented to the United States Lawn Tennis Association to-morrow, when charges of violation of the amateur player writer rule against him are heard, denies that the articles he wrote at Wimbledon were anything but comment. They were not written, he said, until three days after the tournament finished, and made no effort to "cover the games as newspapermen would, merely commenting on the showing of the players.

Will Ship "Whale" Back To Italy

MONTREAL, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Captain Frank Courtney, who with Elwood B. Hosmer, attempted a trans-Atlantic flight from Lisbon to New York via the Azores and descended in the ocean on August 1 while en route to Newfoundland, has returned to New York, and his Dornier-Napier flying boat, The Whale, leave to-day for Italy aboard the freighter Valprato.

The ship rescued The Whale in mid-Atlantic and brought it to Montreal on Monday, when it was unloaded and transferred to a local airplane plant for inspection and survey. Based on the results of reports, it was decided to send the machine back to the Dornier Aircraft Works on the River Arno, near Pisa.

Villagers Report Plane

People of Two Towns Saw It Pass Over On Sunday Morning.

TRAVELLING EAST.

Plane Came So Low That Crew Could Be Seen Scanning Land With Glasses.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press)—The Greenland administration has received a message from the sheriff of South Greenland stating that an airplane, believed to be the Greater Rockford, manned by Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, was sighted on Sunday morning along the Southwest coast of Greenland.

The message received by Greenland administration was as follows:

"Machine reported absolutely without doubt from Fiskenaesset. The whole place, as well as Lichtenfels, observed the machine Sunday morning at 10:30 coming high from the north, northwest and descending over Fiskenaesset.

"The crew were clearly seen looking over the area through binoculars. Afterwards the machine turned eastward. The Greenlanders' statemens are absolutely trustworthy as they described the sound of the engine and gave the National marks of the machine."

The message from the sheriff added that two motor boats would be sent out immediately to resume the search for the missing airmen in view of the new information available.

EUROPEAN STATESMEN PREPARE FOR SIGNING OF PEACE TREATY

Breaking Up Annual Holidays To Be in Paris Next Week.

PREPARE WELCOME.

PARIS, France, August. 23. — (Canadian Press). — European Statesmen and diplomats, especially those connected with the foreign departments of the various countries, began breaking up their annual August holidays yesterday to get ready for the signing here next Monday of the multi-lateral pact for the outlawry of war as a national policy.

The members of the French cabinet, who had expected to spend the entire month in the country, were back in Paris last night. They had been summoned for a special meeting of the ministry which is to be held to-day. They are to discuss details of the signing ceremony and also of the other events planned to make the visiting dignitaries feel at home as well as honored.

Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada and Frank B. Kellog, United States Secretary of State, are travelling on the same steamer and will be escorted to Paris from Havre on a special train.

Here they will be greeted ceremoniously at the railway station by Aristide Briand, foreign minister of France, and other high officials.

The actual signing of the treaty and the other official affairs that go with it, will all be carried out on a big scale but with settings calculated to harmonize with democratic simplicity.

California In Distress About Cactus Plants

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 23.—The sweet tooth of the nation is ruining California's desert scenery, says Col. Charles B. Wing, state director of parks. Cactus bushes are being stripped to provide material for a cactus candy. Col. Wing urges that a portion of the California desert be set aside as a state park so natural scenery may be preserved.

STRIP TICKETS FOR EXHIBITON

Are Not Good On Grand Stand —Are Admission Tickets Only.

SEPARATE TICKETS.

In last night's Examiner an editorial was given on Hon. Mr. Martin's visit to the Fair in which it stated that admission tickets could be used on the grand stand. This was a mistake, as admission or strip tickets are only good as admission tickets, and grand stand tickets must be purchased separately when they are offered for sale.

ROYAL BANK OF CANADA OFFERS CASH PRIZE TO CHEESE MAKERS

Dairy Inspector Pleased With Condition of Factories in Stirling District.

THRESHING STARTED.

(Examiner Correspondence).

STIRLING, Aug. 23.—G. H. Barr, Provincial inspector of dairying, was in this district this week, and accompanied C. P. Linn in a visit to the cheese factories, of which he is the instructor. The Royal Bank is offering a special prize to cheesemakers this year, the scoring is 75 points for the cheese, 15 for the inside of the factory and 10 for the outside of buildings and grounds. Mr. Barr was greatly pleased with the makers, in the excellent sanitary condition which he found the most of the factories, also the product they were turning out, and the tidy appearance of the surroundings outside.

Road Gang Move.

The county road gang under H. Dafoe pulled up stakes and moved their tent and cookhouse to Foxboro on Wednesday morning, after being here nearly three months.

Threshing is under way in some sections, with good yields reported. Harry Heath had a yield of 100 bushels of fall wheat in an hour and ten minutes' threshing. The help was somewhat short-handed or the yield would have been greater.

The agricultural office has been a busy place for the past week. Exhibits of grain and other products of the farm were being gotten ready for the Canadian National Exhibition.

C. I. Guy left Tuesday morning with a truck load of the exhibits from this office and other exhibits he was to get at Belleville.

Leaves Baby Carraige To Rescue Two Boys

MENASHA, Wis., Aug. 23.—Two boys, one six, the other five, owe their lives to an unknown man. The boys, Richard and Fred, sons of Carl Landskron, were plunged into deep water in the Fox River when a plank on a bridge on which they were sitting gave way. A man pushing a baby carriage across the bridge saw their plight and dove after them. He dragged both from the water and then left the scene without revealing his identity.

DEVELOPMENT SHOWN OF NEW DISEASE

GENEVA, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Development of a dread sleping sickness disease, known to medicine as "encephalitis lethargica," as the result of vaccination to prevent other diseases, was brought to the attention of the League of Nations health committee's smallpox and vaccination commission yesterday.

Several countries, particularly England and the Netherlands, have notified the League of occasional cases where vaccination has engendered sleeping sickness. In the Netherlands the condition was so bad that compulsory vaccination in the Public schools has been suspended for a year.

MOVING POLES OFF ROADWAY

Telephone Linemen Put Them Back Along Edge of Sidewalk.

ROAD WIDENED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23.—Workmen of Bell Telephone Company began yesterday the work of moving the poles on Ranny Street that have been considered too far out from the sidewalk. This condition arose when the open ditch which used to flow along the east side of the street was tiled and filled this summer. The poles were formerly on the edge of the ditch next to the road. Since the drain has been tiled, they are several feet further out on the travelled portion of the street and are considered dangerous. The poles are being replaced with new ones which will be set close to the side walk. The work will require several days in order that the service may not be interrupted.

CAMPBELLFORD UPPER SCHOOL RESULTS GIVEN

Prize Winner Announced For Scholarship Awarded By Literary Society.

MANY SUCCESSFUL.

Miss Ackerman Has Represented School in District Oratory Contests.

(Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23.—Each year the Literary Society of the Campbellford High school awards a scholarship to the pupils who gains the highest standing in any five of the Upper School departmental papers. This year, Margery Ackerman will receive the honors. This fact was established when the results of the departmental examinations in the upper school were received yesterday. Miss Ackerman is also an orator of some note, having twice won the local oratorical contests and thus been one to represent the local instiution in the district contests which are held each year under the patronage of the Toronto Star.

While the Upper School does not boast of as high a percentage of successful pupils as was the case in the lower school, the principal and his staff are being congratulated on the remarkable success of the pupils of this grade. Eight-two per cent. of the applicants were successful. This is considered quite satisfactory generally.

The results of the successful pupils are:

WILL PROCLAIM AHMED ZOGU, RULER OF ALBANIA

TIRANA, Albania, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Reports that the third constituent assembly of Albania is to proclaim Ahmed Zogu ruler of the country when it meets next Saturday, were officially confirmed to the Associated Press yesterday. The proclamation probably will be made in the form of a resolution.

In order to show that the change is being effected with freedom from foreign influence, mass demonstrations have been staged in all parts of the country. Several of these, including one in the capital, took place three days ago. Others were held yesterday in Durazzo, Scutari, Valona, Kavaja and Dosova.

At each of these demonstrations there has been declared adopted a mass resolution favoring the change from a republic to a monarchy and offering the throne to President Ahmed Zogu. Replying to these, the President has expressed his thanks and has said that if the people wished Albania to become a kingdom, he would not refuse the throne. He has added that he would await the voice of the assembly Saturday before making formal reply.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE ENTERTAINED

Sir Edward and Lady Kemp Arrange Picnic at Summer Home.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HARVEY, August 23.—The school children of S.S. No. 8, were very pleasantly entertained by Lady Kemp on Wednesday afternoon at her summer home, Mississquoi Park.

The program began with a real jolly splash at the bathing beach, and those who could not swim seemed to enjoy the frolic fully as much as those who could do more scientific manoeuvring. Following the bathing refreshing drinks were served, and a number of races were run off, prizes being presented by Lady Kmp to the winners. Later a number of games were played and the children did ample justice to the abundance of refreshments which were served.

Sir Edward and Lady Kemp joined the children in their blithesome spirit which added a great deal to the atmosphere of the day. As the sun was setting, three hearty cheers were given to the host and hostess by the children, and Sir Edward responded in a very humorous manner. The trustees of the school wish to thank Sir Edward and Lady Kemp for the splendid outing.

PARISH SOCIAL GREAT SUCCESS

Hundreds of People Enjoy Supper and Patronize Games and Booths.

MANY WILLING WORKERS.

The annual social of St. Martin's parish, Ennismore, of which Rev. J. McAuley is pastor, was accounted for yesterday with the usual splendid attendance which characterizes this event in the life of the prosperous island parish. Coming from the city, the district and the Chemong colony, hundreds of people patronized the excellent fowl supper which was served in the parish hall and also on the lawn outside, and thronged the grounds later for the attractions of the evening.

The hall, where the white clothed tables were laden with bountiful and sumptuous home-made delicacies, was decorated with stareamers of pink and white and the tables were centred by vases of flowers, while the grounds were illuminated by electric lights and the booths were arranged with blue and white paper decorations and rows of Japanese lanterns.

All evening, the crowd gathered about the refreshment booths, the "Bingo" game and the wheel, where fancy articles of all kinds were disposed of, under the energetic supervision of Messrs. Thomas Turcotte and Thomas Deforge.

In the afternoon, a softball game was in progress between teams from Downeyville and Ennismore, the affair ending with a score of 10-3 in favor of the former. The line-up for Downeyville was composed as follows: Ray Morissey, catcher; Austin Scully, pitcher; James Carroll, 1st base; Gerald O'Neill, 2nd base; Frank Harrington, 3rd base; Dan Carroll, short stop; Albert Herlihey, left field; Joe Shine, right field; Robt. Sullican, centre field; Joe Corbett, manager. For Ennismore the players were: Clinton Young, catcher; Tom Harrington, pitcher; Jim Gifford, 1st base; Bill Harrington, 2nd base; M. J. Cavanagh, 3rd base; Emmet Guiry, short stop; Tom Gifford, left field; Ignatii Garvey, right field; Lorne McAuliffe, centre, field; P. J. Scollard, manager.

Officiating at the door and for the sale of supper tickets were Messrs. Edward Sullivan, Jack Sullivan, D. Scollard, Joseph Cadigan, Martin Doran, William Scollard, John P. Flood, James Killen and Jack Cadigan.

In charge of the "Bingo" game were Messrs. Leo Skipworth, Basil McIntyre, Guy Mills and Jack Murphy.

The sale of tobacco and chocolates was looked after by Messrs. H. Flood, M. J. Cavaangh, Edward Donoghue, William Cavanagh and John J. Scollard.

In the fancy work booth, which was in charge of Mrs. Frank Cavanagh, were the Misses Margaret Holland, Mary Flood, Eugenie Gifford, Nellie Conway and Carmel Doran.

The ice cream booth was in charge of Miss Mary Twomey, with assistants in the Misses Eileen Young and Rita Cavanagh and Messrs. James Gifford and Hubert Flood.

The General Committee had Mrs. Patrick Cadigan as convenor, assisted by Mesdames Dan. Holland,

CROPS DAMAGED DURING STORM

Barley, Buckwheat, Corn and Hay Blown Down By Wind.

AT BAILIEBORO.

BAILIEBORO, Aug. 23.—The heavy wind storm on Tuesday afternoon caused a great deal of damage in this vicinity. There was not a great deal of rain with the storm, only about an inch of rainfall, but the severe wind uprooted many large trees, blew many limbs across the lanes and roads.

The damage done to the standing crops was also considerable. The major oprtion of the crops are now out and in stook, but the late barley, buckwheat, corn and hay was blown down very flat.

The storm has delayed harvest and field threshing at least for a couple of days.

Personals.

GOV. SMITH GIVES VIEWS ON CAMPAIGN

Accepts Democratic Presidential Nomination in Assembly Chamber at Albany.

HAS FULL CONFIDENCE.

Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, Is Appointed Official Adviser.

Assembly Chamber Albany, N. Y., August 23. Canadian Press. — Back again in the executive hall where years ago he received a political schooling, Governor Smith last night accepted the Democratic presidential nomination.

Rain had forced a last minute shift in arrangements for his notification. The ceremony which was to have taken place outdoors was shifted to the assembly chamber, and there he outlined his views on campaign issues.

The task of officially advising Gov. Smith fell to Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, who told the nominee that he had been made "commander in chief" of the hosts of Democracy with full confidence that you will carry our banner to victory."

There was a wild outburst when near the end of his speech Senator Pitman declared that in studying the qualifications of the New York Governor for leadership the Democrats "saw a happy man, a Liberal man, of broad vision, a man of courage without intolerance, prejudice or hatred; a man morally and mentally honest, who has the courage to express and act upon his convictions; a man who loves his country, his fellowman, his family, and his God."

C.G.E. COMPANY GARDENS.

The Canadian General Electric Company has vastly improved the appearance of the corner of Park, Rubidge and Rink streets. Not only has the company developed a lawn with flower-beds and trees in fronts of its office building, but across Park street it is making another beauty spot under the elms that have been too long companioned by burdocks.

A smart looking brick garage has been built contiguous to the long wooden garage erected a year or so ago, and a lawn has been prepared between it and the sidewalk. The ground has been raised and levelled, temporary guard wires and notices set up, and the public have been co-operating by keeping off the sprouting grass. The City Council and the C.G.E. Company have transformed the junction of Park and Rubidge streets by widening, paving and properly lighting it, and the pleasing and efficient result of their plans and effort is generally appreciated.

COUNCILS AND POWER.

There is no reason for doubting the sincerity of the City Council in its expressed intention of investigating the available remnant of water powers near Peterborough. But should there be among members of the Council a disposition of prejudice instead of openmindedness, of timidity and spiritlessness instead of resolution, such members should be reminded of their predecessors who grabbed at a shadow and missed most of the substance, who were beguiled and deluded by catch phrases such as "power at cost," "hydro-electric" and other tinselled generalities.

That other Council was taken up on to a high mountain and offered a glittering domain that proved scarcely more than a mirage. In another sense they considered themselves at a fork in the municipal road and they made the wrong turn. Those who attempted to question their decisions, by which they were committing this city and the property investments of its people to a "cheap power" policy, were denounced as civic traitors, or even worse, stupid laggards and reactionaries.

The Council is still with us, although its personnel has changed, possibly, also, its heart. Other facts seem to have changed, too. For instance, the late Sir Adam Beck said to the people of Peterborough: "If power can be supplied in Elgin County at $30 or $35 a horse power, Peterborough can be supplied for $15."

And inferentially, at any rate, the prospect of even a lower price than $15 a horse power was suggested in Sir Adam's words: "The Hydro Commission only permit the surplus (from the sale of power) to be used in the reduction of rates to the power users."

Mr. R. R. Hall, in his correspondence on the question of local power charges, insists that the price has not been reduced, but has been considerably increased. Certainly, the Orillia and Campbellford town power plants, by discounts and grants to the Municipal Councils, apart from actual lowered rates, have proved to be enviable public assets.

The vote in Peterborough on the Hydro-Electric bylaw in 1913 was 1,664 to 160. How many members of the Council believe that in the light of our experience and that of some of our neighbours such a majority as 1,504 would have been rolled up?

Here is what The Examiner had to say about the result of the balloting: "In regard to the Hydro-Electric bylaw, there hardly seems to have been a difference of opinion—the people were carried away by its appeal. Nevertheless, The Examiner is still of the opinion that we were so well situated in regard to supply of electric energy that it was hardly worth while for the people, for the problematical advantages promised, to incur a financial responsibility of $400,000 or $500,000 to secure advantages which, to justify their acquirement, must be vastly superior to those already available to us, which would have cost no outlay. However, if the people decide to try the Hydro-Electric experiment with the attendant financial obligations, they are the masters, but it would not be considered good business for a man to mortgage his home to secure something which he otherwise had at his disposal, without cost for provision."

Will the Council profit by the lessons of the past? It may, if its members are determined to exercise their intelligence and courage.

In these recollections it is, of course, evident that the members of the present Council are in no way responsible for the acts of previous Councils, but the experience this city has acquired from the course of past Councils should point to a sure and certain direction in the future.

PETERBOROUGH IN 1833.

A description of the Peterborough of 1833 as recorded in the letters of John Langton published under the title, "Early Days in Upper Canada," should be of special interest to such patriarchs as Frank Dobbin and John Harper, whose recollections of the sixties and later have furnished us glimpses of the generations immediately preceding our own.

John Langton settled on Sturgeon Lake, near Fenelon Falls, and his route to Peterborough was by water to Chemong and thence overland through Smith Township. On July 22, 1833, he jolted over thirteen miles of mud and stumps from Cobourg to Rice Lake, and then came by steamer to Peterborough, "where having gone to the wrong hotel, I occupied one eleventh of seven beds."

John Langton says Peterborough was then the only inland town in Canada, and "from its being the centre of an immense internal navigation its inhabitants would fain believe that it will one day become the capital of the Province."

"After breakfast (July 23) I called on Col. Brown, who showed me the lions and introduced me to several gentlemen of the place; in the evening I drank tea there and met ladies for the first time since leaving Liverpool. We walked up to Mr. Stuart's place, a couple of miles up the river. He was the first settler in the neighborhood about twelve years ago, before Peterborough was thought of and when it was two or three hard days' journey from Cobourg through the forest."

The editor of the letters, W. A. Langton, says this was evidently Thomas Alexander Stewart.

In August, 1833, Peterborough had about 2,000 inhabitants and "near thirty genteel families within visiting distance; but you will be more surprised to find that in 1825 scarcely a dozen white men had ever trodden the woods where it stands."

Campbeltown was apparently a landmark on the Otonabee River nearly one hundred years ago. The writer says: "I take shame to myself for having omitted to mention that, at the two principal bends of the river there are two cities, Cambleton and Howard; the one consisting of a shanty, and the other of a log house without windows."

The editor of the book identifies Cambleton as Campbellford, but is manifestly mistaken, as the journey lay directly across Rice Lake and up the Otonabee River. Howard may have been near the Bensfort bridge. Lakefield was known as Selby and Bobcaygeon was Bobcajewonunk.

Of Peterborough real estate in 1833 John Langton wrote as follows: "House rent is enormously dear here; a house which costs £100, built on a town lot of half an acre costing about £25, would be the cheapest house in Peterborough if it did not bring a rent of £25, besides the annually increasing value of the town lot itself. Imagine in Peterborough, which in 1825 was an Indian encampment, land selling at four shillings (4/-) per square foot, which about a quarter of an acre did this year."

Many references to Mossum Boyd, Major Hamilton, Jas. W. Dunsford, Robert Dennistoun, afterwards Peterborough County judge, who in 1839 married one of Major Hamilton's daughters, James Wallis, Commander Robert Millar Forbes, R.N., Billy McQue, an Indian at Chemong, Purdy's Mills, and many other somehow familiar names appear frequently in these interesting pages.

IN CANADA.

The Hon. Charles Avery Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, put the case clearly when, in an address to a number of English boys and girls, now touring Canada, he said: "We are willing to help those who come here, to help themselves, but unless a Britisher comes here with the desire to stand on his own feet, we prefer that you keep him. Please convey to the people of the Old Land, to any man or woman imbued with the desire to better their own lot, with sufficient backbone to stand on their own feet, to accept co-operation but not to lean, that Canada offers boundless opportunities as ever before."

Mr. Dunning was born in England. He came to Canada as a lad. He had no special opportunities, no particular "pull," and only an elementary education. While still in his thirties he became Premier of the great Province of Saskatchewan. Shortly after he had turned 40 he entered the Federal Ministry at Ottawa, taking the important portfolio of Railways and Canals.

The Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration in the King Cabinet, offers a similar example. Mr. Forke was born in Scotland. He came to Canada in his 'teens. He worked hard and prospered and was eventually elected to Parliament. He became leader of the Progressive party in the House of Commons. Eventually he accepted Mr. King's invitation to enter the Cabinet. To-day, as Minister of Immigration, he is charged with the task of inducing other Old Country boys and girls, men and women, to follow his own early example.

The Hon. R. A. Hoey, Minister of Education in the Bracken Government in Manitoba, is a third striking instance of how this sort of thing works out. Mr. Hoey is an Irishman. He even broke the Canadian immigration regulations to enter this country, and lived to tell about it later at a session of the Canadian House of Commons of which he was a member until a year or so ago. Mr. Hoey is one of Canada's outstanding public men. He came to Canada with nothing and he made good. He got in despite regulations that might have kept him out. It is a good thing for Canada that he got in, because he is the kind of a citizen that Canada likes to have.

One might go on all day enumerating cases of this kind in this country and across the line. The Hon. James J. Davis, for instance, who is Secretary of Labor in the American Government, is a native of Wales. He found his opportunity in America. There are countless others like him.

Newcomers can make good in Canada, as they made good in the United States, if they are ambitious, willing to work hard and willing to stand on their own feet. There is positively no limit to what a man can accomplish on this continent. Mr. Dunning, Mr. Forke, Mr. Hoey and the others have shown this. They succeeded because they wanted to succeed. Anyone else with the same amount of spirit, the same ambition, the same willingness to adjust himself to new circumstances and the same propensity to work, can make good in Canada. The opportunities are here. It is merely a matter of grasping them.

Canada is a country for workers, but it is not a country for fault-finders or those who feel that they are entitled to lean on others.—Border Cities Star.

HE'S HOT AND KNOWS IT

A woman, in sultry weather, looks cool; she may feel torrid, but in a light dress, short at top and bottom, she looks as comfortable as a sailboat in a ten-mile breeze. But a man with a collar and tie binding his neck, and long trousers flapping about his ankles, not only looks hot, but is hot and knows it.—Detroit News.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

I was much pained to read your editorial of Monday on The Golden Rule. That rule is ancient enough as you say but it long ago suffered its philosophic overthrow. The Golden Rule is "Do unto others as you would that they would do unto you." This rule is a bad one. It is in fact vicious. Take an example. If you were in gaol you would like others to let you out. If, therefore, you proceed to try to let people out of gaol simply because if you were in gaol you would like them to let you out, you would do a great wrong and in the end overthrow law and order. Write another article and say in it you are sorry and that the Golden Rule should be "Do unto others as you should wish that they would do unto you under the same or similar condition."

This is the silly season it is true but that is no excuse.

thRe The Proposed Nicholls Hospital Extension

Dear Sir:

It would seem that the first duty of our mayor and city council, is, to have placed before them, for public discussion, a complete copy of the conditions of the Nicholls Hospital bequest, and copies of any supplementary legal documents pertaining thereto, and that these be published in tract form for public distribution, and, then, that the citizens be asked to vote on the question of whether they will, or will not, accept the conditions, and, before they are asked to commit themselves in approving the expenditure of large sums of money for any extensions which must, necessarily, abide by those conditions of the bequest and supplementary legal documents pertaining thereto.

The question also arises, what is the combined normal and also the cambined emergency capacity of our three public hospitals, viz: Nicholls Hospital, Saint Joseph's Hospital and the Isolation Hospital, and, is this joint capacity sufficient for our needs, and further, how does it compare with generally accepted accommodation for a city of our size, with similar industrial rating.

Yours truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths.—3:3-4.

Our Father, Thou hast given us the morning light so sweet to our eyes; give us also, we pray, Thee, the morning blessing which shall fill the whole day with its sweetness and beauty.

May all the duties of the day, however distasteful in themselves, become a delight as we hear Thy voice calling us to go forward fearlessly into the heart of them, in the assurance that as shall find Thee waiting for us there, ready to give us the strength we need.

May all our relationships within and without this home be consecrated by the touch of Thy hand, by which all that is base, belittling and untrue shall be removed and destroyed.

When the night comes, may we be able to look back upon a day in which the burdens of others have been lightened, and in which hearts that have lost hope have been filled with new faith in God and His controlling love. In Christ's name we ask it.

—Charles Wood, D.D., Washington, D.C.

A Thought

TRUE NOBILITY

A spirit of universal goodwill, a generous heart, an open hand will place you in the ranks of the highest nobility. But if you are exclusive, if your hand is kept closed except when pried open by shame or stout appeal, if you go about in a spirit of caution and reserve and secret disdain of all but your set, you are out of our high category; neither money, nor birth, nor rank can smuggle you in.—Munger.

ECZEMA IN RASH ON HANDS

Troubled For Three Years. Healed by Cuticura.

"I was troubled with eczema on my hands for three years. It appeared in a rash and then formed blisters. It troubled me much worse in winter so I could hardly put my hands in water or be near heat. My hands were terribly inflamed and disfigured. I had to wear old gloves to keep from scratching.

"I saw a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and sent for a free sample. I got relief from it so I bought more and after I had used them for three months I was healed." (Signed) Miss Beatrice Aiken, Highwater, Que.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, August 23. — Prices were slightly higher on calves and hogs with other stock mostly unchanged on the live stock exchange at the Union stock yards yesterday morning. Calvess howed an advance of 50c on the week's prices, while hogs held steady at Tuesday's quarter advance.

On the cattle market there were 800 lower grade cattle left over from Tuesday, the effect of these being slightly lessened by Tuesday's small receipts of but 355 cattle. Good butchers were scarce and trade slow on common grades, a condition which started last week, and is expected to last for some time. Stockers and feedrs were active at from $7.25 to $9.75 a hundred.

Receipts were: Cattle, 355; calves, 328; hogs, 1010; sheep, 1056.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Following early weakness wheat bounded upward at the close of yesterday's market owing to predictions of frost in the Canadian West, and final quotations were from 1¼c to 1¼c higher than Tuesday's close. October was $1.09¾, December $1.10¾ bid, and May at $1.16¾ bid.

Frost predictions came as a surprise in view of the sharply higher temperatures prevailing in the West. Maximums Tuesday were in the eighties and minimums were far above the frost line.

Indications point to a large demand for Canadian grain from European countries, according to Broomhall's cable, which points out that at present extreme weakness in world's wheat prices is restricting business. The cable continues: "Heavy supplies of wheat in the United States and the assurance of a bumper crop in Canada are depressing features in the world's wheat situation. Yields of wheat in Europe are slightly larger than a year ago and the quality considerably better, so that the demand will be principally for the lower grades of foreign wheat at the cheapest price."

Cables from England to the Grain Exchange here indicated that Number 3 Manitoba grades were finding favor with buyers abroad. Other grades of old crop wheat are scarce. New crop wheat is not yet moving, only two cars having been inspected by the Government so far. One car graded No. 1 Northern and the other Number 2 Northern.

Wheat pool officials declared that the pool carry over this year would not be any larger than that of last year, which was approximately ten million bushels, with a possibility that it would be considerably less than that figure. They pointed out that last year's crop, despite the damaged condition of a large portion of it had been handled in a capable and efficient manner.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand $4.84¾ to 13-16.
Cables $4.85 1-16 to 3-16.

CHAPTER XLVIII

Home at Last.

There was a little silence, then Gaunt asked very quietly:

"What do you mean, Jennifer?"

"That we can't be married. You know we can't."

He did not speak for some moments, then he said—

"But you are willing to face that now. You love me well enough to face it at last, Jennifer?"

"Yes, but . . ." He made her look up.

"Say it with your eyes on mine. Swear that you will never leave me again, no matter what we have to suffer."

"I swear it," said Jennifer, but the tears were wet on her cheeks, and suddenly she cried out: "You will never think any the worse of me, will you? I am so afraid . . ." And Gaunt answered:

"I will love you as I have always loved you, to the end of time and eternity."

She sat up, pushing him gently from her.

"It must be late. I ought to go back!" She rose to her feet swaying unsteadily "I haven't slept very well lately," she apologized, laughing a little. "But it will be all right to-night."

"Because you have seen me again?"

"Because I know you still love me."

"Oh, my darling"

Gaunt took her face between his hands and laid his lips on her in a long kiss. "Mine at last, and for ever," he whispered passionately.

"And if you ever get tired of me?" Jennifer faltered.

"Jennifer!"

"I have so often thought of it," she told him painfully. "I have so often dreaded it, and yet I knew if you took me back, and even if it lasted only a little time, and then you got tired of me, it would be so well worth while."

"Is that what you still think, even now? That some day I shall be tired of you?"

Jennifer tried to answer, but her lips trembled too much, and Guant urged again, "Is that what you still think?"

"I shall always be afraid," she whispered at last. "You see, dear, it's not as if we can really belong to one another."

"You and I have always belonged to one another."

"In my heart I have always belonged to you! I always shall."

"You are very confident of yourself, but not of me, Jennifer," he told her sadly.

She clung to him silently. Even in her great happiness she was afraid. The dread of the future was still in her heart and would always be there. The convictions of her youth and upbringing still remained with her and taught her that she would know no real or lasting happiness unless she could be Gaunt's wife.

But that was only a dream—a dear dream—the fulfillment of which could never be.

Gaunt took his arms away from her and stood back a step.

"How long were you away from England, Jennifer?"

"Nearly four months. I came back at the beginning of January."

"Then for six months you have heard nothing of me, nothing at all?"

She shook her head, her eyes misty again.

"But I saw you once, going into a house in Bedford Square with Lady Edith." She caught her breath on a sob. "It was nearly too much for me, Nicholas. You don't know how nearly I came to you that night," she told him brokenly.

She saw the dark blood that flooded his face, and the sudden clenching of his hands, and her heart began to beat fast with nameless apprehension.

Then Gaunt said in a strange hoarse voice:

"How soon will you marry me, Jennifer?"

Jennifer's lips parted, but no words came, and Gaunt asked again: "How soon will you marry me, Jennifer?"

"Marry you?" She began to cry, the tears running weakly down her cheeks.

"You are unkind . . . it hurts me . . . Oh, how can you be so unkind? You know I can never marry you. You know—"

Gaunt broke in roughly:

"You say you were out of London nearly four months." He drew a harsh breath and went on: "Edith died in December."

There was a tragic silence, then he cried out sharply: "Jennifer! Jennifer!" and caught her as she fell.

He laid her down on the couch and knelt beside her, chafing her hands and brokenly calling her name, but it seemed an eternity till the color came back to her cheeks, and she opened her eyes. She looked so ill! It almost broke Gaunt's heart to see the change in her now she was no longer animated and doing her best to hide from him all she had suffered.

He held her hands to his lips, kissing them again and again.

"Forgive me, my dear, forgive me. At first I thought you had come back because you knew, and that hurt me. I wanted you to love me well enough for us to face life together even if we could not be married. Perhaps you'll hate me for that, Jennifer; but I can't help it. I look at things differently to you. I thought, when you sent me away that last time, it was because you did not love me well enough to face what you knew we should have to face. Only tonight, when you came in, Winter and I were talking of you. He knows how I've searched for you—he knows that I've been half mad with the dread that I might never see you again."

Jennifer tried to speak, but she could find no words; her happiness was too great.

An hour ago her world had been empty, but now it was full to overflowing. She had come to Gaunt not daring to hope for anything, and everything had been given to her. It was almost more than she could bear. To be his wife . . . it was too wonderful that the dream had come true.

And presently Gaunt sent for his car and took her back to her dreary lodging.

She laughed at his dismay when he saw where she had lived.

"What does it matter? I shall be perfectly happy anywhere now."

He held her to his heart.

"It is the last time I shall say good night to you, Jennifer. We shall be married to-morrow."

She made one weak protest.

"Nicholas, isn't it too soon after . . ."

"Too soon! Do you know how many years I've waited for you?"

"And I for you!" said Jennifer.

He waited while she slipped quietly into the shabby house, waited till he saw the light in the window which she had told him was hers, then he drove away down the deserted street, feeling a boy again. And Jennifer lay in her hard little bed and tried to convince herself that her happiness was real, tried to feel sorry for Edith Gaunt, tried to feel sorry for everyone in the world who had not found the door to an earthly heaven as she had. But there was no room in her heart for anything but joy. The man she loved was her own, her very own at last.

Her cheeks burned in the darkness as for one wild moment she almost wished Edith were still alive so that she could indeed have shown him how well she really loved him; then she took herself severely to task.

"I've got everything I want in the world. I ought to have remembered that the darkest hour is always just before the dawn," Jennifer told herself, and wondered why she had ever forgotten it.

And when at last she fell asleep with the memory of Gaunt's kisses on her lips, and the strong clasp of his arms about her, the darkness outside was already slipping away, and through the cheap cotton blind at the window the first fair streak of daylight pushed its way into the room.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's roommate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

VII—BAD NEWS

Sanderson went out of the ward and downstairs to where Sometimes was still faithfully keeping guard over his hat. He knew he had behaved like a clumsy fool, and he cursed himself for it. Why was it that when he was with Sally he always seemed to do and say the wrong thing? he asked himself bitterly. No wonder she hated him. Well, he would take her at her word; he would not go back unless she sent for him. Perhaps then she would be sorry; perhaps then—

"Not she!" he said aloud as he strode away down the street with the dog capering around him. "Not she! She wouldn't care a damn if she never set eyes on me again."

But for a week he kept away from the hospital, although every morning he rang up to inquire how Sally was.

The news he received was never satisfactory, and he always had the uncomfortable conviction that the message across the 'phone was just an ordinary formula handed out to all inquirers, but for once in his life pride stood between him and Sally.

She had said that she hated him and did not wish to see him again. Well, he would take her at her word. And then, on the eighth day, Poppy called to see him. She came quite early in the morning, which was unusual for her, because as a rule she stayed in bed until lunch-time, unless there was some very exciting reason for getting up earlier, and he heard her excited voice arguing with Mrs. Kiff in the doorway before she was admitted. Sanderson was in his shirt-sleeves, shaving, but as instinct told him that Poppy's visit must have something to do with Sally Lingfield, he only waited to wash the lather from his chin and snatch up a dressing-gown before he went to join her in the sitting-room.

The fire had just been laid, and its sticks were crackling sulkily in the grate, and outside in the street the world looked grey and depressing. Poppy was wrapped in a pretentious coat of cheap fur, and her lips were more scarlet than usual.

"You're a nice one!" was her sarcastic greeting.

"What do you mean?"

Sanderson stooped to throw a lump of coal on to the fire, thereby almost entirely extinguishing it.

"What I say," she answered rudely. "I thought you were going to look after Sally and see she had all she wanted. Isn't it your fault she's where she is now?"

"Well?"

"Well! You haven't been near her for a week; nobody has—not even that ——Josh!" She called Akers a foul word. "She might die for all any of you pigs care! It's all right when a girl's well and about, but when she's down on her luck——"

Sanderson turned round.

"You can cut that out," he said bluntly. "If you've come here to abuse me, you can clear off. If there's anything the matter with Sally——"

"Matter with Sally!" she almost screamed at him. "Everything's the matter with her! Here have they been ringing me up and writing to me from that bally hospital every day and all day, and you ask if there is anything the matter with her! A fine lot you care, don't you? What's going to become of her, I should like to know? Who's going to keep her for the rest of her life? Not me, I tell you!"

"What do you mean?"

"What I say. There's a fine to-do! Talk about your doctors and hospitals. Nice mess they've made of Sally!" She broke suddenly into hysterical tears, wringing her hands.

"Never be able to dance again, they said last night! Never be able to dance again! Oh, poor kid, poor kid! And all through you! You selfish swine!" Her dark eyes blazed fury into Sanderson's pale face. "If you hadn't been drunk it would never have happened," she accused him furiously.

Sanderson caught her by the wrist with an ungentle hand.

"What the hell are you talking about?" he demanded hoarsely.

She tried to twist away from him, but he held her fast.

"What I say!" she shouted. "Sally's done for—that's what it is! She'll never be able to dance again as long as she lives. They say that she'll be a cripple all her life."

* * *

Perhaps Poppy Sladen had the remnants of a heart hidden away somewhere beneath her cheap finery, for her face softened as she saw the pallor of Sanderson's.

For a moment he seemed to be bereft of speech; he just stared at her helplessly, his eyes dark with shock, and his hard jaw fallen, but his cruel grip of her thin wrists did not relax even when she said again, almost gently for her:

"Here, don't take it too badly. I'm only telling you what the doctors said, and most of 'em are fools—that's my experience. Go round and find out for yourself. Sally's half-crazed—swears she'll commit suicide."

With an effort Sanderson pulled himself together.

"If you're just trying to scare me—" he said roughly.

She shrugged her thin shoulders.

"Lord love your soul, what do I want to scare you for?" she demanded bluntly. "I'm sorry for you, that's all. It's your fault Sally's where she is, and it will be your fault if she stays on her back for the rest of her life. All I want to know is, who's going to keep her? Not Akers, if I know anything about men of his kind, the low, dirty——"

Sanderson cut short her stream of abuse.

"Shut up!" he ordered. "It won't help matters to call that swine names. And as for—Sally——" He stumbled a little over the name that seemed to have grown infinitely more dear during the last few moments. "She'll be my care, of course."

Poppy calmed down a little. She freed her wrists from his grasp, and settled her hat.

"Well, as long as someone does the straight thing," she murmured. She sat down in a chair. "Give me a drink, there's a dear," she coaxed. "I've got to tramp my feet off all day. I tell you, it takes me all my time to keep myself in bread-and-scrape, without being bothered with other people's affairs—not but what I wouldn't help Sally if I could——"

Sanderson hardly seemed to be listening; he had gone back to his room and was taking off his dressing-gown.

"Help yourself to what you want," he said abruptly. "You know where the brandy is. Wait five minutes for me, and I'll come along with you."

Poppy rose with alacrity and helped herself to a stiff dose of brandy. She was more disturbed on Sally's account than she chose to admit; she kept thinking, with a sort of horror, that it might have been she herself lying there in the bare hospital ward, without anyone of her own to care for her—not even a Josh Akers or a Philip Sanderson.

"Not that any men are worth a curse," she told herself viciously, as she drained the glass and mixed a second drink.

A Hectic Day Ahead

—A Bigger Morning's Work for Your Gillette

Have you ever noticed how your skin tightens on the morning after a sleepless night?

That means a different type of face for you to shave—a more difficult job for your Gillette Blade.

But you count on the swift keen Gillette for a smooth comfortable shave.

You should, of course, make special preparation. A little longer lathering—three minutes at least. Your face and beard should be thoroughly made ready for the easy sweep of the blade.

Gillette has, in the ten years past, invested MILLIONS to make sure that the Gillette Blade does its swift sure job under any conditions. Almost human machines hone and strop these perfect blades. Of every nine people at the Gillette plant, four are blade inspectors, highly skilled to detect the slightest variation from Gillette standards of quality. A bonus is paid them for every blade discarded. The package that goes to you contains its full quota of comfortable shaves.

ADD LUXURY TO THE CEREMONY

There is a distinct advantage in using Gillette Blades in the New Improved Gillette Razor. So much so, that the morning shave with this combination becomes a bright spot in your day. Don't deny yourself this luxury. Ten models, $5.00 to $75.00.

GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR CO., OF CANADA, LIMITED, MONTREAL.

To be sure of a smooth, comfortable shave under ANY conditions, slip a fresh Gillette Blade in your New Improved Gillette.

THE MARKETS

predictions and by evidence that prices had gone below the domestic average cost of production. A leading authority here said the present average cost of wheat production in the United States is $1.13 a bushel.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm 1 c to 1¼c net higher, with corn ¼c to ⅝c up; oats showing ⅛ to ⅜c advance, and provisions unchanged to 7c down.

Before beginning to swing upward yesterday, the wheat market went down to a new low price record of the season, September delivery selling at $1.07¼ and December at $1.12¼. These figures were simultaneous with reports that harvesting is general in Canada and that crop conditons there are ideal. Moreover, word was at hand that newly-harvested wheat was arriving in Winnipeg and that recent light frosts in Canada had not materially affected yields which as a rule were overtopping a 10-year average.

On the setbacks in price, nevertheless, houses with eastern and foreign connections became prominent on the buying side of the wheat market and there were references to signs that the food situation in Russia is critical. There was also talk that with both polical parties in the United States committed to farm relief, many farmers would hold back as much grain as possible, hoping for better prices, subsequent new forecasts of frost last night in parts of Alberta and Saskatchewan, Canada, gave decided impetus to ensuing upturns in price, and the market closed at the top figures of the day.

Cor nand oats, sympathizing with wheat, rallied from early declines. The South Dakota official semi-monthly report showed crop deterioration. Besides, an unofficial report covering the territory from St. Louis to Kansas indicated some damage from recent hot dry weather. Oats were responsive to excellent cash demand, together with smallness of receipts. Temporarily, however, prices for all deliveries of oats were at the lowest level yet this season.

Provisions tnded downward because of scattered selling which more than offset an advance in the value of hogs.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain was again quiet here yesterday, there being little demand from foreign buyers. The domestic trade in cash grain was inactive, there being little demand from any source for supplies, but the tone of the market was steady and prices were unchanged.

Owing to the advance in contract grades of cash wheat at Winnipeg, there was a steadier feeling in the local market for Spring grades of flour, but there was no marked improvement in the volume of business. Trade in new crop Winter wheat flour was slow and prices were unchanged.

There was no change in the condition of the market for millfeed, prices being maintained under a steady demand for domestic consumption. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats continues of a limited character and prices were unchanged.

Owing to the continued light receipts of new crop baled hay and the very limited supply of top grades of old hay, the tone of the market remains very firm. The export trade was reported quiet in all positions, but there is a steady demand from local buyers for supplies to meet immediate wants.

There was practically no change in the condition of the local egg situation, prices being firm owing to the smaller supplies of extras and firsts coming forward, which is attributed to the very warm weather that prevailed of late. There was a steady demand. Receipts were 986 cases.

The trade in imported beans was reported quiet owing to the fact that buyers in most cases were only operating from hand to mouth on account of the high prices ruling at this period of the year. In a jobbing way sales of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.10 per bushel, ex store, and car lots were quoted at $3.90 per bushel, ex track.

A feature of the local butter situation was the stronger feeling that developed and prices scored a further advance of ¼c per lb, which was attributed to the increased demand from both local and outside interests for supplies and the small receipts of late. Receipts were 40 packages.

Prices for all grades of cheese were well maintained. The demand from English importers for Eastern No. 1 grades and Western and Eastern seconds was good. In fact, it was reported to be in excess of the supply available here and a fair amount of business was accomplished, but the trade in Westerns No. 1 cheese was quiet owing to the fact that foreign buyers do not seem disposed to pay present prices asked. On the whole the market was moderately active. Receipts were 3,777 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—Firm prices continue on the Toronto wholesale egg market, with quotations unchanged since the start of the week. It is considered that any price tendency occurring in the near future will be towards higher quotations. Butter and cheese quotations also remain firm. Reports from other centres show that in St. John, N.B., the egg market is firm with prices higher and dealers buying from country shippers at, extras 40c, firsts 35c, and seconds 30c, delivered.

Word from Prince Edward Island is that egg production is on the decrease.

CARS COLLIDE TO AVOID CHILD

Charles Veenman Swings Into Truck When Little One Darts Out.

CHILD BRUISED.

In an effort to avoid striking four-year old Phyllis Constable of 154 Rubidge street, as she ran out from in front of two parked cars on the west side of Rubidge street, immediately south of Wolfe street, Charles Veenman, driving south, swung his car into a truck driven by P. Nicholls at about one o'clock to-day. The child was either struck by the car fender or fell herself, but on examination by Dr. Scott was found to be suffering only from shock and minor bruises.

The radiator and the bumper of Mr. Veenman's car was damaged, while the truck escaped unscathed. Neither driver was injured.

LYRICS OF LIFE

OLD MEMORIES

Old memories come back to me,
But not the things I thought they'd be.
I thought I never would forget
Some loss, some sorrow, some regret;
But it is Maytime, not December,
In afteryears I most remember.
Old memories I still recall,
But not the things I thought at all.

Old memories come back again
Of things that seemed so little then,
The friendly days and quiet nights
And life's most commonplace delights.
And surely there must be a reason
When I recall some happier season
And quite forget about the hate
And hurt I once believed so great.

Old memories have given me eyes
To see life's things, and know their size
Weighed in the balance of the past
How small the woes that seemed so vast,
How great the joys I held so lightly
In those old days! Still gleaming brightly
Old memories come back to me,
But not the things I thought they'd be.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY GIRLS WANT TO BE BOYS.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.)

It is an open secret that almost every girl sometimes wishes that she were a boy, whereas it is unheard of for a boy to wish he were a girl.

From early childhood a girl is told she must not do the things that are permissible for her brother. This apparent injustice and discrimination is resented and the child can see no reason for these restrictions except the fact that she happens to be a girl hence she envies boys and wishes that she might have been born a boy. She objects to double moral standards which discriminate against her sex.

In these days of equal rights and privileges for the sexes this motive does not play as important part as it used to, nevertheless women are a long way from enjoying as much real freedom as men.

Until recently girls have had reason to envy men not only their greater freedom of action but also the dominating position they held in the business world. In fact it used to be a man's world. Women were tolerated but were decidedly subservient. Men dominated chiefly because of their superior physical strength.

Among the motives that might prompt girls to wish they were boys are envy of men for their greater freedom, greater strength, more varied opportunities for achievement and business success, creating an atmosphere of superiority for men which is well nigh universal.

This atmosphere is caught very early in life by boys and girls alike and is reflected in the common observation that if you call a girl a boy she merely corrects you, but if you call a boy he will fight you.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

5-days Bedtime Story

Uncle Wiggily's Wonderful Boat

(Copyrite, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Jackie Bow Wow, the little puppy dog boy was sick. There was no doubt of it. Dr. Possum had called and had left Jackie some bitter medicine to take, and if there is one thing certain it is that you are surely sick when you must take bitter medicine.

His mother said Jackie got sick because he chased his tail so hard trying to show off tricks when there was company in the dog kennel house.

He had a small pail of water.

His father said Jackie got sick because he barked so much at the moon. But Jackie himself whinned and said:—

"I'm sick of the hot weather — that's what made me sick!"

So you may believe whichever of the three you choose. Anyhow Jackie was sick and then, after a time, during which he took all the bitter medicine the little puppy dog grew better.

Still he wasn't well enough to rush out of the kennel as his brother Peetie did to bark at passing automobiles and the like. Jackie had to stay in the kennel and even though he had found fault with the hot weather after a week of illness he wished he might go out of doors and play.

'Oh, no,'" said Dr. Possum. "You must stay in the kennel another week!" And you can imagine how Jackie fretted.

"If I only had something to amuse me!" he whined.

"What would you like?" asked Mrs. Bow wow.

"A sailboat!" answered Jackie.

"Oh, the idea! You couldn't sail a boat, even a small toy one, here in the kennel," said the dog lady.

"If I had a toy boat I could sail it in the bath tub," Jackie said. "But I haven't one! Oh, dear."

Jackie fretted so much and talked so much about having a sailboat to amuse him that at last Uncle Wiggily heard about it and the kind old rabbit gentleman said:

"I'll buy Jackie a toy boat. It will amuse him until he gets well enough to run out and play." And when Mr. Longears brought the boat, with its gleaming white sails, into the kennel, Jackie was so happy that he nearly wagged off his tail.

"But where can you sail it?" his mother asked.

"In the bath tub!" barked Jackie.

"I think it will do no harm to let him see his boat in the bath tub," said the rabbit gentleman. So the little schooner was set in the water. But though at first Jackie was happy, he wanted to see the boat sail back and forth like a real one, only it wouldn't.

"There is no wind here in the kennel as there is out of doors, to blow toy boats across the duck pond," said Mrs. Bow Wow. "You must be content Jackie, just to see your toy float in the tub."

But Jackie was far from content and he tried blowing on the sails. This made the boat move a little but Jackie blew so hard that he grew dizzy in his head and had to stop.

"Get a fan and that will make wind to blow my sailboat!" he whined. Uncle Wiggily flitted the fan for a while, filling the little toy sails with air and so driving the boat to and fro across the tub. But the rabbit gentleman grew tired of fanning and then the boat stopped sailing.

"Oh, I wish I had a boat that would sail without anybody blowing it or fanning it!" fretted Jackie. And then Uncle Wiggily laughed.

"Whoops!" cried the jolly rabbit gentleman. "Wait here and I'll make a wonderful boat for you." He hopped out of the kennel and when he came back he had a small pail of water in one paw. "Now all of you get out of the bath room a moment if you please," begged Mr. Longears. "You may come back very soon."

So Jackie and his mother went out and when next Uncle Wiggily opened the door and let them in, lo and behold!

The wonderful sailboat was cruising back and forth in the bath tub, just like a steamer boat. But no smoke was puffing out. Uncle Wiggily wasn't using the fan nor blowing on the sails.

"That's a secret!" laughed Mr. Longears. And you shall hear about it tomorrow night. Then, if the mosquito doesn't take such a large bite out of the apple that there is none left for the lightning bug, the story will be of Uncle Wiggily and ploppity plop.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Thursday, August 23, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate).

Until late today the planetary government is evil according to astrology which finds many adverse influences active.

Under this sway there may be many who rise ill-natured and become quarrelsome as the day advances.

Families should avoid unpleasant subjects, such as bills and forgotten letters, until the stars smile again on the earth.

It is well to postpone quests for employment or appeals for advance in wages. Men and women who hold executive positions are likely to be hard to please to-day.

While this configuration prevails persons who hold positions in the Sun or who hope to attain them may suffer severely from unkindly criticism and even abuse.

The day may be unfortunate for those who till the soil, for severe storms may do damage and the sway is not favorable for stock.

Horses are again to become valuable, for there will be a new demand for them, the seers foretell.

Thwarting incidents may delay important business and may prove exceedingly irritating to persons whose time is valuable.

In the evening there may be a return to serenity after a day of numerous trials, most of which will be small but nevertheless provoking.

Under this sway the mind may be fuddled so far as its political and philosophical outlook is concerned, but the evening is more propitious for clear thinking.

A direction of the stars making for contrariness will change many cotes in the fall elections, it is foretold.

Both men and women may take views that are opposite to those held previously, astrologers prognosticate, because the planets have a revolutionary tendency.

Persons whose birthdate it is may hear of something sensational, or shocking in regard to their employers or business associates in the coming year. These subjects of Leo and Virgo, who are on the cusp may expect promotions, or at least, benefits.

Children born on this day probably will be inclined toward romance and sentiment. They have the augury of prosperous and even famous careers. They may be intense lovers of nature and natural poets.

Auguste Escoffier, most famous of French chefs, has been promoted from a Chevalier to an officer of the Legion of Honor.

FARMERS BENEFIT

touch with each individual farmer and send him a record and grade of his hogs along with other valuable market information, and I cannot understand why some drovers do not wish to comply with the act in this respect, as what will benefit the farmer will also be a benefit to these drovers from the fact that they will secure a better class of livestock.

Quality High

"The class of hogs raised in Peterborough County is of a very high quality and the fact that the hogs are all purchased on a grading basis has resulted in a large amount of money paid back to the Peterborough producers. For instance, last year 37,822 hogs were marketed in Peterborough County. Of this number 11,922, about 32 per cent, graded select. Taking this number at $1.00 per head, the premiums would amount to $11,922 that was paid back to the farmers in 1927.

"Not only from this standpoint has the breeding of hogs resulted in added profits to the county, but much other work has been done toward hog improvements. Last year a survey of the county was made relative to breeding stock and the following survey is interesting to the farmers.

Many Good Boars

"A record is kept of the progeny of all the boars in the county and summarizing this we found that out of 129 boars recorded four boars graded over 75 per cent select; 34 over 50 per cent; 51 over 25 per cene, and 40 less than 25 per cent. However, realizing the injustice of grading a boar by the grading of his progeny, for when it is taken into consideration many sows of poor type are bred to these boars and a lot of apparently good type of hogs are spoiled in the hands of poor feeders. We have analyzed the above figures in another way such as grading the boar according to the grade of the best litter:

Twenty-eight boars have sired one or more litters 75 per cent select; 36, fifty per cent select; 27, twenty-five percent; 36 have never reported or sired a litter over 25 per cent.

From the foregoing figures we are able to give back the following information to the Peterborough farmers as to the best boars to use and where they are to be located.

"It has come to my attention," continued Mr. McKinnon, "that in some parts of the province petitons have been circulated among the farmers by drovers relative to the discontinuance of furnishing manifests and the local grading of hogs, but I am pleased to state that the local drovers with only one exception did not take any cognizance of this petition. In most cases the petition found the way to the waste paper basket, as they felt the local farmers possess a high standard of intelligents and would not countenance any move of this nature that would merely jeopardize their own position in this respect.

Will Enforce Act

"I regret to learn that letters have been circulated and sent out to a number of the local drovers by commission men of Toronto, advising them of a recent meeting with the acting Prime Minister and the Minister of Agriculture and stating in that letter that no legal action would be taken against any shipper who does not furnish manifests. In regard to this I say that I have received no instructions other than to enforce the Act, and to lay charges against those drovers who do not comply with the same.

The following is recommended as of interest to the local hog dealers and breeders by J. B. Nelson, Peterborough Agriculture Representative, and by D. A. McKinnon, Government Hog Inspector for the district:

In order to understand the situation thoroughly it is necessary to go back and review the progress of hog grading. A conference held in Ottawa in November, 1921, was the beginning of hog grading in Canada. Following that conference, regulations were enacted and a differential of 10 per cent between selects and thick smooths was agreed upon. No one will deny the statment that wonderful improvement was made in Canadian hogs as a result of the hog grading policy.

The following years created new problems and new difficulties. The packers declared they could no longer pay the 10 per cent. premium on selects and sought another conference with the Government and with representatives of producers. This was held in Ottawa on April 22 and 23, 1927. There, a diffirential of 50 cents per hundred was agreed upon, and it was decided that regulations should be enacted to insure that the information regarding the way hogs graded, at the stock yards and abattoirs, would get back to producers.

The outcome of this was the rule that all hogs should be graded at local shipping points, or, failing that, hogs should be marked and graded at their destination. More than that, the drover or shipper was obliged to fill out a form called a "manifest" which is really a description of the load or deck of hogs, and forward it to the Live Stock Branch Representative nearest to the point of destination for the carload of hogs. After the load is graded farmers contributing to that load of hogs are informed by the Live Stock Branch how the hogs graded. This policy represents an effort on the part of the Branch to carry out the express desires of the producers and other interests represented at the conference in Ottawa in April, 1927.

Hog grading regulations are a part of the Live Stock and Live Stocks Products Act; and the Act has been made valid in all the provinces by enabling legislation, passed either by the Provincial Legislature or by Order-in-Council.

First Enforced Here

There is always considerable detail to be worked out when any new regulation is enforced. Owing to the fact that the Province of Ontario has the best hog grading machinery and that the percentage of select hogs is higher in Ontario than in any other province, it is only logical that the Live Stock Branch should first enforce the regulations in Ontario, and perfect their machinery here before applying it in the other provinces. The new regulations went into effect in Ontario in February, 1928. Since that time a few drovers have openly defied the regulations. One drover was charged and tried at London, Ontario. The Live Stock Branch secured a conviction, but the case has been appealed. Six other cases are pending, but it is logical that they should not be heard until the appeal is heard and a decision handed down. The policy of the Exchange and of drovers is apparently to secure postponement and thus delay a decision.

Meanwhile a number of drovers, aided and encouraged by members of the Live Stock Exchange, are carrying on a campaign against hog grading; and it is obvious that they are endeavoring to influence local members of the Legislature so that when the Provincial House meets early in 1929 they will be able to have the enabling legislation rescinded. The new hog grading regulations are made valid in Ontario by Order-in-Council, but that Order-in-Council can be rescinded only by an Act of the Legislature.

FIVE TOURISTS DIE IN WRECK

Sixth Member of Ohio Par Not Expected To Get Better.

HIT BY FAST TRAIN.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Five tourists from Cleveland, Ohio, were killed and a sixth probably fatally injured when their automobile was struck and demolished by a Canadian Pacific boat special at Yamachiche, Que, yesterday.

The dead were reported identified as follows: Mr. and Mrs. George Wise, Mrs. Lester Vanderwerf and her two small children, Jack and Jean.

Mrs. Mary Dotty was taken to the Norman Cross Hospital, Three Rivers, where it was stated she was very critically injured.

The train was eastbound for Quebec and, according to railway officials, was travelling at 45 miles an hour when it struck the automobile at the third crossing out of Yamachiche on the road to Quebec City. The automobile party was bound for Quebec.

The crossing was marked but there were no gates. Four of the occupants of the automobile were instantly killed. One of the children succumbed on board the train en route for Three Rivers, where the bodies and injured were rushed following the accident.

The authorities at Three Rivers had considerable difficulty in identifying the victims of the crash. The bodies taken to the morgue at Three Rivers were reported to be so badly battered as to be almost unrecognizable.

The sedan in which the party was travelling was hurled from the right of way and completely wrecked.

The boat special which struck the automobile was carrying several Canadian public officials, among them Hon. C. A. Dunning, Dominion Minister of Railways and Canals, and Hon. George S. Henry, Ontario Minister of Public Works and Highways, both of whom sailed later from Quebec for European points.

Authorities were without any official explanation of the accident last night. Railway officials said the automobile was moving when struck by the train. The police of Yamachiche stated that the driver of the car had endeavored to stop short of the crossing when aware of the approaching train and apparently had failed, the engine of the car stalling when the automobile was on the crossing.

An inquest will be opened to-day. Disposition of the bodies awaits instructions from relatives of the victims at Cleveland.

INDIGESTION, GAS AND SEVERE PAIN

Of the thousands of people whom Tanlac has saved from the misery of Indigestion and Stomach Trouble, none are more grateful than Mr. Fred Hill, 349 Thames St., London, Ont. "I had about given out altogether," he says, "and was going down hill so fast that I thought nothing could stop me. I ate only two light meals a day and even then suffered untold agonies from indigestion, gas and pains that just doubled me up. My nerves were wrecked; every bone in my body ached I could not sleep; and just felt sick all over.

"Tanlac fixed me up so I could eat anything from soup to dessert without having indigestion. All my other troubles vanished like smoke. I picked up twelve pounds and never felt better. I never thought anything could do for me what Tanlac did."

Tanlac corrects Stomach Trouble and builds up the whole system because it is nature's own remedy for the sick—roots, barks and herbs. Remember, your money back if it doesn't help you; so get a bottle at your druggist's to-day.

Campbellford Caretakers Busy With 13 Days Left of Holiday Season.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23—There are thirteen days now before school opens and the caretakers were busy preparing the class rooms for the beginning of the fall term. At the present time the interiors of the buildings are practically ready to receive the staffs and pupils. Yesterday the caretakers were busy on the grounds. All season the lawns have presented an immaculate appearance, and have been one of the show places of the town. Yesterday the trees were groomed and the trimmings removed for disposal elsewhere.

Pontypool

(Examiner Correspondence.)

PONTYPOOL, August 23. — Miss Ida Payne, who has been a stenographer in the Bowmanville foundry for the past three years, has resigned and is spending a few weeks at her home.

Some of the former citizens of Pontypool who attended the field day here, were Mr. and Mrs. Allie Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. R. Kellett, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McGill, Mr. R. Edgerton, Mr. W. Malley of Oshawa, Dr. D. W. Clark, Peterborough, Mr. W. Cully and family, Mr. and Mrs. Roll Staples, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Staples, Miss Eva Staples of Toronto.

Mr. Fred Jamieson, of Ottawa, who is employed with the Soldiers' Re-establishment Bureau, has been visiting his father, Mr. George Jamieson, who is residing at the home of Mr. L. Jamieson. Since coming here Mr. F. Jamieson has been confined to his bed through sickness.

Among those who have gone west on the excursion are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gray, Messrs. J. Malley, L. Webb, P. Gechel, D. Harris.

Miss L. Pearstein and Miss G. Robbins, Toronto, have returned home after spending their vacation with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood were recent visitors at his sisters, Mrs. Chas. Webb.

Captain W. L. Rayheill, V. C., intends going to Toronto on Saturday to take part in the Veterans' parade at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Mr. M. E. Hinton, Bobcaygeon, the local teacher, was in town for the field day. This school had a large entrance class and had every one successful, two with honors. Mr. Hinton has been re-engaged for another term.

Dr. G. W. McNeil, who has been on his holidays, has returned home to his practice again.

Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Ghent of Hamilton are visiting friends at Lotus and Ballyduff. Mrs. Ghent is convalesing after a rather serious operation and is making good progress.

INSTITUTE HONORS GRANDMOTHERS

West Seymour Branch Has Good Program On Their Day.

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 23.—Grandmother's Day was pleasantly enjoyed by the member of the Women's Institute of Seymour when they gathered at the home of Mrs. George Longmuir on Thursday afternoon. An interesting and pleasing program was given. Mrs. Beatty, of Toronto, sang, "When You and I Were Young Maggie" which was much enjoyed. Little Eileen Russell delighted the gathering with her piano solos. Mrs. Robert McCulloch gave a very appropriate paper on "The Joys of Later Years," and Mrs. Beatty gave a reading, "The Lassies Noo-a-days."

There were eight grandmothers present and each received a beautiful bouquet fo flowers. After the presentation, Mrs. Martin McArthur gave some very enjoyable old-fashioned music.

An exhibit of antiques which together with the quaint costumes of some of the grandmothers carried those present back a few decades to pioneer days. An old-fashioned supper on the lawn brought the afternoon to a close.

THE MARKETS

An English group already interested in Canadian mining is said to be the negotiating party.

The companies mentioned are: Abana Mines, Limited; Abonde Mines, Limited; Arne Mines, Limited; and Ankerite Gold Mines Limited. Two others, the Porcupine Goldfields Development and Finance Company and Vickers Mines Limited, through their interest in three of the properties..

All that could definitely be ascertained yesterday was the fact that certain interests were approached to sell control of Abana and Abonde. Vickers Mines holds approximately 500,000 shares each of these two companies in its treasury and is also interested in other companies and the parties were told to gain control of Abana and Abonde they would have to purchase control of Vickers. Negotiations have taken place along this line and an offer made to sell Vickers control. So far, this offer has not been accepted and it can not be said the deal will ultimately materialize. The official questioned could not say as to any intention of the merging with the other properties.

The Abana property is situated in Desmeloizos Township, Abitibi - Rouyn area of northwestern Quebec, and consists of 600 acres. Abonde owns four mining claims consisting of 200 acres adjoining Abana. The authorized capital of Abana is 3,000,000 shares of which there are 2,300,000 outstanding, and Abonde 3,000,000 outhorized and 1,250,000 issued.

Ankerite Gold Mines owns approximately 118 acres in Deloro Township and the company is under option to the Porcupine Goldfields Development and Finance Co. The company has outstanding 1,500,000 shares of $1 par and $500,000 in bonds. Porcupine Goldfields is an English Company and is said to be the prime mover to bring about the consolidation of the properties.

The properties of Arne Mines approximate 1,200 acres all in Desmeloizes Township, Quebec. There are 1,973,373 shares of $1 and $100,000 in bonds outstanding.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Calumet.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—A despatch from our field man in Rouyn states an extension of the copper find on this property situated about a mile west of Lake Fortune has now been picked up about 600 feet to the west of where the original discovery was made. When exposed the vein is almost solid chalcopyrite, and averages about thirty inches in width. It is lying in the centre of a schisted zone 60 feet in width. What appears to be an extension to the east of the copper showing is a quartz vein about four feet wide, and according to the consulting engineer, Mr. Julius Cohen, this assayed in channel sampling up to $8 a ton.

Buffalo Rouyn.

Advices from Rouyn are to the effect that a small gasoline driven compresosr will be set up very shortly on this property, when shaft sinking will commence. Several diamond drill holes have been put down with varying results. Three holes intersected ore of narrow width running from $8 to $20 a ton at around the 130 foot horizon.

Mandy.

According to Mr. M. B. Huston, operating vice-president of the Tonopah Mining Company, and consulting engineer of Mandy Mines, development at the latter property in Manitoba is thoroughly satisfactory. He states in part: "We have crosscut on three new levels, the 325, 400 and 525, opening the same intensively schisted zone with chalcopyrite stringers. Drifting is now under way at all three levels, and a quite interesting section has been opened on the 400 foot level in the past few days. Surface drilling which is under way has proved the continuance of the schisted zone in which the ore bodies occur for at least 2,000 feet to the north of the shaft. This drilling is continuing."

Malartic.

From an exceptionally well informed source we learn that fine values are being obtained on the 375 foot level of this property in the Malartic district. It is reported that 18 feet runs $14.70; 76 feet $8.12; 70 feet low grade and 8 eight real high grade, all continuous making more than one hundred and seventy-five feet width of commercial ore without selective mining. This is a most important development and practically assures a mine of size in this district.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

The Common Stock Earns Place in Conservative Investment Lists.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.— Investors who have been studying financial and security markets of late have observed the striking phenomenon of common stocks selling at prices to return their holders from 1½ to 3 per cent. on the capital employed, while time government bonds are yielding from 4½ to 5 per cent, and sound utility and corporation bonds from 4½ to 6 per cent. Thus the old order is reversed. Formerly it was customary for the higher grade securities to yield from 4½ to 5 per cent, preferred stocks around 6 per cent, and common stocks anywhere from 5 to 10 per cent.

One has only to refer to a few striking market examples to prove that many standard common stocks are selling at "crazy" levels, when prices and yields are measured by old time standards. Montreal Power Common, to select one popular issue, sold as high as 120 in the spring "bull" market, and at the time of writing is hovering around 100. A dividend of $2.00 per annum is paid on this stock, and the investor is getting a return of 2 p.c. Brazilian Traction common, which recently sold as high as 64½ and is currently quoted at 55, pays $1.75 per share annum, a yield of slightly better than 3 p.c. Shawinigan Water and Power, selling around 85, recently at 108, is paying $2.00 a year, and returning the investor, at current prices, 2.35 p.c.

These are but a few of the many instances of junior securities selling at prices that, judged by the scale of interest return, are exorbitantly high, but, despite the high levels, they are being steadily bought by speculators, investors of broad experience, and by financial institutions which retain a corps of investment experts and whose duty is to avoid investment errors.

What is the explanation of this apparently incongruous situation? The least sophisticated in investment matters is astute enough to appreciate the fact that bonds, debentures and preferred stocks are the most dependable form of securities, and that when one enters the realm of common stocks he is sacrificing some measure of security and has embarked upon a distinctly speculative enterprise.

One need not seek for a satisfying answer to the question raised. Simply this, that the ordinary investor is no longer satisfied with the fixed income returned by bonds, debentures and preferred stocks. He would participate in the junior issues of soundly established companies, issues which afford him a chance of materially increasing his capital and income through periodic dividend increases, or through market appreciation. If the security he buys is reasonably likely to do this for him, he is willing to forego some measure of immediate return for the sake of the potential profits of the future.

Perhaps, too, he was an investor before and during the war, and recalls his rather unsatisfactory experience with fixed income securities, owing to increased commodity prices and the correspondingly reduced purchasing power of the dollar. For example, it took twice as much money to purchase a given quantity of goods in 1920 as it did in 1915. The average of commodity prices had doubled, and a fixed income security which returned $6.8C per $100 in 1913, nominally returned $6.00 in 1920, but really only $2.50 on the basis of the purchasing power of the dollar. Even to-day, despite the fact that commodity prices have shown a steady decline for some years the average is still fifty-six per cent. above the 1913 level.

Thus it is that thousands of investors are seeking to supplement their income by buying promising common stocks, and send them to sky-high levels. As one financial writer neatly expressed it, "we are in the rear of the common stock triumphant."

TORONTO EXHIBITION TO OPEN TO-MORROW

Big Fair Will Run Fourteen Days This Year, Instead of Thirteen.

TORONTO, Aug. 23. —(Canadian Press.)—The Canadian National Exhibition will open to-morrow morning at eight o'clock and will be officially declared open some time later in the day by Viscount Willingdon, the Governor-General. This year the Exhibition will run for fourteen days instead of thirteen which have been the rule for some years.

A feature of the opening day will be the arrival of an airmail plane from Windsor, which will make a landing near the Grand Plaza on the water front. To-morrow evening the Exhibition chorus of 2,000 voices will give its opening concert under Dr. H. A. Fricker.

Auto Runs 59 Miles On Gallon Of Gas

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owner have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disapeparance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-2645 S. Hastings

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, August 23.— Mrs. Shermin Scriver has returned after spending the past few days visiting in Peterborough.

Mrs. William Baker and son, Douglas, of Rochester, New York, are renewing old acquaintances in town.

Mr. William Walker spent the week end at the home of his parents in Uxbridge

Dr. J. H Hess and son, Clifford, spent Tuesday in Oshawa.

A number from town motored to Napanee on Tuesday to witness the horse races there. The greatest drawing card to the Hastings' racegoers was the horse "Donna Belle" which raced there and is owned by the Beavis brothers of town. The mare has proven a wonder for her age and her owners have refused several fancy offers for her.

Mr. George Wiggins of Warkworth was a business visitor in town on Monday

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing and family of Rochester, N.Y., are renewing old acquaintances in town. Mr. Lang was formerly of the Bank of Toronto staff here some years ago.

About thirty young men from this district left via C.P.R. train for Western Canada on Tuesday. Mr. Coughlan, local C.P.R. agent here motored them over to Norwood where they took the train for Toronto.

Mr. Isaac Brooks of Winnipeg, Man., is visiting at the home of his brother, Mr. Albert Brooks.

Mr. Alec Wilson, Jr., of Toronto, is visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson.

Mr. William Armour who has been confined to his home for several days is showing slight improvement from his illness.

A severe electric storm passed over the district on Tuesday, but with little damage being repored.

Dr. Douglas Hay of Peterborough has opened an up-to-date dentist's office in the rooms over the Royal Bank formerly occupied by Mr. Thomas Chaplin.

NO MORE PILES

Thousands Bless Dr. Leonhardt, the Specialist Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the internal treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

J. S. Leonhardt, M.D., as specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named this prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1,000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere with money back guarantee. It is easy to take, and McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Dream Comes True; Boy Has Hard Luck

GALT, Aug. 23.—With a letter from his mother in his pocket warning him that she had dreamed he was in a serious accident, Martin Johnson of Detroit was yesterday remanded in custody on a charge of criminal negligence.

Johnson received the letter of warning Tuesday morning. Tuesday night, police allege, his auto cutting in, caused a serious smash and three Kitchener young people are in hospital as a result.

Bail was set at $5,000, but failing to produce the money, Johnson was sent back to his cell.

Johnson has had nothing but trouble since he arrived to visit helatives here. Last Wednesday his cousin was drowned. Johnson worked hard in an effort to restore him and in the excitement walked into poison ivy. His body is covered with the rash.

All three victims of Tuesday night's accident are doing well, hospital authorities state.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE TIGHTWAD.

He gave his days to gaining gold,
And many a joy his soul denied.
He worked and slaved, he bought and sold,
And laid a little bit aside.
The preacher preached on Sunday morn
And spoke of wealth with words of scorn,
And many a spendthrift turned to look
To see how well the sermon took.

But Monday morning found him still,
Although the preacher spoke so much,
Adding a little to his till,
This man the sermon did not touch.
And many a spendthrift shook his head,
And even his children something said,
But still he labored day by day
And put a little bit away.

So day by day his store increased,
And then one day his heart grew glad,
For now he had enough, at least,
To keep them warm, and fed, and clad.
His widow would not want for food
Or shelter for their little brood,
Would even have a bit to give
To help the church and spendthrift live.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

The sporis frock indicated in the sketch shows a fancy circular pocket at the right side. The triangular pocket at the right is ornagented with a long bow of ribbon. Above at the right a polka dot pocket with belt to match and at the left a buttoned pocket on a leather belt.

Pockets have been rediscovered by the French dressmakers and you will doubtless find them much more prominently used in the new clothes than they have been for many seasons. They are not the simple flat applied pockets that we used to have on skirts and jackets but highly ornamental fussy little pockets often placed along the line of the belt or girdle. The sketch shows you a few of the pockets that our artist has noticed on the new frocks within the past few days.

One cannot think of new clothes these days without thinking of velvets. And velvets have played such an iportant role in the collections recently shown by the influential French dressmakers that the question now seems to be whether there will be enough velvet to go round. Many of these new velvets are printed—small, rather subtly toned velvets for daytime wear and larger more intricate printed velvets for evening and formal afternoon.

An autumn ensemble I saw the other day was made entirely of velvet in an irregular dotted design in tones of soft blue. The skirt with a slightly irregular hem line was pleated all around—for the new chiffon velvet takes pleats as well as crepe de chine or flannel. Then there was a jumper blouse of the same velvet with a rather long tie—also of velvet coat that came to within six or eight inches of the edge of the skirt. A narrow strip of the velvet for the collar—and not a bit of fur. Another velvet ensemble for autumn was made of the new star dotted print with a slightly circular skirt a straight velvet coat coming slightly below the hips and under this a matching satin blouse.

These new chiffon or transparent velvet ensembles are quite light in weight, suitable for immediate wear. Just the sort of thing you would like to wear for the late summer or autumn wedding or important reception. Then when colder weather comes they may be worn quite easily under a fur or cloth coat when you want a smart ensemble that looks "all there" when the outer wrap is removed.

When boiling eggs, wet the shells well with cold water before putting them in boiling water and they will not crack.

If brown shoes are too light in color to secure a nice dark tan rub them with a cloth dipped in ammonia; repeat process, letting leather dry between applications.

THE WHATNOT
A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

APROPOS of what I wrote a few days ago in regard to wives keeping their jobs providing the jobs were worth while, what do you think of the opinion of Dorothy Stevens, portrait painter and etcher, given at Windsor on Saturday?

• • •

"Women should continue with their work after marriage, whether or not there are children," said Miss Stevens, who, by the way, is married.

• • •

Miss Stevens feels that in creative work, after they have reached a certain point it is too much to lose to entirely give it up. A woman who continues with her work is more interesting and helpful to her husband said Miss Stevens.

• • •

For the ordinary woman whose work amounts to anything, Miss Stevens approves of the continuance of the same after marriage also. It cultivates the mind more than golf does.

• • •

Heretofore men have been broader minded as their work encouraged exchange of ideas, and the outlook of a woman tied to the home was confined to the angle of her own family. Of course a woman's work after marriage should be within reason, but if a woman is intelligent enough to run a job, she should be intelligent enough to also run a house adequately, in the opinion of Miss Stevens.

• • •

Although Miss Stevens does not approve of too young marriages, she is in favor of young couples both working as a solution to the high cost of living. This is a problem which will have to work itself out, she said, the mounting cost of living and the small salaries which confront so many young couples.

• • •

All of this appeals to me because it is confirmation of what I previously wrote on the subject. You will note that Miss Stevens specifies "creative work," just as I, in my lesser way wrote, "worth-while work."

• • •

There may be an excuse on monetary grounds for a woman continuing ordinary hum-drum work after marriage, but there is reason behind her carrying on creative work. If she writes, as an instance I quoted before, she is depriving the world of a benefit when she ties herself to household tasks to the exclusion of her authorship.

• • •

There is a lot to be said for the man whom I overheard in conversation the other day. He complained that most women are afraid to be friends—or pretend that they are.

• • •

He is a reputable business man, happily married, and not given to flirtations. But his complaint was that women of his acquaintance would not even be friendly—and his reason was that they haven't yet attained in fact to the camaraderie to which their present exalted (comparatively) status in the world entitles them.

• • •

In other words, they still wish to be the "clinging vine," and all the liberty and freedom and votes in the world cannot make them feel like anything else but clinging.

• • •

Is that true? Aren't women assuming more and more responsibility in the business world? Aren't more and more political leaders coming out of the ranks of the former weaker sex? Aren't their inhibitions in regard to "mixing" founded on commonsense and practical experience?

• • •

At the same time, there's no need for "putting it on." It seems to me many might unbend just a little more without lessening male respect for the sex.

• • •

In a moment of what one correspondent has been pleased to call "Luciferian recklessness" I suggested a few days ago equality of responsibility, equality of "palship" as well as our demanded equality of the franchise.

• • •

In spite of the weighty indictment brought against me by this correspondent . . . I stick to my guns.

• • •

What do YOU think?

BIRTH RATE HIGHER AMONG GIRL BABIES

Term Weaker Sex Needs To Be Revised, As Death Rate Higher Among Boys.

WINNIPEG, Man. Aug. 21.—Writing in the Manitoba Medical Bulletin, C. C. Ferguson states that boy babies are decidedly more numerous than girl babies; but that the death rate for males is decidedly higher than for females, especially during infancy and middle life. As the second of these factors is more potent than the first the result is that the world contains more women than men.

In Canada the proportion of boy babies to girl babies is given as 1,061 to 1,000. This rate is higher than in the United States and in most European countries. In Great Britain it is in the proportion of 1,047 to 1,000. The Province of Manitoba, it appears, is especially strong on boys; and as the infant mortality rate for male babies is proportionately lower than in most other places, it is suggested that Manitoba is a good place for men to reside in, especially for those who, like the late Czar of Russia, wish to have male heirs.

The 'Tribune' says, anent this:—The appellation "the weaker sex" as applied to women is clearly in need of revision. What term may be employed, without disrespect, to indicate women's greater vitality? Mr. Ferguson does not like the expression "the tougher sex" nor the "the aged sex." Perhaps, he courteously suggests the term "vital sex," connoting not only death-resisting powers, but also a vivacious disposition and a keen interest in life generally, would be more appropriate. Also more diplomatic.

TRAVEL-LOG.

ROAMINGS IN ROUMANIA

The geographical position of Roumania makes it one of the richest and most fertile spots of Europe, while the Danube and the Black Sea put it into direct communication with the rest of Europe. The best time to go there is between April and June and between September and November, when both nature and the climate are superb. During July and August it is best to escape the heat in the Carpathians, especially at Sinaia, where there are fine hotels and villas, and where, considering the luxury of the place, the rates are remarkably low. Sinaia is about three hours from Bucharest, and I found even the motoring roads not at all bad. In the autumn, beautiful Constanza by the sea is the best resort. In the capital at Bucharest, there are fine hotel rooms for $1.50 a day and a la carte meals at the best restaurants seldom went over 75 cents. If you want to jot down a few other places in this delightful old land off the beaten track for a good summer's holiday, remember Brasov, Sibiu, Cluj and beautiful Alba Julia, within whose walls the coronation took place a few years ago. The Queen has done much to put Roumania on the map of the modern world, but you ought to see her country, now the land of little King Michael.

New York reports that the very full skirt is undeniably the dominating silhouette, whether attained in circular, shirred, pleated or tiered formation.

NINE DAY PICKLES

(Requested by Mrs. D., kindly supplied by Mrs. F.M.S., Cavan

Cut 1 peck of cauliflowers, onions and cucumbers, cover with boiling water and 2 cups salt. Let stand three days then drain off and heat, and put on pickles again for three days. Drain this off and add one-third vinegar to enough water to cover, add a little alum (size of hickory nut). When boiling put on pickles and let stand three days, then drain off and cover with vinegar, 10c worth of mixed spice and four pounds brown sugar (boil sugar and spice in vinegar). Bottle while hot.

Just a Joke

MIGHTY HUNTERS

The old-fashioned girl certainly knew how to get a dinner. The modern girl does, but she uses a different method.—Judge.

'Never a Pain now'

"I should like to let you know how much I have benefited by the use of Kruschen. For twenty years I was a perfect martyr to sick headache and biliousness, also I suffered agony from pains in my stomach, and I could get no relief. Beginning the use of Kruschen I improved steadily, and now never have a pain. In fact I am so well that I can scarcely remember what I suffered. I take Kruschen every morning, and give it the entire credit for making me so well, and I just hope other similar sufferers will get the same benefit."

Original letter on file for inspection.

It was the "little daily dimeful" that did it once again, and what it has done for her and millions of others it will do for you.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at drug and department stores in Canada, at 75c. a bottle. A bottle contains enough to last for 4 or 5 months—good health for half-a-cent a day.

A Tip or Two

Grease spots can be removed from leather with spirits of sal ammoniac. Dab spots carefully, wait and then wash in clear water.

If grease is spilled on a wooden table pour cold water over it at once. The cold water will harden the grease and prevent it sinking into the wood. It can then be easily removed with a knife.

To remove black ink stains on children's colored frocks, etc., cover them immediately with red ink and then wash. In this way the damage may be made good, not a trace of either risk remaining.

When screwing eyes into the end of brooms, mops and so on, to hang them up, dip the screw in glue before inserting them permanently and they will never come out.

To cool a dish of pudding of any hot food quickly, set it in a pan of cold water which has been well salted.

A fine table mat for hot dishes can be made from the top of an old straw hat; the edge should be bound with tape.

Obituary

(Examiner Correspondence).

HERBERT R. ARMSTRONG.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 23.—Herbert R. Armstrong, a life-long and highly-respected citizen of this community, died suddenly on Sunday, August 19, while in his berth on the train returning from a business trip to Saskatchewan. He had boarded the train at Winnipeg, and had reached North Bay, when a sudden attack of heart trouble, apparently, resulted fatally. He was fifty-four years of age.

The news of Mr. Armstrong's death came as a great shock, not only to his family and immediate relatives, but to the community at large as well. He was a son of the late A. T. Armstrong, and Mrs. Armstrong, and for some years was in the implement business with his father; more recently, however, he had successfully conducted a music store. In religion he was a Presbyterian; in politics, a Conservative, and he was active in fraternal circles, being both an Oddfellow and a Mason. In his business and social connections, Mr. Armstrong maintained always a cheerful and considerate disposition, and was ready to lend any assistance in his power to add to the pleasure and interest of others, when either circumstances, or personal appeal, gave evidence of need.

Surviving are his widow, formerly Sarah Macdonald of Ripley, to whom he was united in marriage nineteen years ago this month; seven children, three daughters, and four sons, the baby, Esther, being but three months old; his mother, Mrs. A. T. Armstrong; two brothers, Norman of Edmonton, and Harry of Toronto, and four sisters: Mrs. F. A. Mills of Los Angeles, California, Mrs. J. N. McGill of Millbrook, Miss Bessie of Los Angeles, California, and Mrs. Harold Moncrief of South Monaghan; his father predeceased him by ten years, as did also one brother, George, who lived in Saskatchewan; another brother died in infancy.

The funeral, under the auspices of Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F., No. 308, took place on Wednesday, a private service at the house preceding the public service at Grace Presbyterian Church, which was filled to capacity at the hour arranged for, 2.30 p.m. His brother Oddfellows turned out in large numbers for the service, Bro. P. I. Bentley, P.G., acting as Marshal.

Rev. John Riddell conducted the church service, speaking from the text found in John ii., 24 and 25, and emphasizing the fact of an assured hope of a joyful resurrection through faith in Jesus Christ, and pointing out that through sorrow we are often brought into a more intimate communion with our Saviour and with God. Rev. P. C. Howard, of the Anglican Church, led in prayer and read the Scripture lesson.

Carrying the many beautiful floral tributes, which included a wreath from J. B. Hall Lodge A. F. and A. M., No. 145; a "gates ajar" design from Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 308, and a wreath from Grace Church, were: Brothers A. J. Henderson, J. W. Hamilton, Douglas Sheppard, G. E. Burnham, Rev. P. C. Howard, J. A. Vance, T. H. Bradley, and W. E. Belch.

The pall-bearers included: Dr. H. A. Turner, J. N. McGill, Harry O'Brian, W. E. Coombe, Dr. A. Russell, and H. A. Fallis.

Interment was in the Presbyterian Cemetery.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mulligan of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. (Dr.) Lugsdin and Miss May O'Brian of Buffalo, N.Y.; Dr. John Berry of Toronto; S. H. Hunter, of Toronto; Mrs. McKibbon and Mrs. Yeeman of Ripley; Mrs. Harry Perrin, of Toronto; Mrs. Thos. O'Brian, Misses Mary and Bessie O'Brian, Mr. J. J. Preston and Mr. Harry O'Brian of Bethany; Mr. Will McCartney of Toronto; Miss Nettie Fallis of Toronto.

CROP REPORT

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Favorable weather conditions for harvesting in the three prairie provinces and prospects of a big crop are shown in a report issued by the Canadian Bank of Commerce here yesterday.

The summary follows:

Manitoba: The weather generally was satisfactory last week for harvesting operations, although in some districts cutting was delayed for a few days on account of rains. In the Altons, Gretna and Miami districts cutting is about 80 per cent. completed. While little threshing had been done up to August 18, the yield from the odd field threshed was reported to be very satisfactory, both as to quality and quantity. With the exception of light hailstorms in limited areas, the crops suffered no reverses during the past week. Prospects are still that a good crop in all grain will be harvested.

Saskatchewan: The weather has been moderately cool, with occasional showers. There were no reports of frost during the week, and the general opinion seems to be that it would take quite a heavy frost to do much damage to the crops now. Hailstorms have occurred at quite a number of points, but in most cases the damage done appears to have been quite small. A good start has been made in the cutting of wheat, and it is expected that cutting will be general in the most disricts by August 20 or 25. Given dry weather for the past few weeks, a heavy crop of good quality wheat will be harvested.

Alberta: The weather during the past week has been cool and wet, delaying ripening. Cutting is not likely to be general until August 27. Hail damage was severe in North and Central Alberta. Light frosts in several sections of Southern Alberta may affect the crops on low ground. The damage, however, is thought to be slight. With favorable weather, prospects are for a good crop.

NEWS IN BRIEF

FIREBUGS ACTIVE.

GUELPH, August 23. — Four more incendiary attempts to destroy Guelph buildings in the last 24 hours have roused the city to a high pitch of excitement. Merchants and manufacturers are engaging special night watchmen to guard their premises. An agitation commenced yesterday to treble the police force by swearing in citizens as night constables in every ward of the city.

For property owners there is little sleep these nights. It is now three weeks since the fire bugs started operations and nearly a score of mysterious blazes have been blamed on them in that time. The only additional information gleaned by the investigators is that two maniacs instead of one, as at first proposed, are operating. Both are young men, persons say who have seen them running from the scene of fires at night.

BOY FOUND; DROWNED.

TORONTO, August 23. — Overjoyed by word from his wife that his son Danny, aged 12, who journeyed from Toronto to Craigie Lea House, Muskoka to see his mother, was safe with her, George Hill, painter and decorator 363 Soudan avenue, was cast into grief again yesterday when within three hours of hearing the glad tidings he was informed by a telegram from his wife that the lad had been drowned while bathing.

The lad arrived in Bala last Monday afternoon. On Tuesday afternoon about four o'clock he went swimming with a companion. He was seen to go under by A. W. Anglin K. C., who jumped in and recovered the body from comparatively shallow water. A doctor who was called said that the boy was dead before being taken from the lake. Death was apparently due to heart failure. No inquest will be held.

In his travels the lad had covered 140 miles.

CAUGHT A FINE LUNGE DOWN THE RIVER

Dan Simons is a Champion Fisherman—Jim Weir a Great Guide.

Danny Simons, all the way from Broadway, New York, to spend his summer in the old home town, always contended there was good fishing in the Otonabee, and just to make good the boast he started out yesterday to prove it. Hooking up with Jim Weir as guide they drifted slowly down the river until they got about the T.A.S. Park, when Jim says he knows there is a beauty just about where they are anchored. Dan knows that if it is there he will catch it and gets right down to business in earnest. In a very short time he has sized-up the situation so correctly that he gets a nibble, then the fun starts. Being an ardent and experienced fisherman, Dan plays this fish to perfection, has as much fun landing one as the average man half a dozen and when he has exhibited all his style to Jim he finally lands the swellest twelve pound lunge one would care to see.

Dan as a fisherman and Jim as a guide make a great team.

TWO TENANTS.

By Jane Ellis.

Marvin Dawes arrived in Oak Lawns on the 4 o'clock train from the city on November 1. He hailed a waiting station taxi to convey him and an assortment of bags and boxes that had arrived by an earlier train out the Cedar Swamp Road. He stopped at the post office on the way for the keys that were always left with the postmaster on October 31 and as often called for by Marvin Dawes on the following day.

The next day arrived the faithful Pat with Marvin's two saddle horses. It was a standing agreement between Marvin Dawes and Patrick Shean that on or closely following every November first he, Pat, should report for duty until the following May first.

"As usual" Marvin told Pat the day of the latter's arrival, "the place has been set in frightful confusion. They do it out of spite, I suppose. They set to work to turn the house into a summer cottage. The screens are still in. Those flimsy white curtains have been left in place of the heavy winter drapery. The porch is cluttered with a lot of new wicker chairs and things. You'll have to help me put the place back in condition for winter."

Marvin's grandfather before his death had been reluctant to leave the old homestead, an exceptionally well built house of twenty rooms and more, with several acres of well planted lawns and groves, to either of his daughters, who had become estrange d through the business quarrels of their husbands. So he had stipulated in his will that his daughter Lucy should have the entire use of the place from May 1 to the last day of October, while Clarice should have it from November 1 to the last day of April.

Clarice had died, leaving the right to the house to her son, Marvin Dawes, who had become so attached to the house in his boyhood that he never failed to arrange his affairs so that he could occupy it during the months of autumn and winter. Lucy, too, had died only a year before, and the right to occupy the house from May first to the last of October had been handed down to a grandniece of her husband, also named Lucy.

On the last day of April Marvin and Pat departed, leaving the keys as usual with the postmaster.

On May 1 Lucy arrived, with Irish Hannah in the guise of chaperon and general household assistant.

"It's a perfect shame," Lucy told Hannah, on the second of May, "the way that Marvin Dawes person upsets this place—takes down all the screens, stows away my white curtains and puts up those dreadful velour things; puts the wicker furniture in the attic and boards up the sleeping porch. It takes two weeks to get the place into decent shape for summer. I really think that something could be done about it. There was a will or something that made it perfectly clear that Aunt Lucy was to have her interests protected—and I am sure I ought to be, too."

So it was that toward the end of the next week, as soon as ever Lucy and Hannah had managed to get the old house into summer garb, Lucy made a flying trip to the city. She waited in the reception room for a few moments while the lawyer concluded his conversation with a previous caller.

"I've never met the person" said the caller, "and I've no desire to do so but I wish you'd look up the will and see whether you can't find some clause to protect me—perhaps I could buy out the young woman's share in the house."

"By the way," said the lawyer, "suppose you wait a moment. I may have something to tell you about the matter in question." So Marvin took the chair vacated by Lucy Brent, whom the lawyer now graciously bowed into his private office.

Lucy explained her perplexity. "I have never met this unreasonable Mr. Dawes and I have no desire to do so. He is, of course, no real relative—only a very distant connection."

The lawyer smiled. "I'm sorry that you don't want to meet him. He happens to be very anxious to meet you. In fact, he's in the reception room now. I was going to suggest that we go out to luncheon together and talk the whole matter over."

Lucy had noticed the young man in the reception room and—well, he was not the sort of man she would mind meeting. With feigned reluctance she consented.

"I've wanted to meet you," said Lucy. "You left some interesting sketches at the house that quite aroused my curiosity."

"And the way you transformed that old place with the curtains and wicker furniture!" exclaimed Marvin in a tone of deep admiration. "Is it possible that you did it without the aid of an interior decorator?"

And so it went. Somehow when Lucy left her lawyer's office that afternoon she had invited Marvin Dawes to come to the old house for the next week-end.

The following week the lawyer received two letters, one from Marvin and one from Lucy. "Hang the will" wrote Marvin. "The house is going to be an all-year-round home for the two of us." And Lucy said: "We are going to have a very quiet little wedding, only a few friends of Marvin's and mine, but we won't be happy unless you are one of the guests. A week from Saturday is the day we have arranged, and we do hope that you will find it convenient."

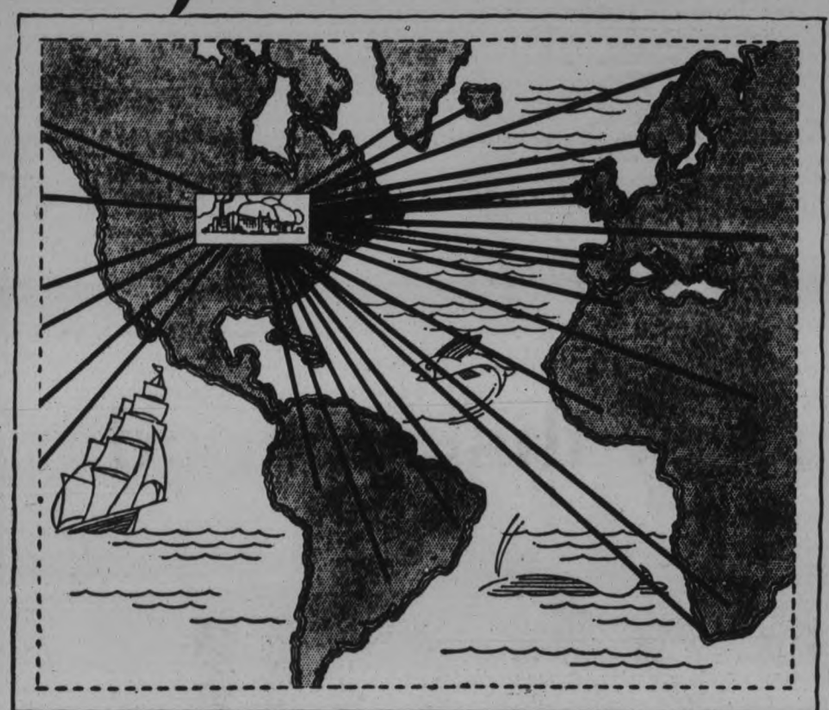
World Travel Bureau for TIRES



THE shipping room of the Goodyear factory at New Toronto is a veritable world travel bureau for tires.

August 13th shipments were sent to Angola, Guatemala, East London, Cape Town, Durban, San Juan, Port Elizabeth, Bulawayo, Famagusta, Lourenco Marquez, Beira.

On August 14th included were Buenos Aires, Valparaiso, Stockholm, London, Helsingfors, Paris, Calcutta, and 16 other foreign ports.

On August 15th—the list is 23—including Rosario, Santos, Antwerp, Demerara, The Hague, Zurich, Samarang, Singapore.

And so it goes, day after day, the whole year round. The world comes to New Toronto for tires.

Comes, because in every country in the world, as in Canada, Goodyear is acclaimed as the world's greatest tire.

And throughout the world, as in Canada, more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

This world-wide dominance has been gained on all kinds of cars, in all kinds of climates, over all kinds of roads, against all kinds of competition. It is the greatest endorsement which any tire has ever received.

You can quickly and easily get these good tires, for in every town in Canada large enough to support a good tire dealer there is a Goodyear Selected Dealer.

All Goodyear Tires are built of SUPER-TWIST Cords—61% more stretch and life than old-style cords

PRINCE INQUIRES ABOUT E.P. RANCH

Prince George Chats With the Mayor of Calgary During Stop.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 23. —Looking the picture of health, and apparently in the best of spirits, H. R. H. Prince George, known and beloved universally as Britain's sailor prince, passed through Calgary on Tuesday night over the Canadian Pacific lines en route to the Pacific coast to join H. M. S. Durban, on which he will serve as a full-fledged lieutenant.

The Prince only remained in Calgary during the changing of engines, and in the interval walked briskly up and down the platform accompanied by His Worship Mayor F. E. Osborne, and Brigadier General E. De B. Panet, head of the Investigation Dept. of the railway. He accompanied the Prince from Montreal, with Major Ulick Alexander, of the Coldstream Guards, comptroller of the Prince's household.

The Prince was much interested to know what the people of Western Ontario and of Alberta, particularly, thought of his brother's ranch. His Worship the Mayor, in replying to this, remarked among many other things that on Sunday week, according to Professor Carlyle, there were no less than 67 cars parked at the Pekisko ranch at the one time. His Royal Highness was assured that the livelliest interest was being taken by the people of the west in the ranch and that everyone hoped that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales would again visit Alberta at no distant date.

The Prince appeared to be much at home and he chatted affably with Mayor Osborne. He waved a friendly adieu to His Worship and those on the platform as the train rolled out of the station on its westward journey.

Drive with confidence---There are Dominion Tire Depots everywhere

THIS is the era of the chain store. Immense networks of grocery stores, hardware shops, drug and department stores, and gasoline stations, have spread like magic across the land.

And now, the great chain of tire service shops—Dominion Tire Depots.

Co-operative methods in the merchandising and servicing of tires had to come. We are proud to be connected with the pioneer organization in this field.

Away across the length and breadth of Ontario and Quebec spreads our network of depots. Scarcely a town but you will find a shop with the distinctive orange and blue front. The map above shows the location of depots in this locality.

Each of the hundreds of depots offers the most expert and courteous tire service obtainable in its locality. Although each is independently owned, all are links in this great chain of service shops which is sponsored by the largest rubber organization in Canada.

So now, you can drive with confidence — wherever you motor. There are Dominion Tire Depots everywhere.

Brakeliners Win the First Game of Play-Offs

Rays Hold Cobourg 13-11

Thirty-six Safe Hits Made in Heavy Barrage.

AT COBOURG.

Teams Will Play Second Game Here On Saturday.

One home run with the bases loaded, thirteen two-base clouts which with clusters of singles made a total of thirty-six safe swats, several of which fell into Lake Ontario, formed the barrage with which Raybestos and Cobourg pelted each other at the Lakeshore town yesterday afternoon when Raybestos won their first O.B.A.A. semi-final contest by the vigorous score of 13 to 11.

Cobourg led three pitchers to the slaughter, while Scotty Maudsley stayed with it until the ordeal became too hot with one out in the ninth. With Cobourg coming along strong, Masterson in a relief role saw the two batters to face him ground out via Hillier to Barry.

Baseball fans who look for plenty of action from the batters, should have a field day when the teams plays the second game here next Saturday afternoon.

The heavy gunning in yesterday's game gave both teams plenty of chances to show their fielding wares and the players, especially the infielders came through in fine style. There was some nifty work by Harold Nicholls and Hillier to get the runner at first, where Barry had a busy afternoon accepting sixteen chances. Butler, the veteran shortstop of the Cobourg team did a lot of effective work along with Markey and Ed. Campbell at first. The latter led the field with the willow by clouting out three consecutive two base hits.

From a pitching box minus the mound Maudsley got along fine for three innings, neither hit nor run being registered against him. In the fourth with one gone, W. Campbell, shot a single through Scully and away went the Rays' lead of five runs gained off Mann in the second and third. E. Campbell singled through third but Drumm grounded to H. Nicholls who touched his bag for a force. Landymore singled to fill the bags and when Cole drew a pass the first run came in. Then Mann hit deep between Corrin and Moore, for the longest drive of the game to score four runs. Scotty got the third out on the next batter, but the battle continued throughout the remainder of the contest, the Rays finishing the first of the ninth with a lead of six runs. But that didn't bother the ferry town athletes. Butler opened a rally with a double into the right field crowd. W. Campbell grounded out. E. Campbell doubled to score Butler. Drumm singled and Payne pinch hitting hit for two bases to score two more runs. Another single sent in a fourth runner and the Rays' lead was reduced to two counters. Masterson who had been warming up was sent in to replace Maudsley, the latter going to left field. Mann who had hit every time up grounded to Hillier and was thrown, out, and Markey also went out the same way.

The three pitchers sent in to labor for Cobourg were hit hard, and not one of the three was able to get three strikes on the Rays. Mann who opened the battle passed safely through a skirmish in the first frame but he was hit for two runs in the third, and a wild heave to third sent another run in. Oscar Nicholls had a double and it was Harold Nicholls' single that scored two. Singles by Moore and H. Nicholls drove in two more runs in the third.

Hillier, Rogers and Maudsley hit in a row in the sixth, Maudsley's double scoring two. A single by Barry and Harry Corrin's sacrifice fly accounted for another brace in the same frame.

Singles by Hillier and Rogers and Scully's double added two counters in the seventh and Hillier's double in the eight scored O. Nicholls who walked and H. Nicholls' who singled.

Leafs Win Doubleheader from Black Cats

VIEWS ON SPORT

Harrison and C.G.E. in softball fixture at Confederation Park to-night. Game will be called at 6 p.m. sharp.

Scotty Maudsley stayed with the battle until the ninth inning when he was replaced by Masterson who held the Ferry town boys for the final frame. Three hurlers were used by Cobourg in an effort to stem the heavy hitting of the local crew.

• • • • • • •

Both teams were given plenty of chances to show their fielding work in the heavy barrage of yesterday. Butler, the veteran on the Cobourg team did some neat work on short while Ed. Campbell starred at the bat with his three consecutive two base clouts.

• • • • • • •

Softball fans should make it a point to witness the tilt between Harrisons and the C.G.E. scheduled for to-night at Confederation Park. The outcome of this battle will settle which team goes into the play-offs with the DeLaval for the city championship. This is the final game of the schedule and from every indication it should be one of the most hard fought games of the season.

• • • • • • •

The Raybestos started off well in the intermediate O.B.A.A. semi-finals by defeating Cobourg in the first game of the play-offs at the Lake shore town yesterday. Meeting again here on Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition grounds the losers of yesterday's battle are out to put a rift in the sails of the locals and tie the series which will make a third game necessary, giving both teams an even chance for the honors.

The New York Herald Tribune has the following to say regarding the failure of the United States athletes to win more than one track event at the Olympic games held recently:

"Running is probably the oldest of sports. Probably the first friendly test of athletic rivalry in the world was a footrace. Among our trainers and athletes running seems to have taken a back seat. Much of our athletic attention is given to pole vaulting, high jumping, weight tossing and numerous other field events. The Europeans classify these events under acrobatics rather than athletics. To them running is still the fundamental sport.

"When one athletic trainer was asked why this country has no more good distance runners, he said that it took up too much time running long distances, and that the youth of the land had no longing for anything which takes up much time. The athletes of this era have become imbued with the spirit of modern life, which is to do something and get it over with as soon as possible."

GIANTS RETAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Brooklyn Holds Cards To Five Hits To Win 3-2 Victory.

GOTHAM WINS 5-4.

NEW YORK, August 23.—(Canadian Press).—Jess Petty and William Watson Clark held the Cardinals to five hits in the rubber game of the series at St. Louis and Brooklyn won by 3 to 2. This turn of fortune prevented the Red Birds for a second successive day, from regaining first place from the Giants, who retained the lead by a single percentage point after being defeated by Cincinnati, 5 to 4.

Petty held the Cardinals without a safety and permitted only two of the home players to reach base in the first five innings while his mates were piling up a three run lead for him off the slants of the venerable Clarence Mitchell.

Cincinnati got the big streak of the game when Jimmy Welsh slipped and fell in chasing Bill Zitman's fly with the bases filled in the fifth inning, permitting the drive to go for a triple. Zitmann himself came home a moment later on Kelly's single with what proved to be Cincinnati's winning run. Welsh was hurt so painfully that he retired from the game.

It took 12 innings, an error, and some excellent pitching by Artie Nehf to do it, but the Cubs finally beat Philadelphia, 3 to 2. Philadelphia had previously beaten Chicago 6 straight games.

Sand's error of Cliff Heathcotte's hot grounder enabled Maguire to score the winning run after one was out in the twelfth inning. Outside of the first inning when Nehf was nicked for three hits and made a wild pitch, the former Giant castoff hurled a fine game, limiting the Phillies to 10 scattered hits. It was his eleventh victory of the season against five defeats.

Ring and McGraw hurled for the Phillies and were touched for ten hits.

The hitting of Paul Waner and Pie Traynor was the high spot of the final game of the Pittsburgh-Boston series. The Pirates made it two out of three by winning 10 to 3.

Waner with a single, double and triple, drove in three runs and scored as many himself. While Traynor with two singles and a triple drove across three runs. Traynor's three bagger came with the bases loaded in the eighth.

ATHLETICS GAIN ON YANKEES

Haas' Homer Enables Philadelphia To Win 6-5 Decision From Cleveland.

NEW YORKERS IDLE.

NEW YORK, August 23.—(Canadian Press).—George Haas, first Athletic batsman in the seventeenth inning, finished the longest game of the American League season by driving an offering from Johnny Miljus over the right field fence and into an adjoining street for a home run. The smash enabled the Athletics to win by six to five from Cleveland and so reduce to five games the lead of the Yankees who remained idle because of rain.

George Uhle and George Earnshaw engaged in a pitchers' battle with the score tried at 1 to 1 until the eighth when both wilted.

The Indians combed Earnshaw for four runs, but the Mackmen come back in their own half to knock Uhle from the box with a three-run rally. Miljus permitted the home team to tie the score in the ninth, but Eddie Rommell held the Indians scoreless until Haas' home run won for him.

Detroit took both games of a double header from Boston yesterday by 7 to 6 and 4 to 3. The visitors now have won three successive one run victories from the Red Sox. Boston had 16 men left on base in the first game in which Sweeney, Detroit first baseman, performed sensationally. Pitcher Gibson made three hits in three times at bat and drove home three runs. Whitehill held the Red Sox to four hits in the second game. Heilmann drove in three runs in this contest and Tavener starred at short.

Young Ed Walsh pitched good ball for the White Sox but he was opposed to Hadley, Washington right-hander, who held Chicago to five hits, the Senators winning the second game of the series 2 to 0. Bluege's single in the first inning scored both runs. Walsh was removed in the seventh inning for a pinch hitter, Cox finishing the game.

Shut Out Cats 5 To 0 in Twilight Game, Take First 6 to 3.

LEAFS BACK IN FORM.

MAPLE LEAF STADIUM, Toronto, August 23.—Johnny Prudhomme came within an ace of pitching a no-hit game in the second contest of the day with Jersey City, which Toronto won by 5 to 0. For six and two-thirds innings he kept the Skeeters off the bases, but with two out in the final frame of the abbreviated fixture he threw four straight balls to Manger and Jerry Walsh followed with a drive at Burke's feet which might have been scored either way, but which was given as a hit. Head then rolled to Cote for the last out. It was a fine exhibition on the part of the youngster who last year shut out Reading without a hit. The Leafs won the first, 6 to 3.

BISONS IN FIFTH.

BUFFALO, N.Y., August 23.—(Canadian Press).—The speeding Buffalo Bisons landed in fifth place yesterday when they belted the skidding Newark Bears to a double defeat in a twin bill by scores of 5 to 4 and 3 to 0. A homer by Thomas with a man on, won the first game while Ogden was invincible in the second game, scoring his second consecutive shut out and fifth straight victory. It was the sixth consecutive victory for the Buffalo team. The resignation of S. L. Robertson as executive head of the Buffalo club was announced during yesterday's game.

SPLIT BILL.

MONTREAL, Que., August 23.—(Canadian Press).—The Orioles and the Royals divided the double-header played here yesterday afternoon, Baltimore winning the first game, 5-4, and the Royals taking the second by a 1-0 shut out. The Royals drove Lefty Bolen to cover in the eighth inning of the first game to score their four runs but the five tallies the Birds had made off Falk were too much of a handicap.

Herb Thormahlen held the Orioles to a lone hit in the second contest and scored a tight victory over Jing Johnson, of the Birds. Doubles by Haines and Daley gave the Royals their only run in the sixth. Thormahlen was in superb form and only two Orioles got as far as first base. He struck out seven and did not issue a base on balls. The only player to reach first on him besides Dixon, who singled in the sixth, was Barton, whom he hit with the count two and three.

PONTYPOOL LOSE 11-5 DECISION

Are Defeated By Nestleton in Ragged Game.

(Examiner Correspondence).

PONTYPOOL, Aug. 23—The League game between Nestleton and the Pontypool team on Saturday night proved to be a poor affair, the locals being defeated 11-5. The game was late in starting, and only four innings were played. Pontypool have entered a protest. Practically every one of the locals were off color, and the only one showing any form was Chapman, who fielded several hard chances on short and came through with a home run in the first inning. Clarke was hit harder than usual, and was given poor support, and Mitchell finished the game. The four Philip brothers were the Nestleton stars, Percy doing all the pitching and was given good support by his three brothers, with one on each base. Fred Philips' work on first was a feature, while Marlow's catching and heavy slugging helped considerably. If the protest is not allowed, the Nestleton team are the winners of the Hickling Cup which was won by Yelverton last year, Pontypool being in the semi-finals on both occasions.

The final play-off for the cup which was to have been played on Field Day, but owing to darkness was postponed until Monday night. The teams were Millbrook and Orono, and a fairly good crowd were present. Millbrook had two big innings, the third and fifth. Dawson, the Millbrook twirler, was given good support by his teammates, both in fielding and batting, and had the edge on the Orono twirler. The final score was 13-4 in favor of Millbrook.

The line-up:

Millbrook—Dawson, p; Dr. Young, c; Edmunds, 1b; Russel, 2b; Armstrong, 3b; Burnham, ss; Skitch, cf; Lancashire, rf; Britton, lf.

Orono—Riddel, p; J. Cornish, c; McNeil, 1b; West, 2b; Mercer, 3b; Cornish, ss; Pearson, cf; Winter, lf; Dean, rf.

By innings:

Millbrook ..... 1050700—13
Orono ..... 2100100— 4

Umpires—Hall, plate; Vance bases.

At the conclusion of the game the Millbrook team was presented with the cup by Memorial Park Society and L.O.L. Committee. Arrangements are being made for a game with the local team in the near future.

Press Criticizes Officials Of Federation And Olympic Leaders

BERLIN, 23.—(Canadian Press)—The German Amateur Athletic Federation, ruler of Teutonic track and field destinies, has a post-Olympic row on its hands.

Officials of the Federation and Olympic leaders are under a cross-fire of criticism from newspapers and track experts because of the alleged poor treatment of two of Germany's crack athletes — Dr. Otto Peltzer, the middle distance star, and Franz Wichmann, the sprinter.

The charges are that Peltzer virtually was ostracized during the team's stay at Amsterdam and was offered no encouragement in his efforts to defeat the middle distance stars of the world. Peltzer has run the half mile in world record time.

The treatment, the papers, say so unnerved the blonde racer that he failed to show anything like the form that characterized his previous running.

Wichmann was reported so disgusted with his experiences at Amsterdam that is determined never to compete again.

Herbert C. Hoover began his career in Australia as far as high finance and his business are concerned. While still a very young man his ability was noticed by a member of an English mining firm who sent him to Australia in 1898 to superintend operations at a big mining property in West Australia. The young American made good. Within a year or two he had become a partner in the firm and before he was 30 he had made his fortune.

NATIONALS DRIVE TWO HURLERS FROM MOUND AND WIN 13 TO 3

First Game of League Play-offs Easy Win For Belleville.

EIGHT IN SEVENTH.

Big Inning Sees Two Oshawa Moundsmen Depart and Breaks Up Nice Game.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 23.—(Special to The Examiner).—Clouting three Oshawa pitchers hard and often the Belleville Nationals went the first game of the central league play-offs here yesterday afternoon before two thousand fans by a score of 13-3.

It was a hollow victory, although spirited until the seventh innings, when Belleville scored eight runs and the interest lagged thereafter. The Nationals were by far the best on the afternoon's play, which was ragged at times. Dainty started on the mound for the Schultz-Burgoine crew but he vacated the pitching box in the seventh after Belleville had scored two runs, both of them forced in when the venerable "Duke" walked three men in a row. He was erratic and discouraged and, although the fault was not all his, he was weakening fast and without further ado signalled for relief. With three men on "Peg" Morrison went to the mound and although he forced "Bob" Scott to pop to third baseman. Gibson the next man up, tripled, scoring all three. Weir was walked and when Ross tripled Morrison sought the showers. Shaw went in to pitch and another run was scored before the side was retired. Shaw finished the game and the Nationals scored one more in the eighth on Hagerman's single. Gibson pitched nice ball for the Nationals, allowing seven scattered hits and striking out five.

Oshawas were the first to score in the second innings when Young was safe on a fielder's choice. Sutton singled and Quinn scored them on a pretty double. The Motors notched their other run in the fourth when Young was safe on a fielder's choice again and counted when Harry Mills made an error. Belleville had a great day at bat, emerging from their recent slump to bang out fifteen safeties. It remained for Matthews to make the feature catch of the day when he came in to snare Weir's drive in the eighth. The next game will be played at Oshawa on September first. Oscar Hett and Babe Sheppard, of Toronto, handled the game.

BRITISH GOLFERS PLAY AT MONTREAL

Compete in Senior's Tourney Between Britain, Canada and U. S.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—The golfers representing the British Seniors' Golfing Society, who will arrive here on Monday evening, will play over two local courses before moving on to Ottawa, another stopping place on their tour which will eventually take them to Rye, N.Y., scene of this year's international seniors' tournament between Great Britain, Canada and the United States.

On Tuesday the British Seniors will play at Royal Montreal, while on Wednesday, their last day in the city, they will have a round over the Mount Bruno course.

The British team won the international match last year in England on the first occasion when the event was a three-team match; and the Old Country representation this year is considered strong enough to have an excellent chance of repeating when the three countries meet over the Apawamis course on September 13 and 14.

The personnel of the British Senior Golfers follows: J. Beaumont Pease, Sir Milsom Rees, Admiral St. John Farquhar, Brig.-General R. M. Poore, F. H. Ashe, Herbert M. Hepworth, George C. Cassels, Lt.-Col. F. J. Popham, Dr. A. Mackenzie, Basil Hoare, H. W. Hewitt, L. C. V. Wilkes, J. C. Stewart, Alexander C. Joy, Douglas Clayton and H. Baker.

Canadians Lead American Entries

MARBLE HEAD, Mass., Aug. 23.—The Canadian boats are still ahead on points in the International yachting match here yesterday, raising the score to 18-12 by noon. Norman Gooderham, sailing the Hornet, defeated the Eastern Yacht Club vessel Venturer, in command of Charles Francis Adams, America's foremost racing skipper. T. K. Wade, in the Falcon, a Royal Canadian Yacht Club boat, finished third, after outsailing the Norn skippered by Devereux Barker.

The feature of the race was the duel between Barker and Wade for third and fourth positions. After being defeated at every tack up to the second mark, Barker ensured second place for his fellow skipper, Adams, by luffing a mile from his course. He sacrificed his own chances for third to do this.

TORONTO MAN IS KILLED.

Loses Control of His Car and Is Killed As It Overturns.

TORONTO, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—James Cresswell Auld, 33, Toronto, was instantly killed this morning, when he lost control of his car and it overturned into a ditch on North Yonge street.

LOCAL BOWLERS OUT OF RUNNING

Mayneord's Rink Defeated in Fourth Round—Doubles Team Lose.

Jack Mayneord and his rink of lawn bowlers lost out yesterday in the fourth round of the Toronto trophy at the Dominion Lawn Bowling Tournament in Toronto to F. Raney of the Toronto Canoe Club, the final score being 16 to 14. Mr. Mayneord's defeat put both the Peterborough rinks out of the rinks competitions as George Cairns was beaten the day before. Cairns' rink split up yesterday in the doubles with George Cairns and Mark Bredin, beating Jamieson and Atherton of Norway 15 to 12 in the preliminary of the doubles. In the first round they defeated Gallanough and McKay of Toronto 12 to 10. In the second round Outman and Scott of Toronto put them out of the running 19 to 14. Walter Oke and R. D. Bacon won their game in the first round, beating Sneddon and Young of Kew Beach 15 to 13 but they lost out in the second round to Kerr and Vance of Toronto, 19 to 11.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

NEW FILM AT THE REGENT.

Irene Rich Wins Praise as "Dearie."

The night club hostess, that gracious and mysterious personage, has at last found an interpreter, for it is as "Dearie," singer in a Broadway cabaret, that Irene Rich stars at the Regent.

"Dearie" is not only a night club entertainer but mother to a son, whose college expenses she is paying by her work. The lad is expelled and pacifies his mother by saying that he has written a novel which will be the sensation of the year. Believing him to be a literary genius, she does not doubt this, but trembles with apprehension when she hears that he means to take it to Samuel Manley, a man who has been disagreeably attentive to her. The lad knows a jazzy co-ed who is a niece of Manley, and through her, meets the great publisher.

The manuscript is returned, and the boy in a drunken fury, starts for the publisher's house to kill him. The mother gets there before him and when he enters, hides, lest he see that she is the "Dearie," with whose ill fame he begins to taunt the publisher. A fight ensues in which the singer is shot. The boy not knowing that she is wounded denounces her bitterly and leaves, vowing never to see her again. Manley rushes her to a hospital. She rallies.

Luigi, the kindly proprietor of the club, who has been her protector, comes with an offer of marriage. The lad brings the little co-ed and all ends happily as things should.

This is but a bare outline of a picture that is splendidly dramatic, and suffused with tender and gripping humanity. The supporting cast is excellent and the direction and photography leave nothing to be desired. "Dearie" is one of the really worthwhile pictures, with Irene Rich at her wistful and charming best.

Last showing at the Regent to-day.

Millbrook

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, August 23.—Mr. and Mrs. John Spence, and their daughters, Misses Gertrude and Elsie, motored to Warkworth on Sunday and were guests of Rev. F. H. and Mrs. Howard at the parsonage. Miss Margaret Howard accompanied them home and remained until Wednesday calling upon a number of her former friends while here.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Howe and daughter, Peggy, and Mrs. O. E. Burnham returned home on Sunday evening after a pleasant motor trip to Ottawa and Montreal.

George Needler, of Toronto, is the guest of his uncle and aunt, Mr. A. A. and Miss Etta Needler this week, coming from the city by motor.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong of Toronto; Mrs. (Dr.) Lugsdin and Miss May O'Brian, of Buffalo, were in town this week, the former as guests of her mother, Mrs. S. Eakins, and the latter guests of Mrs. W. and Miss May O'Brian called here to attend the funeral of Mr. H. R. Armstrong, which took place on Wednesday.

Mr. Eric Lefroy, of Toronto, has recently been the guest of Reeve W. T. and Miss Margaret Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. Norton McBrian, of Lindsay, were recent guests of his sister, Mrs. Alex Wilson, Main street.

Among those from Millbrook and vicinity who went to the West on the harvesters' excursion this week were: S. Bonner, Jack Stephenson, Harold Hawken, Edwin Hutchison, Lawrence Rowland Charlie Larmer, H. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gray.

Mrs. R. J. Doak and son, Albert, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bolton Price, Orillia, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Doak, Windsor, have now returned home.

Ralp and Dorothy Edmison of Deseronto are visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Sutton.

The many friends of Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard, of Warkworth, formerly of Millbrook, will be glad to learn that she is convalescing favorably after a minor operation in the Belleville hospital.

Miss Mary Howard, B.A., has secured a position on the staff of the Collegiate Institute at Cornwall for the ensuing year, when school reopens in September.

Mrs. V. C. Lambert, and two boys, Venner and Alvin, are visiting friends at Port Burwell this week, the trip being made by motor.

At the end of a hot and lazy summer day...

As the sun goes down and the shadows begin to creep across the veranda, a cool breeze stirs and you welcome the evening. And to accompany the promise of the coolness to come, pour yourself a glass of ice-cold "Canada Dry."

It sparkles and cheers you from its bubbling crystal depths. Savor its bouquet as you sip it. Feel its tingle of goodness and refreshing taste on your tongue. And know that you are drinking a real ginger ale made from real Jamaica ginger.

You'll never know how good a ginger ale can be until you taste this delicious beverage. Dry. Mellow. Full-bodied. With a subtle gingery taste and a secret method of carbonation which enables it to retain its sparkle long after the bottle is opened. Pure. Balanced so skilfully that it mixes deliciously with other beverages.

Frost Reports Cause Increase In Prices

CHICAGO, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Frost reports from Canada, together with the prediction of more frost to-night helped bring about early upturns to-day in wheat values here. Besides, Liverpool wheat quotations were higher than were looked for and better demand there was reported. Opening ⅝c to 1⅜c up, Chicago wheat scored additional gains and then reacted somewhat. Corn was relatively easy, starting ⅛c to ⅝c higher, but subsequently sagging to below yesterday's finish. Oats displayed firness.

Opening prices: Wheat, September 110⅛. December 115⅝. Corn, September 89¾, December 73⅛. Oats, September 36¼, December 39⅛.

Basin and Malartic Exchange Leaders

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Sudbury Basin and Malartic were two points of interest on the Standard Stock Exhange this morning, active bidding in both stocks sending their prices upward for substantial gains, the noon close of Sudbury Basin was $7.60 for a net increase of 45 cents, while a rise of five cents in the price of Malartic moved it up to $1.54. Total of 891,075 shares of this later stock changed hands. Hollinger continues to decline and on sales of more than four thousand shares, lost forty cents at $9.10. Noranda also lost ground, selling as low as $54.50 and closing 25 above this level for a net loss of $1.25. McIntyre dropped twenty cents to $20.50 elsewhere through list firmness was shown.

Market Is Steady No Sharp Gains

TORONTO, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—A general steady tone was noticeable in most of the stocks on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day with no substantial gains in any issues, all leaders remaining at their opening level or falling fractions of points. Canada Dredge was the favorite this morning with 302 shares of this stock changing hands for a net loss on its value of a half point. Brazilian remained unchanged at 54½, International Nickel was off ¼, Cockshutt Plow was up ⅝ to 28, Canadian Industrial Alcohol gained ¼ and Massey Harris was unchanged. Losses and gains were about even on the unlisted board.

British American Oil was off ⅝ point to 57¾, Canada Dry was up ½, Canada Cement climbed to 99⅝ for a gain of ⅝, while International Petroleum receded ¼ to 38¼.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 23.— The mining market has been pretty draggy this week. Some favorable reports have been sent down on one or two issues but the stocks rarely responded. Bidgood livened somewhat as a result of a report which states that an entirely new vein, showing a good amount of free gold, has been uncovered on a portion of their property about 100 feet from the Moffats Hall line. This is the latest of a series of favorable reports on this property. The first was that the company was in good ore in their raise from 400 to 600 feet. This was followed by statements that the workings on the recently established 500-foot sub-level were in good ore. Then came an official statement that a new vein was discovered on the surface at about the centre of the property, one-half mile from the shaft. This discovery shows considerable free gold and tellurides. Now comes word of another rich vein being found on surface at about 100 feet from the Moffatt Hall line.

During the last few days the mining camps have been fairly evenly represented in reports on developments with the exception of the Cadillac-Malartic section. This big new gold camp is usually in the picture. The latest from here, however, is that Malartic Gold cut into a new 6-foot wide ore body in a crosscut on the 350-foot level. The ore was said to average $15 to the ton. The shaft at the Malrobic is reported to be well down and that considerable free gold was exposed in the way down. All the Cadillac-Malartic properties have their quota of free gold on surface and in the shaft.

A wire from the Vancouver office of Solloway, Mills & Co., states that crosscut No. 902 of the Kootenay Florence shows between five and six feet of mixed ore containing galena and iron pyrite, and to date this has been drifted on for a length of 204 feet. This ore is said to run parallel to the lake level adit, and approximately 300 feet to the north. Crosscut No. 906, about 540 feet nearer the face, is in 30 feet, and has about that much more to go to intersect the same ore body, if it maintains its present trend. Two weeks' time should definitely prove the importance of this strike.

A report from Rouyn states that an extension of the copper find on the Calumet, situated about one mile west of Lake Fortune, has now been picked up about 600 feet to the west of where the original discovery was made. The vein is said to be almost solid chalcopyrite where exposed, and is reported to average about 30 inches in width and to be lying in the centre of a sejisted sone about 60 feet in width. What appears to be an eastern extension of the copper showing is in the shape of a quarts vein, about four feet wide, and according to the consulting engineer, Mr. Julius Cohen, this assayed in channel sampling up to $8 per ton.

A report from Rouyn is to the effect that a small gasoline-driven compressor will be set up very shortly on the Buffalo-Rouyn property, when shaft sinking will commence. Several diamond drill holes have been put down with varying result. Three holes are reported to have intersected ore of narrow width, running from $8 to $30 near 300 foot horizon. Buffalo, New York, men, are behind this venture.

Scarab Mines Limited, operating in the Central Manitoba field, should have their program of surface exploration completed any day now, when the advice of an independent engineer of high repute will be secured in order to determine the future plans of the company.

Huge Mining Merger Rumored

What may turn out to be one of the largest mining consolidations in the Dominion is mooted on the Street. The names of four companies are mentioned in connection with the deal and although nothing definite or official can be learned, it is said by an official of one of the companies which will be involved of negotiation entered into for the purchase of a controlling interest in a holding and operating company that will give control or a large share holding in at least two of the mining properties mentioned.

IN POLICE COURT

The story of farm help quitting in the middle of the harvest to go west on the harvesters' excursion and the farmer refusing to pay the wages due was re-told in Police Court this morning. William Harrison, an English boy, who has been working to G. W. Fife, of the Township of Otonabee, since June 4, wanted to go west on the excursion, so he told Mr. Fife on July 30th that he was leaving on August 20. When the time to leave came Mr. Fife refused to pay the boy his wages, as he claimed he had been hired by the month. The boy took his case to the Police Court, and there this morning Mr. Fife agreed to pay the sum of $30 and $5.00 costs.

J. A. O'Brien appeared for Mr. Fife and W. F. Huycke for the boy. The boy was the only witness called, and in his story it was revealed that there had been no written agreement and that he was to get $25.00 a month. In cross-examination by Mr. O'Brien, the boy acknowledged leaving Mr. Fife last year and that at present part of Mr. Fife's crop was not harvested.

The claim was for $42, and before any defence witnesses were called His Worship said in his time on the bench he had followed the precedent laid down by the late Judge Weller that as the Servants and Employees' Act was so severe that if a farmer was careless enough not to have an agreement signed the employee should be given the benefit. He suggested settling the claim with $30 and costs, which was accepted by both men.

Charles Storms of Peterborough recently paid $5.00 and costs in the Port Hope Police Court for failing to carry a light on his trailer.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARTHUR GELINEAU

After a lengthy illness, there passed away at her late residence, 47 Park street south, on Wednesday, August 22, Mrs. Mary Gelineau, wife of Arthur Gelineau, at the age of 47 years. Deceased had come to this city from Capreol about two years ago and attended Sacred Heart Church.

Left to mourn are four daughters, Beatrice of Toronto, Mrs. Lecombe of Ottawa, Irene and Maria at home; also one son Alfred at home. Funeral announcement later.

Marathon runner under cut
El Oufi, of French Morocco, a dispatch bearer in the French army during the war, was the winner of the Olympic marathon at Amsterdam, from the largest and perhaps the best field of runners that ever took part in the Olympic classic. Although the Moor finished in the first ten in the Olympic marathon at Paris in 1924 he was not considered dangerous in this year's event. His victory therefore was a huge surprise.

Missing Clergyman in Canada?

LIQUOR EXPORT PROBLEM SOON TO BE SETTLED

Question of Storage at Border Involved in the Discussions.

EXPORTS NOT ILLEGAL.

Situation is Potentially Same in All of Canadian Provinces.

OTTAWA, Aug. 24. — Difficulties which keep cropping up over the enforcement of the liquor laws in regard particularly to export, involve points upon which the opinion of the justice department has just been asked. It is largely the outcome of last week's conference between Sir Henry Drayton, head of the liquor control board of Ontario, and the minister of national revenue.

The specific questions have not been made public but, in a general way, light is sought upon the powers of the Dominion government in regulating liquor exports. While Ontario is the storm centre of the difficulty, the situation is potentially the same in all of the provinces.

These points, in one form or another, keep rising from time to time in different cases, notably in the action instituted against brewers and distillers to recover sales taxes which the customs inquiry auditors found to have been evaded.

Exports Not Illegal.

The fact that the United States, officially at least, is "dry," while nearly all of the Canadian provinces are "wet," does not, under the rulings given, make illegal the export of liquor from one country to the other. Distinction is drawn between an act of the government and of the individual. In view of the international treaty such a thing as Canadian government export of liquor to the States would be an unfriendly act, but this does not apply to individuals in Canada who, as a business transaction, sell her to American buyers and who deliver to near border points.

Short Circuiting.

As to the "short circuiting," of which Ontario complains, the ostensible export of liquor which really is kept and sold illegally in Canada —the legislation of last session is considered helpful. It conferred on the provinces the exclusive right of importing liquor, but an exception was made of liquor in transit through a province. Individuals may bring it in and send it out, but it must be by a common carrier, which is held to include a motor truck.

Liquor Warehouses.

The assumption is also that it must be kept moving. Great doubt is expressed as to the legality of private exporters storing liquor in their own warehouses, as has been done at Windsor.

All the points of obscurity in the law as it stands are sought to be cleared up. While, as stated, there is nothing illegal in the export of liquor fom a wet to a dry country, it is within the competence of parliament to so legislate as to make such an enterprise illegal. Any such disposition, however, has never been disclosed.

AMATEUR SAYS HE HAS HEARD FROM ROCKFORD

Other Radio Men Doubt Authenticity of Wireless Message.

DOWN ON ISLAND.

Message Says Plane Had To Land On Island Near Newfoundland.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.— (Canadian Press.)— A wireless message signed "The Rockford Fliers" was received in Chicago early to-day by R. Harris, amateur operator, over a wave length of 42.8.

The message said the monoplane Greater Rockford was down on a small island 50 miles off Newfoundland and that the fliers were safe. Failure of the oil feed forced them down early Sunday morning, the message said. "The only way you can get to us," the message said, "is by ship. Our position is on a small island 50 miles off Newfoundland."

The food supply, the message said, was running low and the power by which the wireless set was operating was supplied by a generator. Although Harris sought to obtain more detailed information concerning exact location of plan, he was unable to do so. An efrort to arrange later hour for continuance of conversation resulted in a message coming through that the fliers would call Harris to-morrow night at 9 p.m. central standard time.

Harris said he was confident the message was bona fide, but other amateurs expressed the opinion that there were several discrepancies which led them to doubt it came from the Greater Rockford.

These amateurs pointed out that neither Bert Hassell nor Parker Cramer, the fliers, had more than a sketch knowledge of wireless, while Harris stated the signals came through as though from the hand of a veteran wireless operator. Doubt, too, was expressed that power could have been supplied by the generator, and Don Mix, builder of the Greater Rockford's radio, declared it could not operate on the wave length on which the signals came.

CHILDREN AT JACKSON PARK PROVIDE OWN AMUSEMENTS

Boys and Girls Rivals in Presentation of Concerts Recently.

GAIN IN HEALTH.

Substantial Meals and Outdoor Life Make Great Improvement in Little Ones.

A bathing beauty contest was one of the features of the concert presented on Wednesday afternoon of this week at the Children's Camp at Jackson Park. The little boys prepared the program entirely by themselves, and exhibited a great deal of ingenuity in carrying out the various items. They presented, in pantomime, the business of driving an automobile. With the aid of paper bags, they caused a loud explosion of imaginary tires and then had a strenuous time "pumping up" the youngster who impersonated the tube, lying flat under a gunny sack.

"The Burial of Sir John Moore" in recitation, was another item, and the bathing beauties brought out entrants from all over the world, including "Miss London," "Miss Paris," "Miss Montreal," and "Miss Dublin." The prize went, of course, to "Miss Canada."

A very funny affair was the "kitchen band," with musical instruments improvised by means of lids of saucepans, spoons and dishpans. The boys wore aprons and the leader beat time with a rolling pin.

A "mock wedding," featured the girls' concert, presented the week previously. Owing to an attack of shyness among the boys, the masculine characters were impersonated by ladies, with one small youth consenting to act as the father and give the bride away. Veils and wreaths and bridal outfits were used for this presentation, the concert including also a program of songs, recitations and dances, and a brief playlet.

The children at the camp, where, during eight weeks, between two and three hundred boys and girls have been looked after in periods of from two to five weeks apiece, according to their physical condition, show the improvement which marks their health after their annual summer outing at the camp. They have a regular daily routine of three goods meals, a swim in the creek and recreation periods which include swinging and playing ball under the trees or taking part in various games. They have toys and picture books to while away the hours spent in the lovely park.

The houseskeeper, Mrs. E. Smith, is completing her fourth year in charge of the culinary activties at the camp, while this year's nurse is Miss F. Vickers, with plenty to do in looking after so many children. An idea of the time consumed in feeding them along may be gained from a brief outline of the provisions used in one day, when eleven large loaves of bread and five pounds of butter, with forty quarts of milk and quantities of vegetables, is the average.

Ladies of the Peterborough Health Association supervise the activities of the camp during the summer months and the Kiwanis Club, as was the case last season, pays for the upkeep.

A major item in the supervision of the children's health is the regular inspection by various physicians of the city, who give their services to the work. In consequence of these visits, proud victims have the opportunity of telling impressed visitors all about the small operations they undergo. Removal of tonsils and of adenoids is the most popular form of suffering and the children.

Salvation Army, Dance, Gospel Wagon Village Street Offers Great Variety

FENELON FALLS, Aug. 24.—In this village, citizens are taking the campaign for a new Town Hall seriously. Chief among the methods being employed to raise money for this worthy purpose has been the holding of a series of street dances which have been largely attended and have provided entertainment not only for a large majority of Fenelon citizens, either as spectators or dancers, but also for many people from Lindsay and other communities in the district.

But they take their religion seriously as well and while last night's dance was in full swing, one witnessed the unusual spectacle of a band of Salvation Army workers holding service immediately across the intersection from the dance while at the other end of the street party, the Baptist Gospel Wagon held forth in brave perseverance. That Town Hall's going to be held in doubt by many!

WIDESPREAD AIR MAIL SYSTEM PROMISED BY HON. PETER VENIOT

Postmaster General Speaks at Aviation Luncheon at London.

DAILY SERVICE..

Nucleus of Service Will Be Daily Planes Between Toronto and Montreal.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 24 (Special to The Examiner).—An early inauguration of the air mail service on a wide scale between various important Canadian cities and on international routes tieing in with the United States air mail, was forecast by Hon. P. J. Veniot, Postmaster-General of Canada, in a Kiwanis Club aviation luncheon to-day at the London Airport. The celebration marked the arrival from Windsor and the despatch to Toronto of Western Ontario's first air mail plane, plying a transprovincial course experimentally. Thirty commercial and army pilots and others prominent in Canadian aviation attended.

"The nucleus of our service," said the Postmaster-General, "will be a daily one between Montreal and Toronto, nor is it my intention to stop there. Toronto and Windsor, via Hamilton, and your own airport at London, may also enjoy in the not too distant future, a similar service. A service may also be inaugurated between Toronto and Buffalo, should it be possible for my officials to reach some satisfactory reciprocal arrangements with the United States officials at Washington."

STUDY LOSSES IN KILN-DRYING LUMBER.

Losses in kiln-drying lumber have been under intensive study by the Forest Products Laboratories of the Department of the Interior, Canada, for some time. As a result of these investigations, the laboratories have been able to suggest improvements in kiln operation which have already resulted in a marked reduction in the average loss from faulty drying.

Permit Killing Of Incurables

LONDON, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—The Express quotes an article in a Prague newspaper to the effect that the infliction of pain's death on sufferers from incurable disease will be legalized in Czecho Slovakia. The written approval of two doctors will be necessary, the paper states.

FRANCE GREETS PREMIER KING

Canadian Statesman Lands at Havre With Secretary Kellogg.

GIFTS PRESENTED.

HAVRE, France, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Premier Mackenzie King of Canada and Frank B. Kellogg, United States Secretary of State, landed on French soil here early to-day and were received by Mayor Meyer of Havre and a crowd of people lining the dock, which was decorated by the flags of the nations which are to sign the treaty for the renunciation of war in Paris on Monday.

The distinguished visitors remained in Havre only a few minutes before entering the special train placed at their disposal by the French Government, and continuing their journey to Paris. After the official welcoming ceremonies, Premier King was presented with a medal as a memento of his visit, and Mr. Kellogg received a fountain pen with which he will sign the treaty.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

A BRIEF REVIEW OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION IN CANADA. ARTICLE II.

THE TECHNICAL EDUCATION ACT

An act before the Dominion House in 1914 but delayed on account of the Great War became effective in 1919. This act was known as the Technical Education Act. Under the terms of this act technical education included any form of vocational, technical, or industrial education, or instruction approved by agreement between the minister (of labour) and the government of any province.

PURPOSE OF THE ACT.

This act evolved from recommendations of the Royal Commission of 1910 and was designed to promote and assist technical education in Canada.

HOW PURPOSE WAS ACCOMPLISHED

The sum of ten million dollars was set aside to be distributed to the provinces of the Dominion over a period of ten years (expires March 1929.) The method of distribution was such as to require a province to spend on this form of education an amount at least equal to the dominion grant. Provision was also made such that provinces with sparse population were not handicapped.

THE VOCATIONAL ACT OF ONTARIO.

With the Technical Education Act of 1919 passed by the Dominion Government it remained to the various provinces to enact legislation which would satisfactorily expend the federal and provincial grants.

In 1921 the provincial government of Ontario passed the Vocational Education Act, effective July 1st. This act provided for the establishment and development of the vocational schools giving instruction in industrial, home-making, art, technical, commercial and agricultural subjects.

MAN RESEMBLING DR. HUTCHISON CROSSED TO QUEBEC RECENTLY

Wore Layman's Garb On Voyage, But Changed Before Landing.

QUARREL WITH WARDENS.

Missing Clergyman Also In Difficulties With His Creditors.

LONDON, Aug. 24 (Special Cable, Copyright, by Henry Somerville).—The disappearance of Rev. Dr. Franklyn Hutchinson, Rector of Doddinghurst, Essex, and Joint Principal at St. Peter's College, Lewisham, is proving a first class sensation in England.

Dr. Hutchinson, on July 31, wrote a colleague at the college to bid him good-bye and to intimate that a "rotter" had deprived him of happiness. This was taken to mean that some other man had taken his wife.

Enquiry at the C.P.R. steamship offices show that a Franklyn Johnson, aged 41, married, of the Church of England, sailed on the Empress of Scotland on August 4. He joined the ship at Cherbourg. He gave his destination as the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, and was described as entering Canada as a settler.

Steamship officials, it is stated, identified the passenger as Dr. Hutchinson from photographs in the newspapers. They say he was in layman's clothes when boarding the ship but changed into clerical dress at Quebec and went into the emigration shed. The saloon steward said he had talked of taking up educational work in Canada.

Dr. Hutchinson, who is said to be well known in Canada, holding a degree from the University of Toronto, quarrelled with his church wardens because he insisted on spending money on the church without having funds to meet expenses.

It transpires that he bought a non-clerical hat and suit of clothes just before leaving Doddinghurst.

One of the incidental mysteries in the case was cleared up to-day with the re-apparance of Herbert Straw, for many years Dr. Hutchinson's butler. He disappeared four days before the rector. He now turns up to tell a straight-forward story. He says he got a letter while on his holidays in which the rector told him he must look for work elswhere, enclosing a testimonial.

Miss Laura Thickett, aged 24, Hutchinson's private secretary now admits having received a farewell from the rector six days after he started on his holidays. It was reported yesterday that the Bishop of Chelmsford received a letter from Hutchinson resigning his living and that the letter bore a postmark near the home of Miss Thickett's parents.

Miss Thickett, who says she knows nothing of this, refuses to discuss the rector's private affairs, but it is known that he was pressed by creditors.

DOLLAR DAY VALUES AGAIN TO-MORROW

Second of the Twin Dollar Days Will Give All Values Advertised For To-day and New Lists.

Dollar Day started out this morning with a tremendous rush of business, but got a setback from the showers. During late morning and afternoon, business has been steady. Those who ventured downtown were practically all purchasers.

The merchants will give the same values to-morrow as they did to-day but augmented with many other values, equally good, and in some cases better than ever before.

There is the probability of a very large influx of out of town shoppers to-morrow. The farmer will not be able to work at the harvest, and will no doubt seize the opportunity to get some of the great offerings in our stores.

FRANCE NEEDS SECURITY.

Cannot Leave Rhineland Without Guarantee, Streseman Will Be Told.

PARIS, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press) —That the occupation of the Rhineland constitutes a security which cannot be relinquished without some compensatory guarantee is understood to be the gist of the answer France will make should Foreign Minister Stresemann raise the question during his visit here.

HAS HAD MORE PROPOSALS THAN ANY OTHER WOMAN.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—Cupid's emissary has arrived in Toronto and is registered at the King Edward Hotel in the person of Mrs. Nellie Brooke Stull, of Elyria, O. She is president-organizer of the Widows' and Widowers' Club.

Mrs. Stull is here to assist a Toronto widow of wealth to secure a companion and husband for the remaining days of her life. And this Toronto woman refuses to look at Mrs. Stull's most aristocratic client. Prince Paul Salvitore, of Poland, because even after living in Toronto for years, she still prefers a man from the Queen City.

Mrs. Stull styles herself a love expert, and looks very much like her countrywoman, Elinor Glyn. Mrs. Stull is tall, well built, with pretty black curling hair and sapphire blue eyes, and is a direct descendant of Lord Brook, of Warwick, Eng. She has been married twenty years, "to her first love," she says, but claims that in spite of it has received more proposals of marriage than any woman in the world.

"Yes, I am sure I have had more proposals of marriage than any other woman in the world," Hymen's aide laughed. "I have had 15,002."

HERB WOLFF PASSES AWAY IN TORONTO

Popular Ball Player Succumbs To Infection Which Reached Brain.

ILL ONLY FEW DAYS.

Got Up To Go To Belleville On Wednesday, But Suffered Relapse Before Leaving.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OSHAWA, August 24.—Herb Wolff, star ball player on the Oshawa Central League team, died at ten o'clock last night at St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, from paralysis and inflammation of the brain and spinal cord, caused by an infection. His sudden and untimely death came as a shock to all his friends and the athletic world in particular, where he was popularly known. He became ill only a week ago but it was not thought to be serious. Leaving his bed to make the trip to Belleville, where Oshawa played on Wednesday in the first game of the league play offs, he suffered a relapse however before leaving the house, and was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital, living but two days longer. Dr. Cruise of Toronto, who attended him, said that death from the malady frequently resulted in a few days.

Herb was married and leaves his wife and three small children to mourn his loss, besides his parents and brothers in Peterborough.

He came here last year from Bowmanville after leaving Peterborough, and was employed in the Central Receiving Department of General Motors here, leaving a few months ago to accept a position at Grinnell's, Ltd., in Toronto, where he was employed at the time of death.

Herb Wolff was the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wolff, 452 Donegal street. He is survived by several brothers and sisters.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

Pat Taylor Missing 14 Days

Man With Whom He Left Said He Was Working For Government.

LETTER RECEIVED.

Nothing Heard From Lad Since Aug. 15—Police Seeking Man.

COBOURG, Aug. 24 (Special to The Examiner).—Pat Taylor, a 15-year-old boy of Cobourg, has been missing from his home since Friday, August 10. On that day the boy left his home declaring that he was going to Toronto with his employer, a man giving his name as LaChance, who had falsely represented himself as an employe of the government, who had been sent to Cobourg to make some measurements on the Esplanade.

Police all over the province have been notified and an intensive search has been conducted, but no trace of the missing boy has been reported. Wednesday morning of last week, however, a letter, presumably written by Pat Taylor, was received by his mother which afforded some temporary relief. The letter, evidently genuine as far as the hand-writing was concerned, requested that clothes be sent to the Walker House, Toronto, where he could call for them. The boy also assured his parents that he was getting along well and would probably return home the first of the week. The letter further stated that he was working with LeChance in Hamilton and Dundas.

A snapshot of the boy was enclosed which he stated was taken at Sunnyside. The tone of the letter appeared to indicate that the boy was still being deceived by LaChance in thinking that he was working for the government.

Toronto police have been investigating the case and a detective has been keeping close watch on the Walker House, but no trace of Taylor or LaChance has resulted from the investigations.

The description of the missing boy has been broadcast from Toronto radio stations. His mother cannot understand why her boy does not return home and she believes the letter a fake, thinking that the man who took her son forced him to write the letter to his parents.

LICENSE FEES TO BE REDUCED

Car Permits Will Cost Half As Much After Sept. 1.

DRIVING FEE UNCHANGED.

A reduction in certain of passenger and commercial vehicles licenses is announced in the notice received at the Chamber of Commerce, license issuing department, within the past day or so. J. B. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, has sent out the following memorandum:

Commencing on the first day of September, the fees for passenger car, commercial and "X" permits are reduced to one-half of the usual amount. This reduction in fees does not apply to operators' licenses or transfers.

FACE DAMAGE ACTION.

Harry Sweet Enters Action Against Durham, Northumberland anid Hastings Counties.

The municipalities of Hastings and the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland are named as defendants in an action for damages entered in the county court by Harry Sweet of Port Hope. The amount of the claim is $200.

Fiancee Goes Out With Another Man; Fight And Court Case End Engagement

Angered at the other man for having the girl who wore his diamond at Rye's Pavilion for the dance on Tuesday evening, Richard Fuller struck Frederick Stokes and appeared in police court this morning charged with assault The young lady came along with Stokes as a witness and the climax of the whole case came when, after Fuller had pleaded guilty and Stokes had told His Worship about the happenings of that night, Fuller stepped over to the girl as he was leaving the court room and asked her for his ring. She faltered, her hand trembled, as if she did not want to give it up, but in an instant she slipped it off her finger and placed it in Fuller's hand.

Fuller pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $10 and costs amounting to $20.25 in all.

Switzerland Rejects Plan Proposing Erection of Wireless Station At Geneva

GENEVA, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Switzerland has rejected a plan by which the League of Nations would erect an independent wireless station here. It has agreed, however, to allow the League to control a proposed new station in time of international crisis.

In the latter case the Swiss government made plain in a communication to the League to-day that it would want the right to appoint an observer to follow and report on the League's wireless activities.

The problem will in all likelihood be debated at the meeting of the League assembly as some statesmen are said to belive that the extra-territoriality enjoyed by the League of Nations carries the privileges of maintaining an independent wireless station and also an independent aerodrome

Harvesting Is Near Finish

Grain and Seed Treshing Well Under Way at Bailieboro.

OATS ARE POOR.

Farm Help Is Still Scarce in Many Parts.

BAILIEBORO, Aug. 24 (Examiner Correspondence)—The grain and seed threshing in this locality is now well under way. The yields of the various grains is fair this season considering the backward seed time and harvest. Fall wheat is averaging from twenty to thirty-five bushels per acre. Oats are yielding poorly in the majority of cases. Peas are threshing about twenty to thirty bushels per acre.

The alsike yield is exceptionally poor. The highest yield known in this vicinity as yet is three and a fraction bushels per acre, which was threshed at Mr. R. Armstrong's.

The farmers are now finishing up their harvest, preparing their land for fall wheat and cutting and drawing in alfalfa, which is an excellent crop, the second cutting being almost as heavy as the first was.

Farm help is still very scarce and it will even be scarcer now that so many have left for the west.

QUEBEC AYRSHIRE WORLD'S CHAMPION

Nellie Osborne, of Elmsdale 16, Leads in Milk and Butter Production.

MONTREAL, Aug. 24.—Nellie Osborne, of Elmsdale 16, Ayrshire champion in milk and butter fat production in 1924, owned by W. C. Wylie, of Montreal, and of Howick, Que., where the famous cow grazes, is now the official champion of the world in milk and butter fat production, according to Frank Napier, secretary of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association. The official figures of her year's production, the reckoning of which was completed this week, are: 27,197 pounds of milk and 1,257 pounds of butter fat.

Several details of this new record are uncommon. One is that Nellie is one of the few cows that have ever held the world's record for both milk and butter fat output at the same time. Then, according to Mr. Napier, she is the first cow to hold the record of both scores in this country.

Another thing, says Mr. Napier, by this record production Nellie, who is nine years old and weighs 1,200 pounds, which is an average weight, has multiplied her weight in milk production twenty-four and a quarter times, and has produced enough fat to supply her owner's butter needs for several years to come, the avoirdupois being 1,570 pounds.

With this new victory she has outstripped her respective competitors, May Mischief, now dead, by 1,869 pounds in milk production and Betsy Wylie by 154 pounds in butter fat output. In winning this dual triumph, Mr. Napier says that Nellie is a well-balanced bovine and of high esting qualities.

The new champion has had some distinguished ancestors, and her family tree at the Wylie farm can be traced back four generations. The lineage dates much further back, however, before the time when her great-great-granddam, Nellie Osborne, came to Canada. This old ancestor was imported from Scotland by Dan Drummond, who in 1893 exhibited her at the World's Fair at Chicago, where she was adjudged the best female of her breed.

Her mother was Nellie Osborne the 9th, of Elmshade, and her father was a famous bull of the Province, named Burnside Langemarck Masterpiece.

The Wylie family, said Mr. Napier, have been breeding Ayrshires for the past fifty years at Howick. The great-granddame of the new champion, which was called Nellie Osborne, of Burnside, was acquired by William Wylie, father of the owner of the present Nellie, in 1889.

Mr. Napier, who is a well-known figure among breeders in Peterborough County, first took up his present duties two years ago when he planned the field day of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, held at the farm of J. Gordon Mann, of Bridgenorth.

Russia Bars British Warship Seeking Dead; Would Agree To One From "Friendly Nation"

MOSCOW, Aug. 24.—The Soviet News Agency, Tass, says that in response to a British request through the Norwegian Mission at Moscow that she be allowed to send a warship to transfer the bodies of the crew of the recently raised submarine L-55 from Leningrad to England, the Soviet Government has replied that it cannot consent to a British warship entering Soviet territorial waters.

The Soviet Government, however, would not object to a warship of a friendly nation, such as Norway, or a British merchantman coming.

Regarding reports of alleged delay by the Soviet Government in reply to the British request, the agency said that this was only received in Moscow on Aug. 20.

The L-55 was sunk in 1919 while assisting the "White" Russians against the Bolshevist Government, but recently was raised by the Soviet authorities who found a number of skeletons and decomposed bodies of British seamen.

By declining to give permission for a British warship to visit Russian waters the Moscow Government is merely following international usage where diplomatic relations have been ruptured. Great Britain severed diplomatic and commercial relations with Soviet Russia on May 24, 1927.

The authentic first news to reach the British Admiralty in regard to the loss of the L-55 came through the press on Aug. 17, although the submarine had been missing since June, 1919. On the 12th of that month the relatives and next of kin of the personnel were officially informed that during operations in the Baltic Sea the vessel had probably been lost with all on board.

This was a fact then known absolutely to the Soviet Government, which a month ago made preparations to raise the craft in order to see whether the cause of her sinking had been gun fire from the Russian destroyers, Azard and Gavril, or collision with a mine. Investigation proved the former cause.

POWER TRUST FINANCING PUT UNDER INVESTIGATION

U. S. Trade Commission Seeks Information Regarding Interlocking Directorates.

COMPANIES ON GRILL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The Federal Trade Commission yesterday set the machinery in order for the second phase of its far-reaching inquiry into the gigantic power combine activities, to open next month.

The Commission has prepared a questionnaire of over 200 pages to be filled in by every gas and electric company in the United States, with a view to enable the investigators to determine the financial status of each concern, as well as its financial relationship with others.

Holding Companies on Grill

This is being done so the Commission may determine the value or detriment to the public of holding companies owning or controlling public utilities stock.

The lengthy, revealing investigation which brought to light the extensive lobby and propaganda operations of the industry in general will be brought to a close at the resumption of the hearings.

The new hearings will deal with individual companies rather than the larger utilities trade organizations to bring into the open any attempts by the smaller units designed to influence public opinion by propaganda methods.

Political Gifts Sought

Although the questionnaire touches every detail of the financial structure of each organization, it ask also amounts contributed to political campaigns, newspapers, colleges, and other institutions of learning.

The questionnaires will be distributed within a week, it was announced.

Catchacoma News

The following letter has been received by J. H. Burnham of Peterborough and others who sent in a petition to the minister regarding the Buckhorn road and especially that part of it near Catchacoma on the south side. It will involve the replacement of a small corduroy bridge:

"The Honorable Mr. Finlayson authorized an expenditure of $200.00 on the section of road in which you are interested. It may be that this work has been delayed on account of rain, but I trust that the necessary improvement will be made as quickly as possible."

TWO RESCUES DURING STORM

Members of One Party Have To Be Saved After Saving Others.

AT CROWES' LANDING

CROWE'S LANDING, August 24.—Jay Knox and Harrington Owens were the heroes of a gallant rescue here on Tuesday afternoon when in the height of the worst storm of the summer they put out into the lake in a small outboard motorboat and picked up two young men, Marvin Craig and Bert Chapman, whose canoe had capsized in the squall.

Craig and Chapman were themselves members of a rescue party a few minutes previously when a sailing canoe containing R. McIntyre and Florence McIntyre of Toronto was upset in the strong wind. A launch carrying among others the two young men reached the overturned canoe and rescued the pair and Craig and Chapman decided to sail the canoe to shore. Accordingly the craft was righted and they started out only to be caught in the storm which came up immediately after. A terrific squall lashing the lake into huge waves and blowing the rain in such sheets as to make the shore almost invisible soon upset the canoe but the two boys managed to cling to the overturned craft. Their plight was seen from Crowe's Landing and although the conditions were such as to make the venture one of extreme danger Knox and Harrington immediately set out and succeeded in bringing the two boys to shore.

The storm was the most violent of the year and considerable damage was done around the lake to flag poles and trees while in one case two canoes were blown off a wharf and smashed on the rocks.

LAST OF EMPIRE DELEGATES ARRIVE AT QUEBEC TO-DAY

Will Tour Canada From Coast to Coast During Next Six Weeks.

BEGIN SATURDAY.

FATHER POINT, Quebec, August 24. Canadian Press. — The Empress of France lands at Quebec to-day with the remaining delegates of the Empire Parliamentary Association who for the next six weeks will tour Canada from coast to coast. With delegates from the antipodes, some of whom came via Vancouver, they will gather in preliminary introductions and informal getting together, for not till Saturday does the long program of conferences and dinners, lunches and receptions really begin.

And the program is no light one. Besides sight seeing tours, visits to harbors and public enterprises of various types, conferences with Dominion and Provincial ministers, a transcontinental trip which stretches from Quebec to Victoria and back to Sydney, the delegates have ahead of them twenty official lunches, fourteen official dinners and seven receptions.

Heads Australian Delegation

Heading the delegation from Australia is Major-General Sir Thomas Glasgow, who commanded the First Australia in the war. From South Africa there comes Speaker Jansen of the House of Assembly, a Nationalist; Johannes Wessels, who fought for the Republican forces in the Boer war, and was taken prisoner; George Alexander Hay of Pretoria, who describes himself as a Liberal by heredity and a modest Socialist by conviction. Mr. Hay once defeated Premier Smuts in an electoral fight.

Of the South African party there is Alfred Owen Payn, who represents in the Assembly the only constituency in the Union of South Africa in which the Bantu vote predominates over the European. Mr. Payn too has the honor of being the only member of the Assembly who can address his constituents in Bantu.

Hon. William Nosworthy is at the head of the delegation from New Zealand. He is at once Postmaster-General, Minister of External Affairs, and Minister in Charge of Tourists, Legislative State Fire Insurance and Government Life Insurance Departments. Prof. Robert Galca, Minister

NUGENT FAMILY HOLD RE-UNION

Children and Grandchildren Gather at Outing of Omemee Family.

OMEMEE, Aug. 24 (Examiner Correspondence).—An unusually interesting and very enjoyable re-union of the Nugent family took place recently when they motored to Sandy Lake and Buckhorn to spend the day. Five children and fourteen grandchildren of Mrs. H. Nugent attended.

Those present were Mrs. H. Nugent and her sister, Mrs. W. Williamson of Picton, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Nugent and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Nugent and family of Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Nugent and family of Grand Forks, N. Dakota, Miss Ida Nugent of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Mahood and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Ira Rehill and family.

The only son absent was Dr. Walter H. Nugent of Portland, Oregon, who at present is at Long Beach, California.

ALLIGATORS IN CANAL TRIAL TO SWIMMER FROM SEA TO SEA

PANAMA, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Two encounters with alligators have marked progress of Richard Haliburton, American author, who has been making a swim through the Panama Canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific, about fifty miles.

Haliburton has passed infested waters, but it is possible that after being locked into the Pacific he will face sharks.

Haliburton is accompanied by a sharpshooter as a guard. The sharpshooter was first called into action Monday, when an alligator was driven off by his shots. Wednesday an alligator accompanied Haliburton into the Gaillard Cut. After a few shots it disappeared.

Haliburton expects to complete the trip to-day, swimming during the daytime, resting at night. He started August 14.

Farm Labor Scare In Cavan District

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAVAN, August 24.—Help on the farms is scarce; an extra man is almost impossible to get.

Threshing is general and this has taken a few extra men from farm work, to run the threshing outfits. A number from each district have gone on the harvest excursion to the West.

FINE BUILDING AT FAIR GROUND

Work Progressing Rapidly on New Structure at Roseneath.

WILL COST $3,000

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Aug. 25.—With the erection of the new agricultural building that is progressing favorably, Roseneath will be able to boast of having one of the finest structures for a village in the entire Province.

The cement work is nearly completed, under the supervision of Walter Mason, while the body of the building is to be metalic with plank frame work, with twenty windows and the necessary doors. This will be erected by the Toronto Metalic Co., of Toronto, and with its large and spacious room will accomodate the ladies' work, fine arts, flowers, fruit, vegetables, etc., and have all modern conveniences.

The president, F. J. Slade, and his committeemen, Messrs. J. Drope, C. W. Varcoe, H. Mouncey, A. Campbell and W. Mason, are most enthusiastic in helping to make this undertaking a success and the coming Agricultural Fair a noted event.

The building will cost approximately $3,000.

WARKWORTH, Aug. 24. — An electric storm, accompanied by severe winds and rain, passed over this district on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Fred Harnden's barn was unroofed and several trees blown down. Some of the telephone lines were put out of order, and the village was without lights during the evening.

CHILDREN PROVIDE OWN AMUSEMENTS

probably realizing that the affair is all for the best and will make them healthier and happier in the long run, will assert that the operation didn't hurt them a bit.

The children range in years from four to ten and they have their own individual preferences in games and palytime frolics and in food. One small girl says she doesnt like to eat any meat but sausage and another can't bear the thought of eating porridge. Some like white bread and others want brown and they have long discussions over the merits of the various desserts used for their noon-day meal. They have a passion for pretty things, these small woman, and will look with appreciative eyes at bits of jewellery on fingers or wrists of visitors. "Hot mama!" ejaculated a small man of ten years who watched the approach of a pretty girl yesterday afternoon. "Ain't she a peach?" echoed his small companion. The young lady came to tell the children a fairy story and The Examiner representative left a group of them clustered about the visitor, listening to the tale of the Fairy Princess.

In the homes of these small children, the stork makes regular visits. This summer, most of them can talk proudly about the new tiny baby that has come to live with them. The Camp, for this one reason alone, must be a wonderful boon to tired mothers.

CHILDS FACES MURDER TRIAL

Jury Finds He Administered Chloroform But Did Not Use Force.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

WOOODSTOCK, Aug. 24.—Robert Childs, 20, survivor of a suicide pact in which his sweetheart perished faces a charge of murder.

He was arrested after the evidence was all in at the coroner's inquest last night but the formal murder charge was not laid until after the jury brought in its verdict at 12.20.

The jury found that Gertrude Yelland came to her death from chloroform purchased and administered by Robert John Childs. It added that no force or violence was used in administering the poison.

Alternative Charges

When Childs was arrested it was still doubtful, Crown-Attornew Ball admitted, which of two charges would be laid. One was a charge of murder. The other of aiding and abetting in a suicide.

The common law states that where two persons make a suicide pact and one survives, the survivor is liable to a charge of murder.

Childs was lying on a cot at the rear of the stage of the City Hall when he was taken into custody by Sergeant Jerry, acting police chief, and placed in the county jail. No bail was allowed, and any application for bail will be strongly opposed by the Crown-Attorney.

Childs last night told a coroner's jury of the rendezvous with death. How he still lives he does not know.

Childs insisted that the pact had not been planned. He had told the girl of his intention to end his life. He had said he was going to drive her home. She had insisted that where he went she would go. After that not a word had been spoken as the youthful couple combined in preparations for death.

Youth Tells His Story

The story of the tragedy was told by Robert Childs, surviving partner in the suicide pact. He entered the hall on the arm of his father, walking slowly and painfully with his left arm in a sling. In a low voice he told the story of how he had become discouraged and disheartened because of his parents seeming to be against his marriage to Miss Yelland.

"We were so fond of each other," he said, "and it seemed there was nothing left to live for. I made up my mind to end everything."

Childs then told of going to the two drug stores and buying chloroform, telling the clerks it was to kill a dog.

The same night, last Saturday, he had told the girl he was going to commit suicide, but she made him promise not to do it unless she could go with him.

The events of the fatal night were gone over in detail. He had met the girl at her place of business and drove over to Bower Hill. On the way out the highway west of Woodstock, he said, he told the girl he was going to drive her home and then commit suicide.

"She said she would not get out of the car, and was going with me, so I drove up the hill. Not another word passed between us after that time."

After stopping the car, witness said, he and the girl shut the doors and widows tight, climbed into the back seat, lay down oni t, and pulled the automobile rugs tightly over their heads.

Woke To Find Sun Shining.

"I pulled the cork out of the first bottle," said Childs. "Then I got the smell of it and went into a daze and I can't say whether she or I pulled the cork out of the second bottle. I remembered nothing more until I woke up the next morning when the sun was shining.

A remarkable part of Childs' evidence was that regarding his trip home. On the way he had stopped inside a farmyard for a drink of water and had spoken to a woman, but said nothing about the dead girl in the back seat. Pressed for an explanation as to why he had not told this woman or why he had not tried to give the girl a drink of water, Childs said he could give no explanation. He was too dazed then to know what he was doing. After getting a drink, he had driven the car home and collapsed at the door.

Crown Attorney Ball pressed relentlessly for a reason as to why Childs did not take the girl home as he had intended.

Childs, his eyes on the floor, could only answer, "I told her what I was going to do, and she said there would be nothing left for her, and that she was going with me." There was no other explanation he could give. Despair had entered both their hearts and they were determined not to live.

Asked how it was that she had died and he did not, he said he did not know as he could remember nothing after the first whiff of the chloroform.

A peculiar feature of the evidence was that Childs swore he had not taken his boots off at any time, nor any of his clothing, yet when he staggered into his home he was in his stocking feet and his shoes were found in the car.

Childs was on the verge of collapse at this stage and his examination ceased. He was assisted out of the hall by his father and a constable. All through his evidence the only reason for his act that he could give was his despondency over his love affair.

Before he gave evidence, on the request of his counsel, a notation was made that he pleaded protection against the use of his evidence in any other proceedings.

City Hall Crowded.

The city hall was jammed to capacity long before the inquest opened, the surprising feature being the large number of young women and girls in the audience. The crowd began to assemble at 6.30 and by seven there was a mob clamoring for admission. It had been intended to hold the inquest in the council chamber, but on account of the crowd the Coroner gave permission to move into the city hall auditorium.

Authorities are generally of opinion that the loss will not be of serious proportions.

RESUSCITATION DEMONSTRATED

W. M. Cruthers Gives Address at Kiwanis Luncheon To-day.

MANY ANNOUNCEMENTS.

First aid to and resuscitation of victims of gas poisoning, electric shock or drowning, by the prone pressure method, as approved by Red Cross, gas, telephone, telegraph companies and safety councils not only in Europe but throughout the United States and Canada, was discussed and then practically demonstrated by three C.G.E. men at to-day's luncheon meeting of the Peterborough Kiwanis club. William M. Cruthers, speaking, and Messrs. Hayes and Shields, demonstrating, gave the club members and guests a most profitable and at the same time interesting half hour of instruction, at the close of which Dr. Ed. Wood moved a very hearty vote of thanks to them, not only for the pleasure it had afforded him but also because the talk and demonstration bore out his conviction that the Peterborough pulmotor should be "taken to the incinerator."

Doug. Paterson Presided.

Rev. Doug. Paterson replaced President Joe John as master of ceremonies at to-day's meeting and he gave George Liddle plenty of opportunity to demonstrate, for the benefit of the guests, the vocal powers of the club members. The singing was right up to the mark with several new numbers being introduced. The introduction of guests brought to their feet R. J. Hamilton, of Toronto; Stanley Shields and S. J. Hayes (who assisted Mr. Cruthers), G. Hartshorn, John Edgar of Peterborough, I. H. Todd of Rochester, C. W. Cherry of Harrisburg, Pa., and Dr. G. S. Cameron of Peterborough.

As prosecuting attorney, Charlie Cook derived a good deal of satisfaction from the fine imposed upon Isaac McNabb, who had taken a guest elsewhere to dine on a luncheon day, but the seriousness of the offence was somewhat alleviated by the fact that the condemned man had made up for his absence by attending another club luncheon in the same week.

To-day's Outing

President Joe John had an announcement regarding a most important Kiwanis Activity—the outing for 100 City Children being provided jointly by the Border Transit Company and the club to-day. Owing to the wet weather, the original plan to take the youngsters on on a picnic had been altered to a drive through the country and games and supper in All Saints' Parish Hall on return at 5:00 o'clock. Through the courtesy of Mr. Mitchell of the Transit company, this outing had been made possible, the Kiwanis club providing the supper while the bus company provided the ice cream.

Harry Huffman gave a concise report of the club's presentation of a boat to the Bowmanville Boys' Farm on Wednesday last, an account of which appeared in The Examiner.

In the absence of Jack Craig, he also announced that every phase of the Made-in-Canada Fair was being carefully looked after with every indication of a record breaking event.

Herb. McCannan completed the announcements with an invitation to all harmonica players, or would-be players to enter the contest at the Fair.

The Speaker

Greeted with the hearty rendition of How Do You Do Mr. Cruthers, How Do You Do" the speaker expressed his pleasure at speaking to the local club.

"When Mr. Elliott asked me to give this little talk, I rather hesitated, but he insisted that it would be equally in place as at Rotary Club, where I gave it recently," said he.

"We are here to study a serious question, that of resuscitation. Could you or I do the right thing if we found someone, almost drowned or suffering from electric shock? The pulmotor is mechanical, and valuable time is lost in getting it to the patient. A minute lost at the start may mean 15 minutes later.

"The system of resuscitation of which I shall speak was introduced by Dr. Schaeffer, and later introduced on this continent.

"In more recent years it has been adopted by gas companies, fire-fighters, police and medical men, and the Ontario Safety League recommends the learning of this prone pressure method.

"Very often, people near a drowning are not fitted to put the method into practice, but it has been used in cases of electric shock more often because there are usually other electrical men present trained in the art of resuscitation.

"The method should not be stopped for four hours unless the injured person comes to or rigor mortis sets in."

Mr. Cruthers then introduced his assistants, who gave the practical demonstration as he explained it, and at its conclusion, many questions were asked and answered regarding the method.

A botanical survey of parts of Wood Buffalo park, near Fort Smith, Northwest Territories, will be made this summer by officers of the National Museum, Ottawa. The forage plants and range conditions in certain areas of the park will be investigated with the co-operation of the North West Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior, which administers this area.

HORSESHOE COURTS TO BE ILLUMINATED

Chairman Art Moffatt Calls For Volunteers To Help With Work.

On Monday evening, the new horseshoe courts in King Edward Park will be available for use under much improved circumstances, as a complete lighting equipment will have been installed. Art Moffatt, chairman of the Kiwanis Club committee, which has this work in hand, has asked that as many Kiwanians as possible be at the park to-morrow afternoon or evening to help with the work, so that all will be in readiness for Monday night.

U. S. Author Makes 50 Mile Journey in 50 Hours.

DURING TEN DAYS.

PANAMA, August 24. Canadian Press. — Richard Halliburton, a United States author, has completed a swim through the Panama Canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The distance is less than 50 miles and he spent approximately 50 hours in the water, starting August 14, and swimming only in daytime.

FAREWELL MEETING FOR MISS G. M. CLARK

The Women's Auxiliary of All Saints' Parish held a special summer meeting on Thursday evening to say farewell to one of the church's members, Miss Greta Clark, who returns to St. Mary's Girls' School in China next Monday. Miss Clark has spent one term in China at this school, but her return from furlough has been delayed owing to the troubles and warfare which have distracted the country during the last two years.

A very large attendance of members and friends testified to their interest in their returning missionary, and nearly everyone brought gifts to be taken to the Chinese children as lovegifts from Canada. In the unavoidable absence of the president, Mrs. McCulloch, the rector presided for the evening. After the devotional opening, conducted by the Rev. P. C. Howard of Millbrook, a very splendid program was rendered:

Violin solo—Mr. George Gatfield.
Recitations—Miss Ruthie McNeeley.
Sacred solo—Mr. W. J. Mulligan.
Vocal solo—Miss Connolly.
Banjo selection—Mr. Clark.
Reading—Mrs. Connolly.
Solo—Mrs. Howard of Millbrook.

A vote of thanks to the artists was proposed by Mrs. Harris, and seconded by Mrs. LeBarr.

Miss Grace Tucker introduced Miss Clark, and as she came to the platform to speak she was met by little Miss Viola Price, who handed to her a large bunch of gladiolus, a gift from the Juniors.

After her address, which was full of interest and which gave a vivid account of the place and work where Miss Clark will spend the next five years, she presented to All Saints' Church an exquisite Chinese banner presented to her by the girls of the school when she came home on furlough. It will be left in All Saints' Church for safe keeping, and as a reminder for prayer on behalf of our missionary.

Refreshments brought a very happy and profitable evening to a close.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Within the past forty-eight hours, letters from Mayor R. I. Moore, of Lindsay, and J. Bruce Hanley, of Midland, President of the Trent Waterway Development Association, have been received, containing complimentary reference to the efforts of the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., and J. J. Duffus who recently succeeded in obtaining a promise from the Minister of Railways and Canals, to visit and inspect the entire Trent system next year. The letters expressed the conviction that once he has beheld the possibilities of the waterway, the Hon. Charles Dunning will not be slow to endorse its completion.

Of interest to members of the local Chamber is the communication recently received from the management of the Hotel Dauphin, New York city, announcing a 20 per cent. discount in transient rates, to all members of Chambers of Commerce. The hotel, while not one of the largest, boasts a high standard of excellence and while visits of local members to Gotham may not be numerous, the new management is worth bearing in mind.

Well cooked, tasty meals are impossible without a good stove. Everyone who cooks knows that fact.

FINGER PRINTS OF IMMIGRANTS.

The chief constables of Canada would finger-print all immigrants arriving in this country. Such identification records would greatly assist the police in solving crimes in which some of our present newcomers might become involved. The next step in the advancement of police efficiency would be the finger-printing of all the citizens. And after that we should all be ready to submit to complete dragooning.

However, the proposal is unlikely to appeal to official Ottawa, for the reason that immigration has already proved too troublesome. It has been a thorny question during the last year or more, and the Government has become sensitive about it. The measures adopted for the proper examination of the health and sanity of prospective immigrants met with certain criticism abroad, while the whole policy was under fire at home.

Cannot the chief constables of Canada imagine what an outcry would be raised at the indignity of taking the finger prints of an honest Britisher at the port of Quebec or Montreal? Branding him at our very portals as a possible law-breaker! What then of the chorus of protests of ten thousand honest Britishers, unless the C.C.C. would restrict such an abominable registration to other nationals!

A recent homicide by a Toronto constable indicates that police aggressiveness and efficiency may be carried to questionable extremes.

THE GENESIS OF BROADCASTING.

To many radio "fans" it may be a surprise to learn that exactly twenty-one years have passed since the first broadcast. While we have been accustomed to regard the radio as a comparatively recent development, the truth is that as long ago as the year 1907 Lee De Forest was able to send music widespread through the ether by making use of a phonograph. But it took him two additional years of the hardest work before he was able to adjust his crude apparatus to the wireless transmission of the human voice. The first voice sent through space without the use of wires was that of Caruso, who was then singing in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, the management of which was induced by De Forest to allow a microphone to be placed on the stage. The great tenor, it is said, had been notified of the installation and of the test which was about to be made, but paid little heed to it. Considering the great use to which the radio is now put, it is significant that twenty-one years ago the only people who heard the voice of the world-famous tenor outside of the theatre were some friends of Mr. De Forest, who lived 30 miles away. The remainder of the world was oblivious to the experiment which was to bring such pleasure and profit to the world fifteen years later.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

MOSQUITOS MUST BE BLIND.

The outstanding boob of all creation is surely this year's mosquito. And during the last few weeks he has been a billion, more or less. With opportunity beckoning alluringly to him in long expanses of silk-stockinged legs, multitudes of them with a high visibility that betrays them blocks away; other expanses of bare arms and necks nuded by boyish bobs, and with other easy picking through flimsy feminine furbelows and folderols, with such a rich banquet before him as never any of his lean and hungry ancestors dreamed of, the poor sap pulls up his chair in front of a man's ankle or on his sunburned, weather-beaten neck, passing up epicurean dainties fit for a king.

When you apply lotions to a score or more of bites about a boney ankle you can have no respect whatever for such undiscriminating gluttonous insects. They are simply barbarians, like the man who would walk past a table of turkey and the usual trimmings for pigs' knuckles, whatever they are, or something equally coarse and common.

It may indeed be that our exaggerated sense of chivalry, which insists upon the tradition of women first, forgets the eternal fitness of things illustrated in the expression of tempering the wind to the shorn lamb, in this instance the preference and taste of the mosquito being tempered to the shorn calf.

Nature may be grand and all that, but it is too often unappreciated for our own good.

AN OLD QUEST.

There is something discouragingly repetitious and unprogressive in local discussion of a proposed conference with the Minister of Railways and Canals with respect to the completion of the Trent Canal.

The Trent Canal has been abuilding for almost one hundred years. On October 29, 1834, the first public meeting at which it was proposed locally was held here in Peterborough, and a petition was "largely signed" urging upon the Government the improvement of the waterway from Lake Simcoe to Lake Ontario. That was 94 years ago, and we are still trudging to Ottawa in deputations that know well enough what they want, but probably have not informed themselves of the background and history of their quest.

The canal especially recommended itself in those days because railways were only a new and untried invention, and corduroy roads were almost impossible for heavy loads. Hence the settlers built their homes on lakes and navigable rivers for the advantage of commerce and communication by water. That was a natural endowment which made Peterborough attractive. The harnessing of streams for the generation of electric energy was then unknown, but the Otonabee River was a useful outlet to Rice Lake from which it was proposed to build a canal to Port Hope.

Early in 1837 the sums of £16,000 had been appropriated for locks and dams at Bobcaygeon, Purdy's Mills and Peterborough, and £70,000 had been approved a little later in the Lower House.

On March 29, 1906, when Mr. R. R. Hall represented West Peterborough, the Government promised a local deputation that the canal would be pushed on to completion, and in the following September the course of the southern or eastern section was finally determined by way of the Trent River and Trenton instead of by a canal from Bewdley to Port Hope. Nearly eighty years to effect that much progress! The early settlers, who met in Peterborough in 1834, had long since joined their fathers. But their dream survived and is still seeking fulfilment.

A similar promise was made when Mr. J. H. Burnham was member, so that Peterborough petitioners to the Hon. Mr. Dunning have ample precedents and governmental pledges to present in urging an early completion of the canal.

TEA DRINKING.

(From the New York Evening World)

Although 50,000,000 tea drinkers in the United States spend $75,000,000 a year on 30,000,000,000 cups of tea brewed from 100,000,000 pounds of tea leaf, they are still a long way behind the tea consuming capacity of British subjects. According to figures reported by the Tea Association of the United States, yearly tea consumption in this country is less than one pound per capita, as against England's eight pounds per capita, Canada's six pounds and Australia's eleven pounds.

Perhaps one reason is that the pleasant British habit of afternoon tea, common among all classes, has not yet percolated in this country much below a limited and leisured part of the population. Serving afternoon tea to employees of banks and shops, by no means unusual in London, is almost unheard of in New York. Nor do Americans drink tea for breakfast to the extent that prevails among Britons. Even prohibition has not yet persuaded the United States to drown its sorrows in tea.

Nevertheless if 50,000,000 people in this country are already drinking tea and are free to drink more of it, we are plainly confronted with a danger and a duty. There is no doubt that a cup of tea comforts, cheers and even stimulates. There is no doubt that tea can be drunk to excess and that some persons over-indulge in it. Need we say more?

Beverages potentially harmful are something this country knows exactly how to deal with. The Fathers gave it a Constitution seemingly for that purpose. If 50,000,000 Americans are getting pleasure out of drinking tea, there is pretty sure to be something wrong about it. It is obviously a matter of Federal moment and those who always know what is best for their fellow Americans should take action at once. Prohibit early and often: that is the way to kill the pernicious instinct of personal freedom and resistance.

WRIGGLING OUT OF SLEEP.

Men and women, one scientist reminds us, are only two-thirds human. For the other third of each person's time he or she is no more than a vegetable—the third that the average human being spends in sleep. But Dr. H. M. Johnson, of the Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh, who insists on this substraction from human dignity, asks a still more arresting question. "Is sleep," he says, "a vicious habit?" That it could be considered a habit at all and not a physiologic necessity will suggest to many city dwellers nowadays an alluring combination of activities—to work all day and make money and to play all night and spend it. But unfortunately the researches at Pittsburgh do not quite support an affirmative answer to Dr. Johnson's rhetorical question. Sleep may be a habit. It may even be a vicious one. But not even the most futuristic savant suggests that it be given up.

About the theory of sleep until very recently there have been a plethora of guesses and a minimum of fact. Sleep has been blamed on some mysterious "toxin of fatigue" circulating in the blood; on a change in the distribution of the blood itself so that less of it flowed through the brain; on an accumulation of acid in the body; on fatigue of the special nerve centre at the top of the spinal cord which controls the sizes of the arteries; on the occurence of a peculiar "block" in part of the nerve paths in the brain, as though a switch had been thrown disconnecting some of the telegraph lines of that complicated organ; on the activity of special "sleep centres" corresponding to the centres for sight or hearing, and doubtless on a score or so of other real or imaginary happenings in the machine of infinite complexity where the human consciousness temporarily dwells. The best supported theory, however, is that newest one—the theory that sleep happens whenever muscular movement stops.

Dr. Nathaniel Kleitman, of the University of Chicago, whose studies of sleep are perhaps the most searching yet made, is chiefly responsible for this idea. So long as muscles are in contraction, either by exercise or by merely being held tense, sleep seems to be impossible. Conversely, if all muscles are successfully relaxed and kept that way sleep soon ensues. Whether the tensity of muscles frees some chemical that keeps us awake or whether it is merely nerve messages from these tensed fibres that do the trick no one yet knows. The mere fact suggests a thought about sleeplessness and worry. Mental embarrassment of any kind tends, every one knows, to make us twitch and wriggle. The association is proverbial. Perhaps worry unconsciously does the same thing to the sleepless tosser. He does not wriggle because he is awake; he stays awake because he will not stop wriggling.—The New York Herald.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 24. — (Canadian Press).—The only business of importance reported in cash grain in the local market yesterday was a sale of a few loads of No. 3 Northern Wheat at 6½c per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, C. I.F. Montreal which price shows an advance of 1½c per bushel. Owing to the advance in cash wheat prices at Winnipeg tough No. 6 wheat on spot here was quoted at 4c per bushel higher at $1, and feed wheat 2c up at 97c, while values for all grades of oats were marked up 3 cents per bushel.

There was no actual change in prices for spring wheat flour announced but owing to the sharp advance in all grades of cash wheat established at Winnipeg the undertone to the market was stronger. There as some demand from English importers overnight and some further business was done, but the demand for domestic account continues of a hand-to-mouth character. There was no improvement in the demand for new crop winter wheat flour and prices were steady.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the increased demand from United States buyers for Manitoba bran and a moderate amount of business was worked for nearby shipment. There was also a good demand from local and country buyers and on the whole the market was more active with a firm undertone. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was slow.

A firm feeling prevailed in the local egg market and prices were unchanged. There was an improved demand for supplies and business was rather more active in a jobbing way. In a wholesale way British Columbia fresh extras were offered at 39 cents, and firsts at 37 cents per dozen F.O.B. Vancouver, but as buyers in most cases consider these prices too high sales were slow. Receipts were 2,436 cases.

The trade in imported beans was somewhat of a limited character on account of the fact that buyers were not disposed to operate any extent at the present level of the market, and in consequence the demand was only for small lots to meet immediate wants and sales of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.10 per bushel, exstore, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $3.90 per bushel, ex-store.

The strength that has characterized the local butter situation for the past few days continues to be the main feature of the market and prices scored another rise of ¾c per lb. There was considerable inquiry for round lots, but as holders were not free sellers at the present level the volume of business was checked to some extent. A feature of the trade was the demand from local buyers for New Zealand creamery butter and sales of some round lots were made including one lot of 1,500 packages at 37¼c per lb. C.I.F. Halifax for delivery here in October, November and December. Receipts were 793 packages.

A feature of the cheese trade was the very firm feeling that prevailed in the market for Eastern goods owing to the continued steady demand from foreign buyers for such and the very limited supplies available. On the other hand the market for Western No. 1 white and colored cheese displayed an easier feeling owing to the continued absence of any important demand from over the cable and prices on spot were reduced ½c to ¼c per package. Receipts were 7,331 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, August. 24. Canadian Press. — Brisk upturns in wheat values yesterday accompanied reports that the quality of a considerable part of the Canadian crop has been damaged by frost. Meanwhile export demand for wheat from North America broadened out, and it was estimated that more than 1,000,000 bushels were taken yesterday for shipment to Europe.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 2¼c to 3c net higher, with corn ¾c to ⅞c up; oats showing 7-8 and 1c to 1 3-8c gain and provisions varying from 12c decline to a rise of 5c.

Predictions of more frost in Canada last night followed advices to-day telling of seven degrees of frost at various points in Canadian wheat territory. With temperatures dangerously low throughout wide sections of the Canadian prairie provinces, and with Liverpool wheat closing yesterday at a rise of about 2 pence all around, traders here flocked to the buying side of the market, and the upward swing of values gained almost constant impetus except for a fractional setback just at the last. The fact that October delivery of wheat at Winnipeg sold even up yesterday with December led to assumptions that old Canadian wheat is becoming scarce.

Much of the speculative buying of wheat yesterday was on opinions that regardless of the final outcome of the North American spring wheat harvest, wheat prices were at a level which had discounted to a large extent all the federal aspects of the crop situation, and had furnished the buying side of the market the better chances for profit, as against this reports were at hand that beneficial rains had fallen in Australia, and that Argentine crop prospects continued excellent. It was contended, too, that regarding, at least the quantity of Canadian wheat no frost could now do much harm.

Corn and oats borrowed strength from wheat. Welcome rains over a large part of the corn belt had only a transient market influence and were more or less offset by an estimate that the corn crop in Nebraska was damaged 25 per cent. by recent hot, dry weather. Offerings of oats were light.

Provisions ruled dull and irregular, despite an upturn in the hog market.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, August 24. Canadian Press. — Hogs, 17,000; market slow, mostly 10 to 20 higher than yesterday's average; top 13.00, paid for a few loads choice 185 to 220 pound weights. Shippers took 5000; estimated holdover 9000; Butchers, medium to choice 250 to 350 pounds 11.90 and 12.70; 200 to 250 pounds 12.10 and 13.00; 160 to 200 pounds 11.75 and 13.00; 130 to 160 pounds 11.25 and 12.80.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Aug. 24. — Both the buying and selling divisions of the Toronto wholesale egg market are notable this week for their steadiness. The week started with a firming of prices, and the market has maintained that position. The receipts have not been sufficiently large to overlap the demand, and those in the trade believe the market now can have only one direction in which to move, and that is towards rising quotations. Butter and cheese quotations on the Toronto wholesale produce market also are maintaining the firm prices established at the start of the present week.

Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body.—Rom. 6:12.

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for Thy mercies to us in the past and for Thy watchcare over us during the night. As we stand upon the threshold of a new day, we look to Thee for help and guidance. "We need Thy presence every passing hour."

Make us strong to resist temptation, and give us courage in all things to do Thy Holy Will. Open our eyes that we may see every opportunity for serving Thee and serving our fellow-men. Help us so to live as to commend the religion and service of Christ to all about us. Enable us to live "lives that are hid with Christ in God." May we daily grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Remember with us all for whom we should pray—the sick, the sorrowing, the distressed and the needy. Bless all efforts put forth for the extension of Thy Kingdom, and hasten the day when all men shall love and serve Thee.

Graciously forgive all that Thou hast seen amiss in our lives. Supply all our needs according to Thy riches in glory.

Bless us and make us a blessing to others, we ask in Christ's name. Amen.

A Thought

CRADLE SONG.

Sleep, sleep, beauty bright,
Dreaming in the joys of night;
Sleep, sleep; in thy sleep
Little sorrows sit and weep.

Sweet babe, in thy face
Soft desires I can trace
Secret joys and secret smiles,
Little pretty infant wiles.

As thy softest limbs I feel
Smiles as of the morning steal
O'er thy cheek, and o'er thy breast
Where thy little heart doth rest.

O, the cunning wiles that creep
In thy little heart asleep!
When thy little heart doth wake,
Then the dreadful night shall break.

BOYS' SHEEP CLUB PLANS LAMB FAIR

Great Interest Shown in Exhibition on Farm Near Warsaw.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Aug. 24.—An event of interest to the community will take place next Wednesday, August 29, on the farm of William Davis, when the members of the Warsaw Boys' Sheep Club will hold their first lamb fair.

For a year now several of the boys of this community have been carrying on sheep-breeding operations in a small way, under the direction of the Department of Agriculture, of which J. B. Nelson is local representative. They have now raised some lambs successfully, and will compete for prizes offered by the department.

Besides the judging of the lambs, there will be a judging competition for the boys, and several demonstrations of interest to the boys, and also to those interested in sheep.

There promises to be a good turnout of people who wish to show their interest in the boys' work. Mr. Nelson assures an interesting time for all who attend.

A similar fair for the Indian River club will be held on the farm of William Forsythe on Tuesday, August 28.

The prizes offered are quite worth while: For a pair of ewe lambs prizes are: 1st, $10; 2nd, $8; 3rd, $6; 4th, $4; 5th, $2. For a fair of wether lambs prizes are the same. For the best ewe lamb, $5; for best wether lamb, $5. For the sheep judging competition the prizes are: 1st, $5; 2nd, $4; 3rd, $3; 4th, $2; 5th, $1.

Competition open to club members only. A prize of $2 will be given for the best pair of hurdles.

There are no entry fees and no admission fees. Representatives of Provincial and Dominion Departments of Agriculture will be present.

Young's Point

YOUNG'S POINT, August 24.—The threshing mill is heard every day now in the vicinity. It brings to mind that summer is passing quickly.

The public school is being cleaned and renovated, the work being done by Messrs. Robert and William Dever. School re-opens on September 4 with the same teachers, Miss Marie Charlton and Frank Carroll.

Guests at the Lakeview House are: C. Truss, Tarinton, Penn.; Joseph White, Tarinton, Penn.; Charles Nichol, Tarinton, Penn.; Mr. and Mrs. Hainsworth, Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Godfrey and family of Wilberfore motored to the village on Sunday and are spending a few days visiting with friends.

ST. JAMES' W.M.S. PLANNING SERVICE

Stewardship Keynote of Devotional Meeting This Week.

The August meeting of St. James' W.M.S. Auxiliary in charge of Group 3, with Mrs. F. D. Armstrong, leader, was held in Wesley Hall on Tusday evening last, with twenty two members and three visitors in attendance.

The chair was taken by the President, Mrs. E. L. Woodley, and the service opened with the hymn "We have heard the joyful sound, Jesus Saves." Mrs. J. H. Dudgeon followed with earnest prayer for the work of the society, all joining in repeating the Lord's Prayer.

In the absence of the Treasurer, Mrs. Bonney, it was moved that Mrs. W. Rose be appointed to that office pro. tem.

In discussion relative to a W.M.S. Sunday service for St. James United Church this year, upon motion by Mrs. Rowe, with Mrs. Elliott seconding, a committee composed of the following ladies was deputed to arrange the matter: Mrs. Woodley, Mrs. Dudgeon and Mrs. Wagar, with Rev. J. H. Dudgeon as advisor.

Th devotional service, with "Stewardship" for its key-note, was under the capable direction of Mrs. Armstrong, who led the beautiful "Service of Stewardship" in which several members took part, responding in song and reading.

"Jesus' Standard of Greatness" was the theme of an excellent paper read by Mrs. R. B. English. This was followed by a number of sentence prayers.

Another important subject under study was "The Stewardship of Life" which was taken up in three parts led by Mrs. H. McCullough, Mrs. Sargent and Mrs. Davis.

A glimpse of the Medical Missions in Canada was then given through enlightening word-pictures by the following ladies, with Mrs. Woodley leading: Mesdames Armstrong, Copson, Davidson, McAdams, Rowe and Kent.

The musical program for the day had been arranged in sympathy with the subject of study, and very materially added to the success of the meeting. A duet "Only to know the path that I tread" was sung very effectively by Mrs. Cuffe and Mrs. Church, and the solo "Teach me to pray" by Mrs. Bert Cutmore in her usual fine voice.

The singing of Hymn "Far away in Heathen Darkness dwelling" after which Miss Jackson led in prayer, closed one of the most inspiring meetings of the year.

LAST OF EMPIRE

of Health, and Sir Ugo Mifsud, leader of the Opposition, represent the Legislature of Malta. Speaker Crippe will be here from Southern Rhodesia. Sir Patrick Magrath and Speaker Fox from Newfoundland. The Irish Free State (newest of the Dominions,-is represented by three members of the Dail and one member of the Senate. Matrin Roddy, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Fisheries, a chairman of the Irish Free state delegation which also includes Thomas O'Connell, chairman of the Parliamentary Labor party.

Fifty-Four Delegates

In all, the delegates number twenty from Great Britain; four from the Irish Free State; four from India; eight from Australia; nine from South Africa; four from New Zealand; two from Newfoundland; two from Malta, and one from Southern Rhodesia.

The delegates while in Canada are guests of the Canadian branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association. The objects of the visit, as outlined in the official invitation are: 1, To promote mutual acquaintanceship and friendship; 2, To afford the delegates opportunity to see as much as possible of Canada, its resources and institutions, and 3, To interchange views on "the serious problems and potentialities of the British Commonwealth of Nations to the end of developing and strengthening the common interests and bonds of Empire."

Premier King, in a letter to Speaker Lemieux, joint chairman of the Canadian group, has expressed his deep regret that, owing to his departure for Geneva he is unable personally to welcome the delegation to Canada. "I sincerely hope," Mr. King writes, "that the members of the association will have every reason to look back with pleasant memories on their visit to Canada, and will realize that the welcome we accord them is a warm and whole-hearted one. The occasion is indeed one of more than ordinary significance. Nothing I am sure, could better serve to impress us with the value of our common heritage and inspire us with hope for the future than this meeting on the soil of North America or representatives of free parliaments under the British Crown."

DEMOCRACY FAILING?

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir:

In both the U.S. and Canada there is at the present time a feeling that Democracy is falling down because it is not able to appreciate to choose and to elect us intellectual men. Italy is the most glaring instance of this fall-down. Now a country like an army or business depends for success on its able men and if through many or few the people of a country prefer mediocrity and a man like themselves then not only do industries suffer and employees get out of work but the whole fabric of government becomes centred in the cabinet or men in control with the result that constituencies and districts, lose influence in parliament and go back accordingly. There can be no question that the curse of Democracy is a jealous feeling that it is desirable to have a man as candidate who is popular because he is no bettfer or brainier than ourselves than to choose our best men. Business like war requires our best not our most ladylike and therefore most popular men and these magazine and newspapers in all countries now discussing that question are making every effort to get democracy to wake up and get past the weak tea type and "know nothingism". Canada like other countries has got to get away from feeling that we are big people because we can look with amused contempt on our representative men. In Peterborough we are fortunate in having members who are foremost in every good fight and well able to handle out big national issues.

AN ELECTOR.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AND VOCATIONAL SCHOOL.

To Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have received several enquiries respecting the new Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. May I ask you to publish the following information, which will, I think, be appreciated by the readers of The Examiner who live in the county?

The school will open Tuesday morning, Sept. 4. There are no fees to be paid by either the city or county pupils.

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School includes both collegiate and vocational departments:

The Collegiate Department.

The collegiate department is essentially for those pupils who wish to become Public or High School teachers, lawyers, doctors, dentists, druggists, architects; civil, mechanical, electrical or mining engineers.

This department offers four courses:

1.—The teachers' course.

This course requires four years in the Collegiate Institute for those wishing to become second-class Public School teachers, and five years for those who desire to become first-class Public School teachers. This course leads to the Normal School.

The subjects in the first year of this course are as follows: English composition and literature, Canadian history, geography, English grammar, algebra, botany, household science (girls), manual training (boys), physical training.

2.—The matriculation course (pass and honor).

Pass matriculation is a four years' course, honor matriculation requires five years. The matriculation course is for those who wish to qualify for entrance into the universities and the learned professions.

The subjects in the first year of this course are as follows: English composition and literature, Canadian history, English grammar, botany, geography, algebra, Latin, French, household science (girls), manual training (boys), physical training.

3.—The teachers' and matriculation course.

This course allows pupils to take courses 1 and 2 simultaneously.

4.—The general High School course.

This is a course of four or five years for those who desire a general High School education without any special object in view.

Vocational Department.

The vocational department which has been added to the Peterborough Collegiate Institute is the answer to the growing demand that our Secondary Schools offer preparatory courses not only to those entering the professions, but also to that larger group who will find their way into trade, commerce and industry.

The vocational department offers three courses:

1.—The commercial course.

This course is planned to meet the needs of boys and girls looking forward to employment in commercial occupations. It is designed to give a general High School education, together with such training in business theory and practice that students, besides being generally well-informed, will be able to adapt themselves to the needs of any business with which they may become identified.

It is not intended that this course shall turn out thoroughly trained business men and women, but rather students so trained that they may readily adapt themselves to and master the details of any business with which they may become connected.

A higher standard is being demanded in offices to-day than ever before. Ability to typewrite and to take shorthand notes is not sufficient. General intelligence, resourcefulness, and ability to meet the public, are necessary.

Punctuality, courtesy and industry are expected of commercial graduates. Hence the demand to-day for commercial students with a good High School training.

The commercial course is subdivided into four courses: (a) The general commercial course; (b) The accounting course; (c) The secretarial course; (d) A special one-year course.

Courses (a), (b) and (c) require three years each. The special one-year course is for students who have successfully completed at least two years' High School work. Pupils taking this course devote their whole time during the year to commercial subjects.

In (a), the general course, the subjects taken up the first year are as follows: English literature, English composition, including grammar, arithmetic, including rapid calculation, physiography, spelling and penmanship, typewriting, stenography, Canadian history, physical culture, one of (1) French, (2) household science, (3) manual training.

Graduates of (b), the accountancy course, are competent to fill a variety of office positions such as involve a knowledge of auditing and accountancy.

Graduates of (c), the secretarial course, find positions as secretaries, stenographers, typists, filing clerks, business machine operators, and in general office work.

2.—Household arts course (girls only).

This is a three years' course for girls in the science of home-making and household economics.

A thorough training in the basic principles of home economics is of the greatest value to all girls.

Graduates of this course may become nurses-in-training, or may find their vocations as saleswomen or assistants in dressmaking and millinery departments, hospitals or cafeterias, or wherever a practical knowledge of the subject is required.

The subjects taken up in the first year of the household arts course and the probable allotment of time for each subject will be as follows:

Academic subjects:

	Periods.
English literature	3
English composition, spelling and grammar	3
Canadian history and civics	4
Arithmetic	5
Physiography and geography	4
	19

Technical subjects:

	Periods
Cookery	5
Dressmaking	5
Millinery	2
Home nursing and home management	2
Art	5
	19
Physical culture	2
	40

3.—The industrial course (boys only).

The purpose of this course is to give to boys in conjunction with academic education a training in the fundamental operations and processes of some vocation (including a knowledge of the "hows and whys" of such a vocation). This course does not aim to turn out the finished product, that is, the Journeyman. The Journeyman's skill is based upon repetition of operation, and if boys were kept in school until such skill was developed the cost would be prohibitive. It is, therefore, the aim of this course to give a general training along industrial lines, rather than intensive instruction in any one trade or pursuit. The boy who spends three or even two years in this course should develop very quickly into a very competent workman who will advance rapidly.

The subjects taken up in the first year of the industrial course and the probable allotment of time for each will be as follows:

Academic subjects:

	Periods.
English literature	3
English composition, spelling and grammar	3
Canadian history and civics	4
Shop mathematics	5
Science and geography	4
	19

Technical subjects (shop work for boys):

	Periods.
Woodwork	4
Machine shop	4
Electricity	4
Motor mechanics	2
Draughting	5
	19
Physical culture	2
	40

If a pupil cannot spend five or at least four years in securing a secondary education he should seriously consider enrolling in one of the courses in the vocational department.

Yours very truly,
H. R. H. KENNER.

OBITUARY

ALBERT WELLMAN.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BONARLAW, August 24.—The death occurred at his late residence on the 14th concession of Rawdon on Saturday, August 18, of Albert Wellman, aged 72 years and one day. The late Mr. Wellman was in poor health for the last few years, but was not confined to his bed until Thursday last, while is was not expected that he would recover, his death came with a shock. The late Mr. Wellman, commonly known as Abb, was very highly respected, was a great angler. He lived most of his days on the 14th concession.

In religion he was Union and his last wish was that his friends would know he was prepared to meet his Heavenly Father. He leaves to mourn his loss besides his sorrowing widow, eight children, namely: Mrs. Herbert Rusaw, of Norwood, Mrs. McTaggart and Mrs. Simpson of Toronto, Nelson of Norwood, William of Hastings, Albert of Michigan, George and John of Rawdon.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Gardiner at Springbrook United Church. Interment at Mount Nebo Cemetery.

The many beautiful floral tributes speak of the high esteem in which he was held.

The Supreme Touch to Confections

ADD a delicious, nutmeat flavour to your homemade candy. Use Quaker Puffed Wheat. Better than nuts. Different from anything else.

Quaker Puffed Wheat is always enticing. It brings a new crunchiness to your favourite confections.

The whole wheat grain puffed to eight times normal size and exploded, thoroughly cooked and oven-crisped. Every starch cell broken down, thus making digestion easy. Serve direct from the package, or warm if you wish.

Quaker Puffed Rice, too 620

If you prefer the rice flavour, use Puffed Rice. Puffed to eight times normal size and exploded like Puffed Wheat.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 24.—Miss Margaret Irwin of Toronto, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Irwin, Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pallister and family have returned after an eight weeks tour of the Canadian and American west.

Mr. Hubert Lawrie and son Andy, and Mr. Horace Carnhew of Waterico left yesterday for a two weeks vacation at Crowe River.

The local lawn bowling club was represented by one rink at the Tweed tournament on Wednesday. Although they did not bring home the bacon they played three closely contested games. The players were Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Allan, Mrs. J. P. Archer and Mr. T. S. Tait, skip.

With the business section of Front street north surfaced, the work has been commenced on the Stirling road connection (Centre street.) Excavation and concrete work is still in progress at the north end of Front street.

On Country Highways Walk on the Left Side

Do not walk with the traffic—but AGAINST it

Pedestrians on country highways are less likely to be struck by motor vehicles when they walk on the left side. Then they FACE the on-coming traffic.

Motor vehicles run quietly. When a horn sounds from behind, a person may become startled and step the wrong way.

A pedestrian on the left side of the road can see, as well as hear, the approaching vehicle. Where several are walking together, they should walk in single file.

Drivers of motor vehicles must slow down and sound horn when approaching persons walking.

They must not force pedestrians off the road. They should should not try to pass a vehicle and a pedestrian at the same time. Where children are concerned they should be particularly careful.

On City Streets

Where there is a traffic officer or traffic signal, cross with the wheeled traffic. Don't try to dodge through a traffic line. The drivers have secured the right of way from the officer or signal.

Cross busy streets at intersections. Then you will save yourself needless risks. Pedestrians who are considerate of motor drivers will better protect themselves.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND PLOPPITY PLOP

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Jackie Bow Wow and his mother stood in the bath-room, with Uncle Wiggily, watching the wonderful sailboat glide back and forth across the tub, without any one blowing it or fanning it to make a breeze.

"I can't see what makes it go!" said puzzled Jackie for about the tenth time. "Isn't it wonderful?"

"I call it my wonderful boat!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily. "But it is very simple when you know how."

"Then you had better tell us," gently barked Mrs. Bow Wow, "for I can't guess and I shall soon have to go out and get supper. I'd like to know what makes the boat move without any one touching it or making any breeze for it."

"Maybe Uncle Wiggily has tied to it a string we can't see," suggested Jackie.

"No, I'll go out of the room and the boat will still sail," said the rabbit gentleman, and, truly enough, it did.

As I told you in the story before this, Jackie was ill. To amuse him, Uncle Wiggily brought the little puppy a top sail-boat. But when Jackie grew dizzy from blowing it and when Uncle Wiggily grew tired of fanning the sails, the rabbit gentleman hopped away and came back with a pail of water. He shut himself up in the bath-room and when he called in Jackie and Mrs. Bow Wow, there was the wonderful boat moving to and fro and no one could tell what made it go.

"But now I'll show you my secret!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily. "You may let go now, Bully, and stick your head out," he went on, speaking loudly to some one whom neither Jackie nor his mother could see.

But a moment later up out of the water in the bath tub, beside the boat, was thrust the head of Bully Notail, the frog boy. Bully was smiling all over his big mouth and as he floated on top of the water, with one paw, like a hand, resting on the edge of the toy sail-boat, Bully croaked:

"Is that enough, Uncle Wiggily? Don't you want me to swim under water some more and push the sailboat about in the tub?"

"No more, Bully, thank you," answered the rabbit. "The trick is over. I think I have made Jackie feel happier."

"Oh, indeed you have!" barked Jackie, who had almost forgotten that he was ever ill. "I've had a lovely time. I'll soon be able to go out and sail my new boat on the duck pond where the real wind will blow on it. So it was you, Bully, who made my little ship go?"

"Yes, I did it!" croaked the frog boy. "Uncle Wiggily carried me from our pond up here in a pail of water. He put me in the bath tub and told me to sink down in the water out of sight and while under water to reach one paw under the keel, or bottom, of the boat and tow it along to make it look as if it were sailing. So I did!"

"You fooled me all right," said Jackie.

"I couldn't imagine what it was," said Mrs. Bow Wow. "But hark, if you please," she gently whined, "I thought I heard the front door open."

Mrs. Bow Wow was right about this. Not only had the front door opened, but in had sneaked the Bob Cat and his silly little tail. The Bob Cat had seen Uncle Wiggily enter the kennel house and knowing Jackie was ill, the Bob Cat thought it would be easy to catch the rabbit.

But Bully the frog, who had gone to the head of the stiars, looked down. Seeing the Bob Cat in the hall, and knowing the Bad Chap would get Uncle Wiggily, Bully croaked:

"Here's where I make myself into a ploppity plop! I'll plop that Bob Cat in the face and make him wish he'd stayed out."

So, all wet as he was from having sailed the boat in the bath tub, Bully went plipping and plopping and hopping down the stairs. And when near the bottom the frog suddenly plopped into the Bob Cat's face, all dripping wet as he was!

"Oh, what's this?" howled the surprised Bob Cat. "Wow!"

"I'm a ploppity plop!" answered the croaking frog boy. And, truly, that's just what he sounded like when he jumped, all wet as he was. Anyhow he made the Bob Cat run away so Mr. Longears wasn't nibbled.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Friday, August 24, 1928

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

(Copyright, 1928, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Again sinister planetary influences appear strong according to astrology which reads in the skies malefic aspects that bode ill for many persons on Earth, the planet now in a period of supreme transitions.

Financial conditions may be unsatisfactory for many persons who have not accepted the warnings of the seers. Speculation should be avoided to-day.

It may be especially unlucky to lend anything under this sway, which does not encourage financial helpfulness.

Lovers, whether marrier or engaged, should beware of quarrels and misunderstandings to-day. The wise will avoid risking disillusionment.

Actors and actresses should watch their steps at this time, which is unfortunate for stage and screen. Changes of ultimate value will affect the theatres.

Women may be unusually sensitive and nervous while this configuation prevails. It is well to be patient, no matter what the temperament may be.

This is an ideal day for bestowing flowers or for tending them. Gardens again focus much interest and a few that rival those of Europe will be much exploited, it is foretold.

While this rule prevails it is wise to think much more than one speaks. Words may be easily understood under this direction of the stars, which should warn political speakers to be exceedingly careful.

Many difficulties for ambassadors to foreign countries are forecast. The next President of the United States is to have great opportunities to prove his sagacity, astrologers prognosticate.

Problems new in governmental history and affected by the latest inventions that widen the scope of men's activities are foretold.

Because the smallest incidents often have widest effects and important events are reflected in the most insignificant lives there will be at this time much mental unrest, but the seers prophesy for the country continued progress and prosperity.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have to endure mental conflict in the coming year, but they can win peace and harmony by sticking to their right paths. These persons on the cusp of Leo and Virgo are often as difficult as they are charming.

Children born on this day probably will have eventful lives. The subjects of this sign which combines earth and fire influence have superb possibilities, as a general thing. They probably will love the outdoor world and be important at the restrictions of cities.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's roommate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

When Sanderson asks Akers to help Sally he says that he's through with her. Sanderson gives him a black eye. Poppy comes to tell Sanderson that the doctors say Sally will never walk again.

IX—MARKING TIME

Sometimes had risen from his cushion in a corner of the room, and was watching her with interested eyes, his long, whip-like tail waving to and fro.

Poppy looked at him nervously; she was afraid of all animals; she was fond of declaring that in her last time on earth she was sure she had been a hunted deer or a "poor, mangy rabbit," as she expressed it.

She called out now to Sanderson.

"Here, is this ugly brute of yours going to bite me? I don't like the look of him."

"He won't touch you unless you try to set about me," Sanderson answered grimly.

He was trying to fasten his tie, but his hands shook badly and made him bungle it, and he swore aloud.

Poppy heard him from the next room, and laughed.

"Don't you swear in front of a lady!" she admonished him. The brandy had put her in a better temper.

Sanderson came back into the room; he looked at the empty glass on the table beside her.

"How you can drink that filthy stuff at this time of the morning beats me," he said gruffly. "You ought to drink coffee, a girl of your age."

"You don't know what my age is," she answered. She looked up at him coyly from beneath her blackened lashes. "Now, how old do you think I am?" she inquired interestedly. "Bet you can't guess."

"I'm not going to try," he answered uncompromisingly. "And I'm ready when you are."

"Ready—for what?"

"To go to the hospital, of course."

Poppy laughed, and drew her chair closer to the fire.

"No use going there yet," she said. "They've got proper visiting hours. Can't go till two this afternoon." She stooped and poked the smoky fire into a small blaze. "Here, don't you ever have any breakfast nowadays?" she asked.

Sanderson took up his hat.

"If you want breakfast, we'll get some out. No nonsense, now!" he added sharply, as she seemed about to defy him.

Poppy stared at him for a moment with resentful eyes, then she rose to her feet with a long-suffering sigh.

"You're a hard nut to crack," she said bitterly. "No wonder Sally won't have any truck with you. Do you ever say anything nice to anyone, I wonder?"

"That's my own business," Sanderson answered.

He opened the door for her to pass out, and whistled the dog.

"Going to bring that ugly brute?" Poppy asked.

"I am. Come on, old man."

Sometimes needed no second invitation. He had been watching his master with growing anxiety, which vanished instantly as he followed closely at his heels as they left the flat and went down the long, stone staircase.

"What do you call him by such a silly name for?" Poppy asked scornfully.

Sanderson laughed.

"Because, like me, he likes to be made a fuss of 'sometimes,'" he said flippantly.

The girl stared at him disbelievingly, then she giggled.

"Go on! You like being made a fuss of! You won't get over me with that stuff."

"I don't want to get over you with that stuff or any other stuff," Sanderson answered.

He disliked Poppy, and only ever tolerated her for Sally's sake. Out in the street he set off at a great rate, so that she had almost to run to keep pace with him. After a few moments she stopped breathlessly.

"What the Godfrey Daniels are you in such a hurry for?" she demanded angrily.

Sanderson slackened his speed.

"I'm sorry. I always walk quickly when I'm alone."

"Well, you're not alone now," she retorted.

They went to a small restaurant, and Sanderson passed Poppy the menu.

"Order what you like," he said briefly.

Poppy's eyes glowed. As a rule her breakfast consisted of a cup of stewed tea and a slice of unappetizing bread-and-scrape. Even when she was in a position to afford a better meal she never troubled; by nature she was bone lazy. The dream of her life was to marry a rich man and keep a maid of her own.

"And I won't half make her fetch and carry," she once confided to Sally. "I'll lie in bed all day, and ring the bell every ten minutes and make her answer it."

"She wouldn't stay long," Sally answered wisely. "And you'd soon get sick of lying in bed."

Poppy remembered Sally's words now as she pored greedily over the menu. How awful to have to lie in bed, and be alone as Sally was now! For a moment her interest in food waned, and she looked across at Sanderson with tragic eyes.

"Here!" she said bluntly. "What do you suppose will become of me when I'm too old to work?"

It was always a nightmare thought to her, and one which cropped up at the oddest moments.

Sanderson shrugged his shoulders; his troubled thoughts were far enough away.

"You'll have found someone to keep you long before then, Poppy," he answered, not unkindly.

She laughed rather sadly.

"To keep me, or marry me, do you mean?" she asked with weary mirth.

Sanderson frowned.

"You'd better order what you want," he said.

Poppy sighed, and turned again to the question of food.

"You're right," she agreed. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush—eh? Well, I'll have porridge to start with, and then eggs and bacon. What are you going to have?"

"I only want some coffee."

She looked disappointed; it was never so much fun eating alone.

"Well, if you don't mind watching the lions feed!" she said, with an attempt at levity.

"We've got to kill time till we can go to the hospital," Philip Sanderson answered.

But as he watched her at her meal his grim dislike of her was oddly tempered with pity. He knew a great deal of the ultimate ending of such girls as Poppy and Sally Lingfield, and he fully realized the tragedy of it.

Poppy seemed vaguely to follow the trend of his thoughts, for she broke out suddenly:

"See the old girl at the desk over there?"

Sanderson glanced across the restaurant to where a woman of uncertain age, with a screw of unattractive grey hair and dark, beady eyes was closely watching them, above a pile of account books.

"Well, what about her?" he asked casually. "She probably owns the place, or is the wife of the man who does."

Poppy smiled complacently.

"She's envying me like the devil," she said almost cheerfully; she liked to feel she was making another woman envious. "I'll bet she'd be surprised if I got up and went over to her and said, 'Look here, old sport, I'll change places with you, if you like!'—wouldn't she?"

"I dare say, and, anyway, you would n't change places with her."

Poppy put down her porridge spoon.

"Well, then, I would!" she said, suddenly earnest. "At any rate, she's got a certain job and a wedding ring."

There was a note of genuine emotion in her voice that touched Philip Sanderson surprisingly.

"You poor little devil!" he said.

Poppy winked away an unbidden tear.

"I'm getting sloppy," she informed him. "It's your brandy. It's gone to my head. Pour out the coffee, there's a dear."

Sanderson obeyed abstractedly. His thoughts were all with Sally. What in the world was to become of her? As far as money went he was in a position to see that she wanted for nothing, but money was not everything. Where was she to live, and what was she to do? Who would look after her and be kind to her? He moved restlessly in his seat.

FOWL CULLING DEMONSTRATED

Useful Address Given at Warsaw By Poultry Expert.

WARSAW NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Aug. 24.—Twenty-eight persons gathered at William Miller's farm on Tuesday afternoon for a demonstration in hen judging. J. B. Nelson, agricultural representative, accompanied Mr. Sneider, the demonstrator.

Among Mr. Sneider's points were that if those who attended did not make use of what they heard they might better not have come. Their time and his would be wasted. The thing to do was to study and cull the hens the very next day. Every one had a hen. The flock was of barred rocks. Very few were holding the hens correctly. It should be held with the index finger between the legs, the legs held firmly, somewhat extended, so that it cannot kick and struggle, with the head towards the holder under the arm. Fowl sometimes die suddenly if carried by the legs with the heads down, and it nearly always injures a laying hen.

He had the class notice the difference between the heads of several birds. The good type had a bright full eye, no overhanging eyebrows, no wrinkles, clean wattles, wide flat head, without hollows, and strong peak, wide at the back. A hen is a factory and must be properly built for health and production. For health there must be breadth and width at the heart. For egg production the back must be straight, flat and wide, and carry its width right back. A hump-backed hen is likely to be too fat and lazy. The breast bone must be long, the space at the ends of the back bone and between it and the breast bone wide. The skin should be fine and the abdomen soft and pliable, the legs fine with smooth scales, toe-nails worn short.

After egg production begins the hen gradually loses some of her color. The eyelids pales first, the wattles (in some breeds), the peak, upper parts and backs of legs, then the under side and feet. The feathers lose their gloss and feel harsh. The vent becomes large and moist.

Such a hen has many marks of a good producer.

Then the fowl must be well and properly fed, watered and housed. Ancestry counts. The better the ancestry the better the hen.

During the brooding period the hens should be in a cage hung up, well fed and watered. All fowl not on the perch at night should be shut up at once. Every day they are allowed to sit weakens them and makes it longer for them to get back to work.

Hens and pullets should be housed separately, as the feed required to keep a pullet laying makes a hen too fat.

A dry mash in a hopper should always be before the fowl. It should be composed of crushed oats, barley, a little corn and a good deal of wheat, with whole grain fed from a trough at night. Pullets should have a wet mash at noon. Grain should not be scattered in litter as the henhouse floor is never absolutely clean and infection might result. A good hen will scratch anyway. Chicks can easily be raised economically by building a colony house on runners. Have the chicks all hatched at the same time and use your brooder. Feeding may easily be done by having a large hopper with feed enough for several days. Water may be placed in a barrel arranged with a drip.

For hen lice use either small amounts of blue ointment around the vent and under the wings, or sodium clouride in pinches. For mites use coal oils with a little coal-oil painted on the perches and supports is best. These treatments must be repeated in ten days to destroy the eggs. A hen needs about seven pounds of food a month, and must lay about one hundred and twenty eggs a year to pay for her board and more to pay for time spent and housing. Properly bred fowl of good type, carefully fed and housed, will pay well. Others do not. A flock is as well culled once a month, but it is necessary to cull once a year.

All Mr. Sneider told may be learned in pamphlets obtained from Mr. Nelson. The advantage of the demonstration is the actual handling of fowl.

The storm had made the grounds wet, so Mr. Miller had seats arranged in the barn, and every one was very comfortable.

Storm Stops Harvest.

About noon on Tuesday a heavy wind storm followed by a downpour of rain and a heavy electric storm put an end to harvesting operations. Several went to dinner leaving their binders in the field uncovered, and there they had to stay. Those who had land on which they could work early have their summer harvest all in. Others have oats and barley not quite ready yet to cut.

In some places grasshoppers are very thick, but others, even where they had previously been had, are entirely free.

The storm does not seem to have done much harm, even to lodge uncut grain. No damage was reported except that some handsome dahlias had been broken off and some uprooted.

Warsaw cheese factory reports for July are out. Payments are made at the rate of 50 cents a pound butter fat.

Personals.

Mrs. Hooper and her three children, who have been visiting cousins near Warsaw, returned to Toronto on Monday.

Miss Margaret Eddy is spending a week with her cousin, Miss Hilda Clysdale.

Mrs. Robert Anderson and son, Oswald, also Mr. and Mrs. Donald Anderson and Allan Anderson, visited Mrs. Robert Anderson's sister, Mrs. John Clysdale, on Sunday.

Charley Morrison, Willie Parcels and John Johnston left for the West on the harvesters' excursion on Monday evening.

Dr. Munro received word on Monday morning that his mother had died at Nairn.

Shower Arranged.

On Friday evening Norman Matthews and Gordon Davis, from Lakefield, arranged a miscellaneous shower for Milford Clysdale and bride (nee Violet Matthews). Between ninety and one hundred guests from Lakefield, Warsaw and vicinity were present in Warsaw Town Hall. There was music and dancing, with refreshments at midnight. The gifts, of which there were many and all beautiful and useful, included blankets, comforters, china, silver and household linen.

Dr. Munro gave a short speech. Mr. Clysdale thanked the donors and the gathering sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Music was supplied by Dr. Munro, Thomas Davis and Miss Edith Tucker.

The young couple will make their home in Lakefield.

Road Being Graded.

The road from Selkirk's corner to the Postoffice corner is being graded by the county road gang. A coat of crushed stone will be applied.

BABY-STARE - By FANNIE HURST

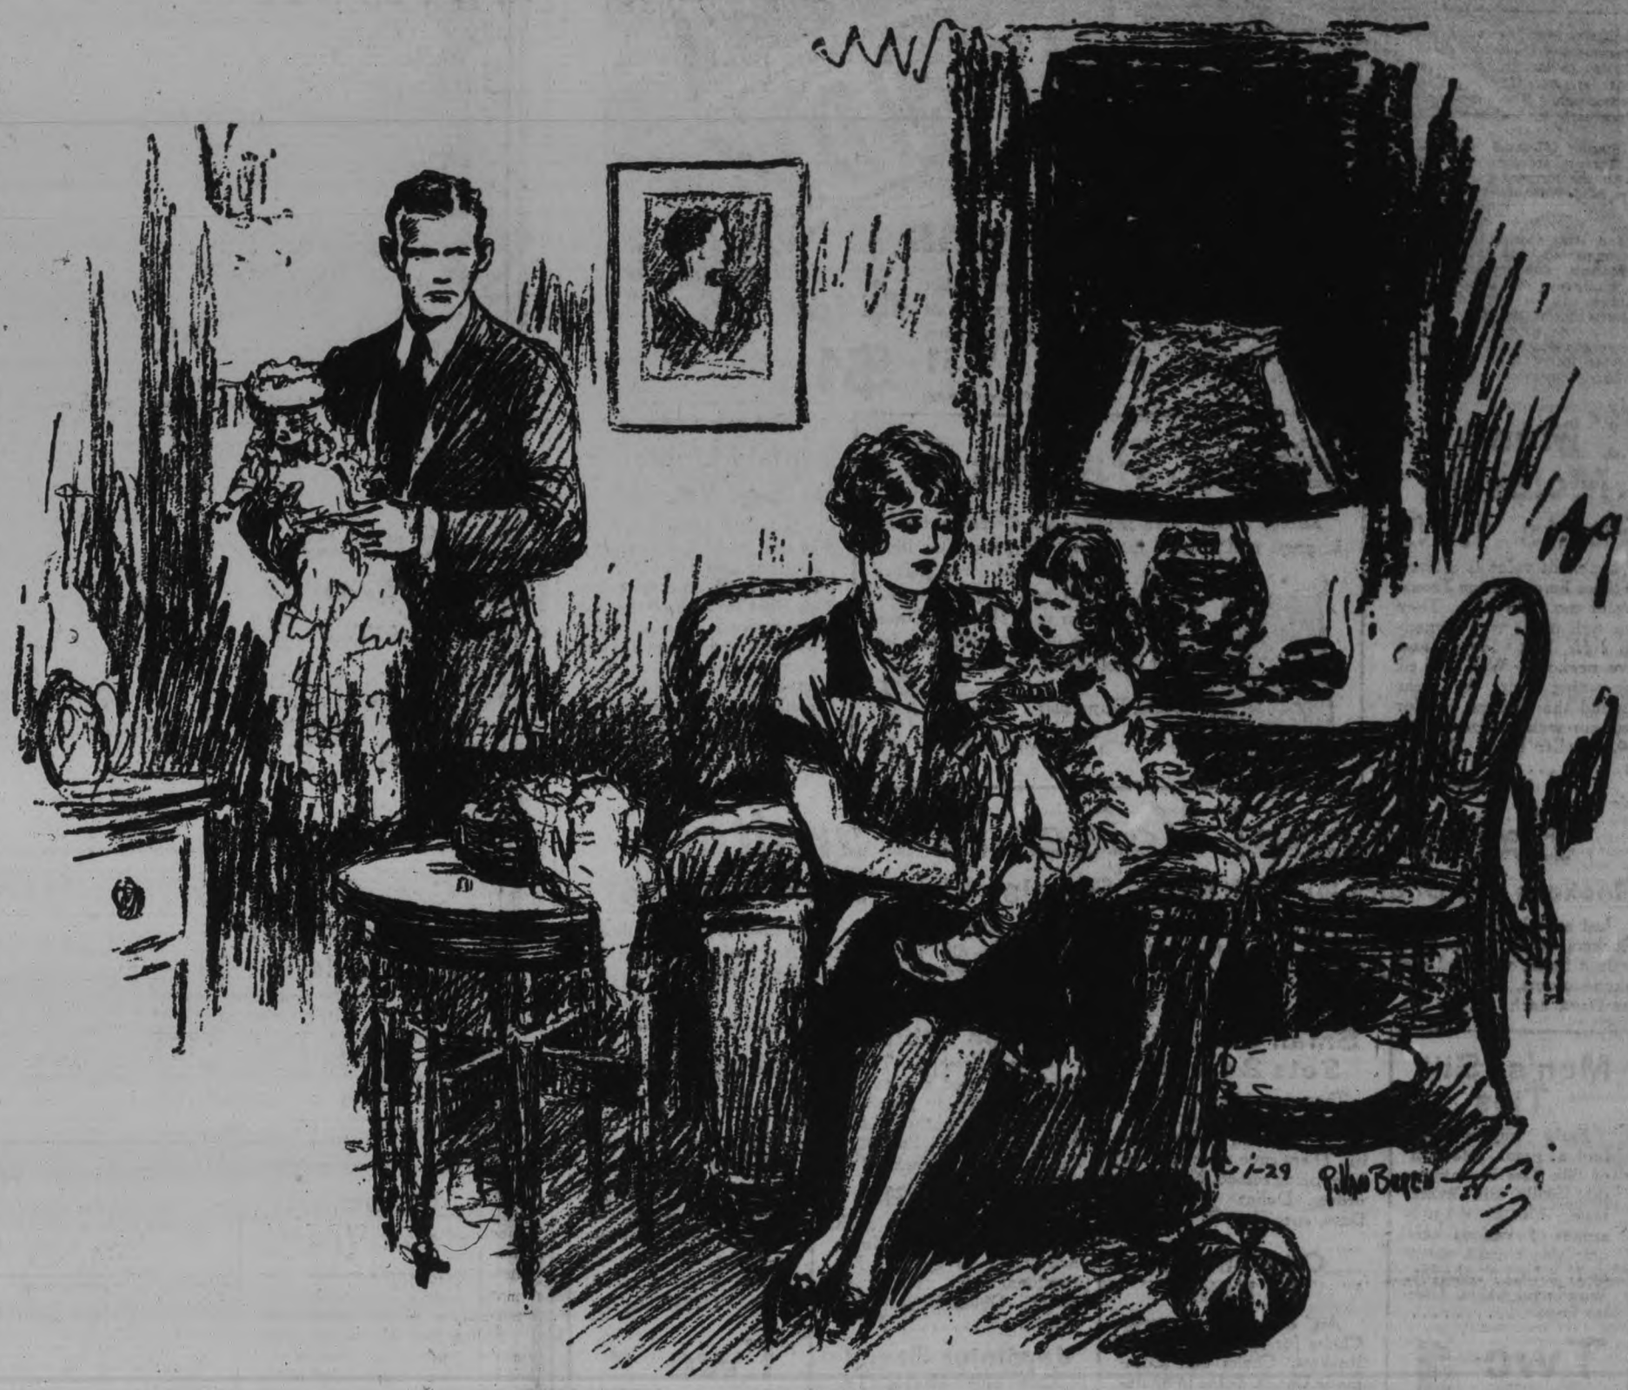
The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Lummox", "Humoresque"



A phantom of delight was Harry's baby, the idol of her doting father. Full of unexpected quirks of temperament that made her father dote on her from the first week of her life.

But dolls frankly bored her—and Harry was a maker of dolls.

DELLA never ceased to regard with a kind of secret surprise what she considered as an anachronism in the man to whom she was married. It was not that Harry had ever out-and-out expressed himself, but apparently he was a man to whom the idea or the appeal of parenthood had not come. What had created in Della her feeling of anachronism was Harry's trade combined with this characteristic in him that made it seem surprising and not quite explainable.

He was a doll-maker and the owner of a small factory where he employed five or six helpers. But he did most of the major work of painting the faces, dressing the wigs and designing the clothing himself. All summer long, the little work-rooms hummed with the sound of Christmas preparation. Sometimes, Harry even brought home a design or two for a new doll that was forming in his brain and worked out the idea beside the living-room lamp of their little flat while Della sewed on doll-clothes or more personal handiwork.

Sometimes Della wished that Harry's designs were more in keeping with the craze for character-dolls that was sweeping the country, but it was Harry's contention that the best selling doll, with the exception of the kewpie, was the old-fashioned little cherub that appealed to the maternalism of the girl-child.

Well, in a way, his judgment was upheld by the fact that the living he obtained from the doll-factory was pleasantly substantial; one that enabled him and Della to live comfortably, if conservatively, in a pretty little flat in an uptown neighborhood, with a maid who came in two or three hours each day to help Della with the heavier work and enough surplus left over to provide pleasantly for occasional amusements and even an annual holiday at some nearby resort.

Harry had his regular customers, toy merchants who knew that his dolls were well and carefully made and who could rely upon the quality of his workmanship.

ONLY when Harry was thirty-two, Della sometimes began to tell herself with a sinking feeling at her heart that he threatened to become the sort of successful petty business-man who was not going to get any further. He began to have that settled look about the eyes; that mild acquiescence to mild good fortune; a sedative manner that implied a man to whom small rewards were sufficient.

It affected Della with something like a stab of fear for him. To see him gaining weight and losing hair and desire at thirty-two.

In her opinion, he was too young and able a man to be satisfied with his mild success.

More and more insistently she began to call to his attention the fact that the era of the character-doll had dawned irrevocably and that the pretty bisque baby of yesterday no longer appealed to the modern child.

The rows of pink and white bisque faces in Harry's factory bespoke lethargy and lack of initiative to Della. She was forever bringing home little boy-dolls in overalls with front teeth missing and eyes impishly cocked, or roguish little girls with turned-up noses and naughty, smudged hands.

Just to satisfy her, Harry tried his hand at creating one or two of the character-babies, but his skill failed him. To him, a doll-baby was a doll-baby—pink and bisque.

Child-psychology was a phrase that meant nothing to him.

Then, sure enough, the business did begin to fall off. Dealers were out after a brand new type of doll-person. Almost over-night, as it were, it seemed to Harry that the demand for his wares dropped to less than one-third.

With a tenacity that now began to appall Della as much as it had heretofore only annoyed her, Harry clung to his conviction that a baby-doll was a baby-doll—round-eyed, pink-cheeked and finger-curled.

It was the dreary result of this persistence, Della felt assured, that ultimately forced Harry to dispense with all but one of his assistants in the shop, and compelled the move from their pretty little flat into lodgings where Della did most of their cooking on an alcohol stove in an alcove.

THAT lean year, and it must be admitted rather to their consternation, their baby was born.

It was not a particularly rosy world into which Harry and Della were bringing their offspring. They realized that secretly and with a certain shame and terror.

Their daughter was a sprite of a youngster, slightly below normal weight, but of a vivacity and elfish beauty that from the first week of her birth, was to astound her parents.

She was not much like any of the baby-dolls that had marched in solemn procession out of Harry's conception. She had black, merry eyes that danced at absurd and delightful angles in their whites, and there were peaks to her eyebrows and her shock of heavy black hair rushed down to a little peak on her forehead.

She was a "phantom of delight", all right, this youngster.

She was full of unexpected quirks of temperament, coy as a baby-soubrette and even when naughty, adorable in a way that made her father begin to dote from the first week of her life.

Dolls frankly bored her and her initial gesture, once her little hands caught at one, was to dash it face downward from her as if the sight of the inane little painted smirk that was the invention of her father's brain, enraged her.

One day Della fashioned her a rag doll, a little pickaninny with a black calico face and green bead eyes. The baby-Della got on with this rag person better, even pressing small kisses against the broad calico smile of pickaninny.

It hurt Harry to realize his daughter's disdain for his bisque beauties. Night after night he brought them home for her, tall elaborate ones in taffeta frocks and in large lace hats.

There were tiny dolls, perfect in each detail of closing eyes, real hair, fat, pink cheeks, pearly little white teeth that showed between their ever-parted lips. One night he brought a doll with real hairs fastened along the edge of her waxen lids, like real eye lashes. Dolls in velvet and georgette and lace, in fur and gauze and organdie.

There were baby dolls, their pouting red lips set in an eternally seraphic smile. Baby dolls big enough to fit into real baby clothes—little enough to be hidden in a paper Easter egg. All perfect in pink and white completeness.

Dolls with ringlets of corn-yellow, of brown, of gleaming black, dolls with parts and dolls with bangs, dolls with babyish curls, dolls with a Dutch-boy bob.

"All kinds," said Harry, with injured pride. "And modern, you see, with their hair bobbed."

The lips below the varied hair smiled all the same smile—complacent, monotonous, stereotyped—to Harry the proper smile for successful dolls, the smile good dolls had always worn, and therefore should always wear.

But there was no converting his daughter to their bisque wiles. She grasped each one, looked uninterestedly into its pretty face, and sent it—sometimes with a nonchalant shove, sometimes with a vigorous blow—from her chair or her crib to the floor.

One night, after a series of these crashing rejections of the gifts he came bearing, Harry sat himself down thoughtfully beside his child as she lay asleep, and began to draw.

It was past midnight when he stopped and instead of going to bed, he slid into his coat and went back to the factory, where he worked the rest of the night in the cold work rooms under a single glaring electric bulb.

The name of the new doll he had completed by dawn, he scrawled in India Ink on the sole of her gay little foot. Thus he christened her "Sprite".

HARRY, who ships out of his factory thousands of these doll-babies, insists that "Sprite" is not a faithful prototype of his daughter, because no doll in the world could ever catch the elfish quality that is hers.

Della, when he says this, just sits by and looks wise.

LYRICS OF LIFE

LYRICS OF LIFE
(By Douglas Malloch)
THE NORMAL THING

To be beloved by our own,
And have a friend or two,
And for our goodness to be known,
It not so hard to do
We need be normal, that is all,
And to the normal thing,
As simple as the water's fall,
As certain as the spring.

The right is such an easy road,
The wrong is such a maze,
And sin is such a heavy load,
Why wander from our ways?
The path of every man is plain,
Each woman's course is clear,
And, if we kept them, half the pain
Of life would disappear.

To be beloved, just be kind,
Be honored, just be true:
To be respected, you will find,
Is not so hard to do.
Whatever other people say,
Whatever taunts they fling,
Just walk along, the usual way,
And do the normal thing.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTOIN

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation and make digestion easy. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

The collar of ruffled velvet from a new evening wrap of deep red velvet.

One might think that fashion had become pensive and melancholy since she has come out so strongly in favor of shades of brown and blue. But a few hours spent in seeing some of the new hats, wraps, and frocks of these fashionable hues leaves one with the impression that somehow some new shades of these two colors had been discovered.

There are soft warm tones of brown—the warmth and richness depending often on the beauty of the fabric in which they make their appearance. One of the shops I visited today displayed vanilla brown—that looked as vanilla might if shown in thin glass goblets with the sun beaming through. Then there are soft reddish shades like that of the chestnut—and mahogany or acajou.

The very bright blues that were favored six months ago look not quite so smart at present—and it is before the new misty, duller blues that you stop, realizing that here indeed is something quite new.

A lovely faded old blue called bleu andoise has been received with much interest here since it was launched by Patou in Paris. It has been spoken of as a gunmetal with a bluish cast. It really is a blue, not a gray, but there is something decidedly suggestive of gunmetal about it. The collar shown in the sketch is made of velvet—part of one of the new velvet evening coats. The petal effect made of the velvet is an interesting departure from the usual fur collar. You may have heard of the new Paquin collar, which is used with fur on cloth coats for autumn. It is a collar that stands up with a sort of flare at the side and back—that may be worn without interference with the new drooping brimmed hats.

TRAVEL-LOG.

A CITY OF ASIA IN ITALY

It might be said of more places than one, that where Italians live today, the spirit of Asia permeates everything, but of Palermo in Sicily it always seems to me to be specially true. Its lovely and strange Cathedral itself conveys this to the mind, as if the East and not the West had reared it for a glory, other than that of Rome. Byzantine Norman, German, French and Spaniard have come here to reign, but they seem to have left only bones, the spirit which lives after them is Saracen and Phoenician. Asia sits on the throne invisible and rules every understanding heart which comes within its influence. Europe and Asia struggled here long for the mastery, and though the body is European today, the Asiatic has really won. The languor of the place, the enclosed gardens, and scores of memorials of stone and color sing lazily of the fatal charm of a Mohammedan city, so that one almost looks to see camels arriving laden with spices from a dessert, and dawn worship on pinnacles to Allah in the name of the prophet. It gives a unique charm to Palermo and makes a European excursion richer for the Asiatic blend.

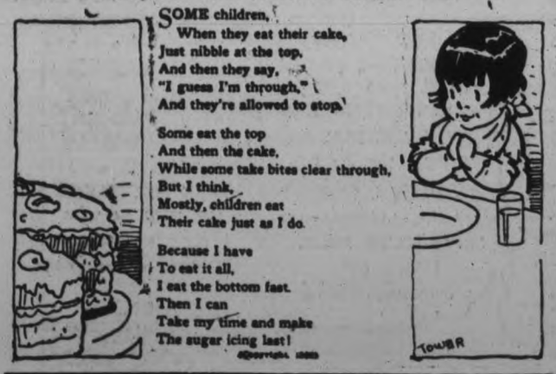
Eating Cake
By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

"WORK before play," cake before icing, is a good motto If a disagreeable task is to be performed in connection with a pleasure or reward it is always better to have the pleasure last since anticipation lightens the effort and may even make the task pleasurable If the order is reversed the pleasure is lessened by the thought of the task or by looking back to previous pleasure If every child were taught to enjoy a reward only after earning it he would be much happier The tendency to get what has not been earned, by going into debt, speculation and gambling is the natural result of a childhood that has been allowed to take the sweet first and then evade the bitter or take it only after a fuss



SOME children,
When they eat their cake,
Just nibble at the top,
And then they say,
"I guess I'm through,"
And they're allowed to stop.

Some eat the top
And then the cake,
While some take bites clear through,
But I think,
Mostly, children eat
Their cake just as I do.

Because I have
To eat it all,
I eat the bottom fast.
Then I can
Take my time and make
The sugar icing last!

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

CALLING on some friends the other day I was in time to join in a very interesting conversation. The topic under consideration was Man—his faults and foibles—and the specific question was the why and wherefore of his delinquency in the gentle art of shopping. Many were the theories offered and many the solutions to the problem.

• • • • • •

One lady fumed because she had to choose her own gifts or else reconcile herself to jewelry of which she had a plentiful supply, or candy which only made her break all her good resolutions to ease up on fattening goods. "Goodness knows I don't need to eat sweets!" she said.

• • • • • •

Another grieved because she was tied down by two small children, and John, though he would get up at any time to warm the baby's bottle, had driven her to tears by refusing to take advantage of a great bargain in talcum powder when it was being offered at 19c—reduced from 25c.

"Was it on sale in a drug store" one thoughtful looking woman asked. "No, it was a special one of the department stores had," was the reply.

• • • • • •

"It is the crowd they object to," was volunteered but I refuted that statement by mentioning the jam at ball games and saying that much as the managers of stores would like it there are not always crowds in the shops.

• • • • • •

My husband has no objection to going into a certain popular store and picking up the required article, handing over his 10c or 15c and coming out, but ask him to go anywhere else for the same article unless it be hardware and he says 'no' most decidedly."

• • • • • •

"Louis says," said Louis' wife, "it's because there are too many women around", but that, considering that everyone, including Louis' wife, knew that Louis' sideline happened to be women, was passed over as mere words.

• • • • • •

"I think it is because they don't know how to shop and feel they are inexperienced. How is any man to know what he is asking for if he is told to get six yards of white flannelette and the saleslady offers him canton flannel? Isn't it a fact that most married men get their wives to buy socks, shirts and so on down the list. Of course the unmarried male must do his own shopping but he just follows the style and wears anything that is 'good' in season." That was the defense of a generous minded mother of four who might be expected to look for assistance in shopping from husband.

• • • • • •

The question was not settled and before we broke up we decided to let someone else give it a thought. What is to be done? Shal we conduct night classes in buying for the benefit for prospective husbands? Mayhap a few of the ladies would like to attend as well. Will this be sufficient or shall we have to have a service department for errand-running husbands run by the man whose wife I heard say, "He is just as good as a woman shopping and gets me anything I want." Perhaps separate entrances will appeal to him. There are a number of ways in which he might make him like it.

• • • • • •

And if man does succumb to the allure of shopping and sees his friend and his friend's friend doing likewise, will the habit (since habit is man's god, though it is doubtful is he knows it) fasten itself upon him, and eventually enable him to talk as unconcernedly with a salesgirl while she mixes powder to match his wife's complexion as he can with the manicurist when she performs the lady-like rite of polishing his nails?

• • • • • •

In one of our leading stores, I saw, the other day, a window of French coats. For very practical use, in dry or rainy weather in the city or in the country, the smartest women wear these coats. They are cut on straight lines with raglan sleeves and are fastened in a double breasted closing with waist loosely belted.

• • • • • •

As we drift to the end of the summer our thoughts turn to more clothes. An afternoon gown seen in an advance showing by a certain traveller in town was of navy georgette and marine and sable beige lace. The back was three-quarter pin-tucked and joins done by hand in silk fagoting.

• • • • • •

In a local store a quaint lamp of modern and antinque combination was seen. It is designed after an old fashioned blass candle in amber and the shade is a tailored pleated affair of deep yellow edged with a band of ribbon velvet to tone.

• • • • • •

A visitor on King Street carried a charming purse in shade to match her shoes. She tells us this is as the chic Parisienne does it. Her wallet is chaste in line, decorated by hand in beautiful relief work.

• • • • • •

While visiting on Homewood avenue I bemoaned the fact that my magazines were always scattered about and that even when I did get them toegther they were stacked like sheaves of wheat. My hostess took me to her sunroom and showed me a most convenient stand of metal with a handle. Here she kept her late magazines, saving the older one for distribution to institutions. The stand may be enamelled in any color one wishes.

• • • • • •

A girl dancing at Chemong had a cunning scarf fashioned with a yoke and a pointed cape. The whole was made of chiffon.

• • • • • •

Taking pictures has always been fun but never such fun as now that one can get a camera to match one's dress in color. A tourist snapping our world-famous liftlock had a pretty green dress and camera to match, while the kodak was a case of green for carrying.

• • • • • •

A rather large hat was seen on a feminine head on Charlotte street. Natural baku straw with a triangular pleat in the back of the brim was emphasized by two roses to match. The binding of the brim and band around the crown were of navy-blue satin.

Embroidery hoops and cheesecloth for cooling dishes—When putting puddings or other dishes out of doors to cool, use a cover made of embroidery hoops of proper size with cheesecloth put in as a piece of embroidery is. The contents will be safe from dust, while the air can circulate freely. The hoops keep the cloth from getting in the contents and weigh enough to keep it from blowing off.

1 tablespoon salt

Put the first half on the back of the stove while you are cooking the dressing, then stir all together, and seal.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dear Marion:

I am very interested in your 'Whatnot' column, especially when you give a helping hand to the young girl that made a mistake. There is not one of us without fault, and if everyone was given a helping hand instead of being turned out or pointed at I am sure they would see the error of their ways. I quite agree with you, Marion, in you view, and I wish there were a few more looked at it in your way.

Well, I hope your "Whatnot" column will have great success.

Yours, etc.,
A.M.

Thank you, Mrs. A. M. The "Helps" referred to in the first part of your letter have been sent with my apologies for the delay. I sincerely hope that nothing I may ever do will hurt one who is down and out. If everyone would remember the order for the one without sin to cast the first stone, there would be very little backbiting and "knocking" done in Peterborough.

Mrs. G. M. V.—Rouge and face powder are not injurious to the skin if a good quality is used. It is true some of them do contain poisonous drugs which irritate the skin, but if you purchase the product of a reliable manufacturer you may depend upon the article. Powder puffs should be kept clean. Many people use small pieces of absorbent cotton and throw them away after using. It is a safe plan, especially under conditions such as you describe.

"Dear Marion:

I have a sweetheart I really love and I know he cares for me. But what can I do to make him show his love?

ALINE."

He is either bashful and doesn't know how to get started with his love-making, or he is taking you for granted.

If bashfulness is his trouble, give him a helping hand. Flirt a bit. Be coquettish. Show him by the thousand-and-one signs every girl knows that you care for him a lot and wouldn't be a bit hurt if he cared for you. Tell him you like him. Boost up his self-confidence and self-esteem. Flatter him an itsy-bitsy-bit. In the other case (that he's taking you for granted), just ease off. Show a sudden interest in someone else. Be a trifle hard to make dates with. Make believe it sort of slipped you memory that he was on earth. Then, when he begins to perk up and want to know what's the matter, look as if you were about to pass out with surprise. Quick—the baby stare! Quick—the innocent look! And then, be sweet as pie!

And in the meantime, go back over the last few weeks' Examiners and read "The Art of Attraction."

CUPID—ALIAS LOBSTER NEWBURG
By H. Louis Raybold.

There is something to me that is sad about Commencement time, whether it be the young people who step forth so bravely from the walls that have sheltered them or the older ones who return in a grim determination to recapture that elusive thing—the careless spirit of youth.

And when Billy Edmonds stopped me on the street and begged me to go back to old Rogers for our fifteenth reunion, I hesitated, and after I had left him, deeply regretted my weak yielding to his importunity. Afterwards, however, I could only be glad that, by going, I served as a deus ex machina—quite literally, too—who brought together that fearless airman, Alec Burns, and my old professor's daughter, Diantha Blakewell. Not that I deserve any credit. It was quite unwittingly I served the cause of young love.

One of my first visits on the campus was to Diantha's father who had intervened in my freshman year and saved me from expulsion for a prank which today seems inexcusably silly and adolescent. But I have always felt that I owed him a good turn and, when the opportunity arose, I tried to pass it on through his daughter, without in any way foreseeing its permanent consequences.

In the course of the conversation, Diantha remarked that one of her unfulfilled ambitions at the present moment was to fly.

"Just think," she said, "I have never been up for one little flight!"

And it was that remark, recalled later, that gave her the opportunity she wished.

The really big person in our class was Alec Burns, whose formula for the prevention of sleet on the wings as well as his notable flying record, had won him world wide renown. I had a few moments' chat with him just before the class supper. We had roomed together junior year and had maintained a desultory correspondence.

"You're the only person I'd trust myself with in the air," I admitted frankly.

He grinned. "All right—take you up at nine-thirty in the morning." It was left at that and we went in to find our places at the flower-decked tables.

That night I was taken violently ill—so ill that poor Bill, scared to pieces, called in every specialist he could lay hands on. Some laid it to one thing, some to another, but I sided with the majority who thought it might be an overdose of lobster Newburg.

Morning found me vastly improved but convinced that flying was the thing I least wanted to do.

"Hand me the telephone, Bill," I demanded as nine o'clock approached.

In a moment, Diantha's silvery voice answered me and I made my request.

"Do me a favor, Diantha. Alec Burns will be at the airport at nine-thirty to take me for a ride. It's out of the question, my going. If you're a persuasive little girl, you may be able to take my place."

The big sensation of my fifteenth reunion year was the getting lost in a fog of Alexander Burns and one passenger. They vanished utterly while newspapers screamed in scareheads and broadcasters went crazy.

As a matter of fact, the duration of his disappearance was not so long—a matter of some twelve hours. But let any aviator rise for a thirty minutes' flight and not re-appear for half a day and there is real cause for apprehension. He might have gotten well out over the ocean—Rogers, of course, is right on the Atlantic seaboard—and not be located until the fog lifted.

My state of mind was not enviable. Had I, out of the kindness of my heart, sent Diantha to a hideous death?

To no one more than myself did the news of their arrival, footsore and fatigued, in a remote hamlet bring joy. You probably remember the details as given out over the air. The broken oil feed, the forced landing in a fog, the difficulty of finding their way out of a welter of forested hills.

Three weeks afterwards, I ran into Diantha on Park Avenue. A radiantly beautiful Diantha who seized both my hands in hers. "I'll never be able to thank you," she cried. "Yes, Alec and I are engaged to be married and you are to be best man. Alec is writing you today!"

In that letter which I received the next morning, Alec thanked me, too Said he hadn't known there was a woman made who could be such a sport as Diantha had been on their perilous adventure when more than once Death grinned at them.

Billy Edmonds called me up the other day and asked me how about going back to dear old Rogers for Alumni Day. I said I would take the matter under consideration and got him talking about something else.

But, of course, my wife wanted to know what on earth that Bill Edmonds was calling me about now.

When I told her she didn't seem in favor of my going. "You stay right here at home," she said, "and I'll make you some lobster Newburgh, and if you're sick, we can call in our own family doctor!"

Oh, well, it's only once in a lifetime a person could bring about the marriage of an Alec Burns and a Diantha. And there is something sad about reunions. Besides—I'm off lobster in any form forever.

HARRISONS TO MEET KNIGHTS IN FINAL

NORTH-ENDERS WIN 9-2 COUNT FROM C. G. E.

Fifth-Inning Rally, Netting Harrison's Five Runs, Settles Argument.

ERRORS COSTLY

Victors Play Practically Errorless Game Throughout Fixture.

A fifth innings rally with nine Harrison men to bat netting five runs ut the softball game last night in Confederation Park on ice for the North-Enders when they nicked the C.G.E. ball tossers for a score of 9-2, practically assuring them of a place n the play-offs. Harrisons played an rrorless game, while the numerous errors in the fifth frame and a temorary blow-up for the Electrics gave Harrisons the game. The C.G.E. only cored in one frame, being held scoreess in all but the third.

There was no score in the first two nnings for either team, while the C.G.E. threatened to count. Crary unted safely and stole second, while Weese, after two were down, walked nd Whatley singled, advancing Crary nd Weese, filling the bases, but Richmond, the next man up, knocked what looked like a hit into short ight field, which H. Vinette covered with a smart running catch for the hird put out, pulling Harrisons out of bad hole.

In the third Calladine of Harrisons roke into the scoring column with a ong midfield drive going for a homer. The C.G.E. came back with the Jones rothers scoring in their half after oth bunted safely, and Joe coming n on an overthrow to home and Freddie scoring before the ball reached the plate after Playford was aught out in left field. The score now was two to one for C.G.E.

The fourth was scoreless, but the fifth was as eventful as the Twenty-Fourth of May as far as fireworks were concerned for the North men. Getting away to a bad start after Montgomery was thrown out at first, Calladine polled a double, H. Vinette doubled and Dorrington, Ecobichon and Dundas passed on errors, as also did Dobson after Ross was caught out in left field, and all scored, while Ed. Vinette struck out for the third put-out, but the Electrics were nicked for six runs.

The sixth was scoreless, while Richmond thought it best to retire after the hectic fifth, and "Ace" Powell carried on the firing for the Electrics until the last of the eighth, when the game was called on account of darkness.

In the seventh Dorrington scored on a homer, while the C.G.E. filled the bases but could not score when Calladine struck out for the third put-out.

In the eighth Dobson singled safely and stole second and third, finally scoring, while Weese for the C.G.E. in their frame reached third, but was left there at the close of the game, making the final score 9-2 in favor of the Northerners.

Play Good Ball.

The game was good from both the point of a spectator and the point of the players. Breaks occurred often enough to make it interesting, and the sensational playing of the Jones brothers in left and centre field for the C.G.E. was a treat to watch, while H. Vinette also treated the spectators to a real circus catch that pulled the Harrison aggregation out of the fire. He also showed baseball brains when he pulled a double play lone-handed in the fifth, catching Calladine's short fly and running to second base to catch Playford on the way to third, who had judged the drive for a hit.

Crary, the C.G.E. third baseman, covered miles of territory. Whatley caught for the Electrics in the absence of Reggie Dyer, and the youngster of Kiwanis hardball club turned in an errorless game, nipping off the foul tips that came his way. Dundas went the whole eight innings for Harrisons, and with a lot of control and a good team behind him, did well as a pitcher.

From the number of spectators on the sideline and the number that adorned the base of the new war memorial which they used as a grand stand, it might appear as if the closing games of the softball league are going to stir up a real enthusiastic crowd of rooters. Many made themselves heard last night, and it had all the earmarks of a real ball game with a lot of noise.

Failing to get away promptly at six o'clock, the teams had to forfeit an inning as penalty for their tardiness as in the closing minutes of the seventh, when darkness began to make it hard to see the ball, but Lou Lebarr, the umpire-in-chief, saved it from being a burlesque when he called it at the end of the eighth.

It was a win for the Harrisons that meant a whole lot to their standing, and it was just a tough break that the C.G.E. did not pull through, but someone had to win, and it was the North-men who deserved it.

Line-ups:

Win by Scores 5-4 and 4-1 for Their Second Straight Twin Victories.

WINGS WIN 3-2

BUFFALO, N.Y., August 24.—(Canadian Press).—The Buffalo Bisons wheeled into third place when they tumbled the Newark Bears to defeat in both halves of a double bill by score of 5 to 4 and 4 to 1. It was the second straight twin bill wrested from the Bears by the Bisons and also marked the eighth straight triumph for the locals. At the same time the losing streak of the hapless Bears mounted to nine in a row. President John Conway Toole of the International League was among the spectators at the games.

ROCHESTER TAKES FINAL.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., August 24.—(Canadian Press).—Outhit by Reading 8 to 5, Rochester Red Wings took the final game of the series from the Keys here yesterday afternoon 3 to 2. The victory gives Rochester the series, three games to one. The Red Wings landed on Nick Harrison for four hits and three runs in the first inning, enough to win the game. Harrison held the local batters to one safe hit after this. Decatur pitched good ball in the pinches for Rochester.

FIGHTS AT MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Que., August 24.—(Canadian Press).—Amid riboutous scenes that saw fist fights between both spectators and players, Baltimore blanked Montreal, 10-0, in the final engagement between these two clubs this year. The Orioles have won 13 and the Royals 11 of the inter-club series.

Bob Shawkey and Eddie Murphy, of the Royals were thrown out of the park by Umpire Gaston for disputing decisions and Tom Gulley, of the Royals, and John Hollingsworth, of the Orioles, were also given the gate after a stirring fistfight. Hollingsworth hit Gulley for the second time in two days and the big Royal right-fielder, evidently thinking that the pitcher was trying to bean him, threw his bat at Hollingsworth. The moundsman advanced toward Gulley who did not take long in coming to close quarters and lusty blows were exchanged before players of both teams pulled them apart. No sooner had this fight been stopped than a merry battle developed in one of the box seats and police were called in to quell the disturbance.

MACKMEN GAIN ON THE YANKS

Defeat Cleveland 3-1 for Gain on American League Leaders.

SENATORS WIN 4-3

NEW YORK, August 24.—(Canadian Press).—Bob Grove, southpaw ace of the Athletics pitching staff, hurled the Mackmen to within 4½ games of the league leading New York Yankees yesterday by defeating Cleveland, 3 to 1 at Philadelphia.

Grove had his strikeout ball working in great style and blanked the Tribe until the ninth inning when Summa scored Lind with a single to left. In the second inning Grove fanned Morgan, Harvel and Autry on nine straight strikes without permitting even a foul. Continuing in the third stanza, Grove fanned Miller and had a record of 15 strikes, one of which was a foul ball, before he threw a ball wide of the plate to Langford. His next pitch fanned the Indian lead off man, giving Grove five strikeouts on seventeen pitched balls.

Washington made it two out of three from White Sox by taking a ten inning game 4 to 3. Reeve's single to center scored Goslin who had beat out an infield hit with the winning run.

Marberry held Chicago to five hits. Thomas relieved Blakeship in the eighth inning with a man on base and none out.

Detroit again defeated Boston by a one-run margin, 2 to 1, its fourth straight victory in three days by that margin. The visitors scored their runs in the first inning when McManns singled, Gehringer tripled and Hargrave singled. Tavener continued his brilliant play at shortstop. It was Owen Carroll's 14th victory of the season.

CHESS TOURNEY.

BAD EISSENGEN, Germany, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press). — The tenth round of the International Chess Masters tournament was completed here yesterday, when the two adjourned games were played off.

The summaries:

Mieses, Germany, drew with Marshall, United States, in a Saragossa opening after 66 moves.

Tarrasch, Germany, lost to Retie, Czecho Slovakia, in a Caro-Kann defence after 96 moves.

As the world famous Joe Wright stands out as the great rowing ace of Eastern Canada, so does Billy Kennedy takes the same position in the minds of the Westerners. He is a member of the James Bay Athletic Association of Victoria.

Billy Kennedy has had a long, brilliant athletic career setting up a record that even some of the best on the continent could take pot shots at. He has been an active athlete since 1909, in 1910 winning the junior single championship of Victoria. The same year he won the senior single title of the Pacific Coast. He successfully defended this title in 1911 and from 1913 to 1919 he was unbeatable in this class. During 1911, 1913 and 1914 at Seattle, aVncouver and Portland respectively, he won the international title for the senior singles and in 1920 he and his rowing mate rowed off with the senior doubles.

Last year he did the iron man act and got away with it. He successfully coxed the Victoria Big Junior Four and not only won the event, but established a new Canadian record for the distance. And so the once-faded Bill Kennedy has again crashed into the sporting limelight.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Peterborough baseball fans should not miss the opportunity of witnessing the Raybestos and Cobourg tangle in the second game of the O.B.A.A. play-off series here to-morrow afternoon in what promises to be one red hot battle. The Lakeshore crew are out for blood and mean to field a strong line-up against the locals.

• • • • • • •

Scoring heavily in the four previous contests on Wednesday and Tuesday, the Royal Canadian Yacht Club although they lost the final race against United States won out in the international series by earning 28 points against 22 for the American craft.

• • • • • • •

Oshawa split even with their junior hardball clubs in the O.B.A.A. play-offs. St. Andrews trimmed Toronto 5-4 in the junior in what proved to be a real battle that lasted for eleven innings. South Oshawa were not so good against the Elizabeth juveniles, losing by a 10-2 count.

• • • •

The first game of the central league play-offs must have gone hard against some of the Motor city fans judging by what the Daily Times has to say:—"The Central League slaughter Wednesday was cause for much sorrow. Thanks to passing tourists several Oshawa fans arrived home in style instead of hoofing it over the asphalt following misplaced bets."

Playing errorless ball aided by a fifth inning rally that netted them five runs the Norsemen had no difficulty in holding down the Electrics while the C.G.E. only scored in one frame, being held scoreless in all but the third.

DELORO BEAT PETES FOUR GOALS TO THREE

Petes Held a Two Goal Lead Until Near Half Time, Then Visitors Equalized.

GOOD CROWD PRESENT.

Deloro Added Two More Goals in Second Moiety, While Local Boys Got One.

A good crowd of spectators turned out last evening to witness the Deloro versus Peterborough soccer benefit game at King Edward Park. It was a very good tussle in which the visitors gained the decision by the score of 4 goals to 2, and they will make interesting contestants in the cup ties that are to be played in the near future. The committee in charge of this game wish to thank the fans for the generous response to their appeal on behalf of the injured player; also the Deloro team.

First Half

The spin of the coin did not favor any team, but the local boys took them in earnest by attacking their citadel in the opening stages by scoring from close range. It took the Deloro boys a little while to get acquainted with the field, and they replied with a continuous bombardment that found a stubborn defence in Hotston and Foster. After trying to get inside the defence by dribbling, the Deloro boys started to swing the ball from wing to wing which kept the Petes halves on the run.

Outside Left Always Dangerous

The most dangerous player on the field was the visitors' outside left, who was well matched with a nippy partner. Time and again they would play combination to go into goal, but miss by inches. At this point, the Deloro forwards were the masters of the game. Keeping up the pressure they were taken unawares when Buchan beat three men in succession to place Lovat in possession of the ball.

T. Wilson Increased the Lead

He carried the sphere right into goal, then shot the ball back to T. Wilson, who sent a low grounder past the custodian. The local eleven fell away considerably and during their relaxation the Deloro forwards worked havoc around their goal by squaring up the count before half time. Brown, at outside left, carried the attack right on the full backs, then had them guessing when he sent the ball across the goal mouth where Cousins sent a soft tap towards goal. Peterborough's custodian came out to kick the ball but misjudged the approaching object, to allow it to go into the net. Encouraged by their success, the deloro team came back again to get another counter when Cousins upset the two players that were endeavoring to clear their goal, to their amazement witnessed the ball go between the uprights for the equalising goal just before half time.

Deloro, 2; Peterborough, 2.

Half Time

On resuming, the visitors made tracks for the local goal and had no success through bunching together when open tactics would have been more profitable in near the goal, although the effort of the right wing deserved more regard than two flag kicks, that did not gain anything. Both goals went under minor bombardments that failed to make the tactics interesting.

Deloro Added Two More Goals

On mid-field play the halves kept the ball running from defence to defence until Deloro's left wing got hold of the ball then to make the issue very lively by evading the defence with the ball at his toe. Twice he intercepted towards goal, but this did not prevent him from finishing with a lightning drive that beat Curtis all the way.

Not satisfied with this one goal lead, they came back again in the next few minutes to make their total four goals to three. Darkness set in at this point of the game, and it was difficult to see the ball.

Final—Deloro, 4; Peterborough, 2.

Goal scorers—Deloro: E. Brown, 2; Cousins, and Hipson. Peterborough: T. Wilson, 2, and T. Craig.

Deloro—Kelly, goal; Savage and Murray, full backs; Burrage, Hart and Sanderson, halves; A. Brown, Hipson, Cousins, Brooks, and E. Brown, forwards.

Referee—Alex. McKinley.

TUNNEY GIVEN GREAT OVATION

Thousands Greet Retired Heavyweight Champion on Arrival at Dublin.

RECEIVED BY COSGRAVE

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, August 24.—(Canadian Press).—Gene Tunney came to the land of his ancestors yesterday and thousands of admirers greeted him with wild Irish cheers. So great was the press of the crowd at Kingstown, where he landed, that members of the reception committee had the greatest difficulty in getting him to the car which was to carry him to Dublin.

All along the route to the Free State capital, countrymen were lined to greet the retired heavyweight champion of the world with shouts and broad smiles. At Dublin immediately proceeded to Government House where he was received by President Cosgrave. Later he held a reception at his hotel and signed autographs for all who asked them.

Questioned regarding the report that he intended to be married in Paris, Tunney told the Associated Press:

"The statement attributed to me announcing my marriage in Paris is inaccurate and groundless as I have made no mention of the subject to anyone at any time."

EIGHT PITCHERS USED IN GAME

Leafs Use Five, But Fail To Win From Jersey City.

11 INNINGS GAME.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—Eight pitchers passed in review as the Leafs and Jersey City battled for nearly three hours in the final game of the series before a few hundred fans at the Stadium yesterday, and the Cats won out, 9 to 8 in eleven innings. A long double over Ralph Shinners' head sent Selkirk in from second base with the winning run. Manager O'Hara used five pitchers and Pilot Gilhooley three.

The break was sudden and unexpected.

Don Hankins and Wild Bill Henderson, the finishing moundsman, had put on a stirring twirling argument for five innings with the Toronto right hander's change of pace keeping the Cats well subdued and it appeared only a question of keeping them that way until his mates could fathom the shoots of Henderson.

But Selkirk, for his third hit of the game, slipped a single into right field to start the eleventh and Joe Manger promptly and neatly moved him along on a bunt to Alexander.

Head Spoils Strategy

Hankins refused to take a chance on Jimmy Walsh, the veteran already having whipped over four runs, and he was intentionally passed. Then Lee Head, hustling Jersey catcher, knocked that strategy some distance when he larruped the ball to deep centre for a double, Selkirk scoring and Walsh pulling up at third.

That whack did not make Hankins turn a hair and he made short work of Smith and Calleran, the next two batsmen, while the Leafs had a fine chance to win out in their half of the same chukker, having the tying run on third and winning one on first but with two down Lena Styles gave Manger an easy chance for the final out.

CARDS LEAD IN NATIONAL

Giants Are Defeated by Pirates to Give Birds Gain.

SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

NEW YORK, August 24.—(Canadian Press).—The prospect of seeing Giant blood strewn about the premises drew 30,000 fans to Forbes Field, the largest crowd of the local season. The Giants cast gloom over the vast assemblage when they peppered Hill for fiver uns in the eighth inning of th opener to win Larry Benton twenty-first victory of the season. A home run by Frank O'Doul with one on and a triple by Terry with two on encompassed the fall of Prof. Hill.

Carl Hubbell, Jim Faulkner, Chester Nicholls and Vic Aldridge were combed for fourteen hits in the nightcap, included among which were home runs by George Grantham and Lloyd Waner. Fred Fussell was steady for the Pirates. Adams accepted 13 chances in the two games, making a new season's record for an infielder. He has handled 188 chances without error.

The Reds remained a factor in the pennant race by sweeping both ends of a double header against the Brooklyn Robins 2 to 0 and 6 to 1. The double success of the Hendricks arms carried the Reds third place above the idle Cubs and only three and one half games behind the Cardinals.

Ray Kolp held the Robins to three hits in the opener while the Reds were deftly bunching their seven off Bill Doak in such a manner that two runs resulted.

Kenneth Ash, a recruit from the Cincinnati farm at Columbus, amazed his admirers in the second clash, in which gave Brooklyn just six hits while hit mates were clubbing Ray Koss and Rube Ehrhardt. George Kelley led the Cincinnati attack with a home run with two on in the third.

WARNING ISSUED TO BAR MEMBERS

Strict Action to be Taken Against Any Breach of Regulations.

LONDON, August 24.—(Canadian Press).—The Bar council has issued a warning to its members that disciplinary action may be taken against any barrister who is proved to have committed a breach of the regulations, which prohibit him from giving legal advice in newspaper articles. The offending member will be reported to the Bench of his Inn, the result being that he may be suspended or disbarred from practising.

The general Council resolved that it is contrary to professional etiquette for a barrister to answer legal questions in newspapers or periodicals, whether for a salary or ordinary literary remuneration, whether his name is directly or indirectly disclosed or liable to be disclosed, and whether the questions answered have reference to concrete cases which have actually arisen or are likely to arise for decision.

GEORGE YOUNG IN ST. KITT'S SWIM

Catalina Champion Will Have Stiff Opposition From Other Entries.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., August 24.—George Young, victor of the Catalina Channel swim, and favorite in the C.N.E. Marathon, will be seen in action at Lakeside Park, Port Dalhousie, Saturday, competing against fifty of the most prominent entrants in the C.N.E. Marathon in a two mile swimming race which is being held under the auspices of the Canadian National Electric Railways, who are offering a purse of one hundred dollars to the winner.

Last week a similar race was held at Port Dalhousie for women swimmers and was won by Ethel Hertle, who has entered her name in the men's race to be held on Saturday.

The entry list, which includes over fifty names, comprises some of the most prominent swimmers in the world, and there should be stiff competition among them.

George Young won a twenty-mile swim at Montreal last week, and expects to take the two-mile honors at Port Dalhousie this Saturday. But he will be up against some real swimmers in the local race, and will certainly earn the prize money if he succeeds in beating his opponents.

The race will be held in the lake, along the pier, from which spectators may view the race with the utmost ease. The race starts at 5.15 daylight time.

THEATRES

FOX SURROUNDS BLANCHE SWEET WITH NOTABLE SUPPORTING CAST IN NEW PICTURE "SINGED."

Fox films has surrounded Blanche Sweet with a notable cast for her starring vehicle, "Singed," directed by John Griffith Wray, based on the story of the same name by Adela Rogers St. Johns, opening to-day at the Regent Theatre.

Warner Baxter, one of the most talented and popular leading men in pictures, plays opposite her. And in the cast, playing important roles are such dependable troupers as Alfred Allen, Edgar Norton, Claude King, Clarke Comstock, Ida Darling, Mary McAllister, Donald Keith, James Wong, Chief Yowlachi, Mary Merch, Fred Walton, Brinsley Shaw, Edwards Davis, Howard Truesdale, George Pearce and W. H. Ryno.

"Singed" is the story of a woman who could not undo her past, etched against a picturesque and colorful background that carries the spectator from an Oklahoma oil-boom town to a wildcat oil well in California and on to San Francisco, where the greater part of the action takes place in luxurious surroundings.

Miss Sweet plays the part of a dance hall girl who becomes wealthy through an oil gusher and Warner Baxter the part of "Her man," erstwhile derrick man, for whom she "goes straight." Their riches turn the man's head and he attempts to discard the girl in order to marry a San Francisco society debutante. It is this situation that brings about one of the most tragic and powerful climaxes that has been written into a script in many seasons, according to advance reviews from Hollywood and New York.

Well-Known Cleric To Enter Politics

LONDON, August 25.—(Canadian Press).—Dr. F. W. Norwood, Minister of the Famous City Temple, who recently refused an attractive offer of a pulpit in Montreal, is expected to fight a constituency in North London at the General Election in the Liberal interest. At the age of 11 Dr. Norwood was working in a carpenter's shop in Melbourne. He was brought up a Wesleyan, but was trained as a Presbyterian minister, and made his name at the City Temple when he went there as a substitute for another, notable preacher. Dr. Norwood recently toured the country on behalf of the League of Nations Union, speaking on disarmament. This campaign was most successful in rousing interest in practical peace politics. Dr. Norwood will fight on the new Liberal program, and he will doubtless give much prominence in his speeches to the advocacy of peace.

Rev. H. Dunnico, (Labor, Consett) is the only English Nonconformist minister who sits in the House of Commons at present. One or two Scottish ministers are also Labor members. At one time several Free Church divines sat as Liberal members of Parliament. The most notable instance one can think of is the late Silvester Horne, who was both an M.P. and the minister of Whitefield's Tabernacle.

H.R.H. Prince George, youngest son of King George V., who passed hurriedly across Canada en route to Vancouver to join the warship Durban to which he will be attached.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE SEEK ADVENTURE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

The life without adventure is like a honeymoon without a bride. Life itself is a great adventure. The thrill of the unknown, the untried, the positively dangerous appeals to us because in every great risk the blood flows faster, we are more thoroughly alive.

In adventure we taste the essence of life.

It is no idle gesture that the world has gone mad over the heroes of the air. The greetings and honors heaped upon the successful pioneers who cross an ocean or conquer the frozen north spring spontaneoulsy from the heart of every man, woman and child of all nationalities. The fliers are called ambassadors of the air because they do more to unite the nations of the world in mutual friendship and good will than the official ambassadors. And this is true because the exploit they go through strikes a responsive chord in the human breast which points out more clearly than words and diplomacy the inherent sameness of humanity and the fact that humanity is of one piece after all.

It used to be said that all the world loves a lover presumably because love is universal in its appeal. Now we say that all the world loves a successful airman and precisely for the same reason. There is a universal appeal in the spirit of adventure.

No doubt war, with all its barbarity and utter folly, appeals to the adventuring spirit in us. The greater the risk involved the greater the thrill. That is why stolen sweets are so much sweeter. One has to risk something.

The spirit of adventure is illustrated in our plays and games. The popularity of any sport seems to be in the ratio of the risk and danger involved. The inducement of boxing contests is the imminent possibility of a knockout. And how disappointed the fans are when there is not even a knockdown! (Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

DAIRYING AN IMPORTANT INDUSTRY

Dairying is one of the oldest and one of the most important of the industries of Canada. It owes its modern development to the introduction of the factory system for the making of cheese and butter, to the invention of the centrifugal cream separator, and to the facilities afforded by improved methods of cold storage.

With a large spoon scoop out tomato and egg together and place on Melba toast. Serve immediately with a generous amount of butter and a sprinkling of chopped parsley over each egg.

Questions and Answers

Question—Mrs. W. L. asks: "Will you explain what is meant by 'epithelial' cells found in an analysis of a sample of urine? There was found no sugar or albumen, but these cells were present. Should a person have a further examination made to avoid further trouble later on?"

Answer—Epithelial cells appearing in the urine might show a mild form of cystitis, providing there are no other important findings in the urinalysis. These cells are microscopic, and under the micrscope look similar to those thrown off by the scalp and called dandruff. Their present in the urine does not indicate any serious trouble.

Question — J. K. writes: "I would like to know how much orange juice a baby nine months old should take. What time of the day should I give it—before or after meals?"

Answer.—A baby nine months old should not be eating "meals," but should be taking only orange juice and milk. A good schedule is to make the feedings four hours apart, using about eight ounces of milk each time, and preceding the milk feedings by one or two teaspoonfuls of straight orange juice which has not been diluted. If the baby is inclined to be constipated, it is all right to give him orange juice between feedings, using one or two teaspoonfuls at a time and increasing the amount as it sees necessary. If you care to write to me in care of this paper inclosing a large, stamped, self-addressed, envelope, I will be glad to send you without charge my article on "Weaning the Baby."

Question—Mrs. A. L. A. asks: "What would cause a ranula, and is it something permanent or will it go away eventually? If so, is an operation advisable, or would it be dangerous?"

Answer—A ranula is a cystic tumor beneath the tongue due to the obstruction and dilation of the sulingual or submavillary gland or of a mucous gland. It may go away by itself, but an operation is sometimes advisable.

Lord Burghley, who won the 400 metres hurdles for Great Britain at the Olympic Games at Amsterdam is one of England's most notable athletes. When at Cambridge he held the American intercollegiate hurdle championship. When he ran one of the greatest races of his career, he was watched from the stands by his parents, the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter, and his fiancee, Lady Mary Montagu-Douglas-Scott, who is the fourth daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch.

DELORO TROOP.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Aug. 24.—The weekly troop meeting was called at an earlier hour last Tuesday to permit some work being done on the Trek cart. After an hour's hard work, drilling, sandpapering, etc., the cart began to take shape. The fittings will be put on on Saturday, and it is hoped to have it ready to paint next week.

A snappy half-hour's practice at first aid to the injured and some good rousing songs filled in a very good meeting.

The attendance has been one hundred per cent. for the last two weeks' excepting scouts on vacation, and the summer activities are proving enough attraction to retain everybody's interest. The week-end camp will most like ly be about September 8 or September 15.

SMITH SUPPORTERS MAKE MOST NOISE

Seem More Enthusiastic Than Hoover Men Visiting Canada.

Peterborough is not the only town or city in Canada in which the boosters of Al Smith are either more numerous or more vicificerous than those of his rival. In Montreal the Democrat supporters are much more flamboyant than those of Herbert Hoover.

Where two or more American tourists are gathered together these days it seems that about the first thing on the menu is doing honor to the Governor of New York and wishing success to his candidature for higher office. Impromptu demonstrations for Smith are now almost daily occurences in the gayer cafes, while even the more staid eating places witness a pro-Smith outburst. That Hoover stalwarts have seeped over the border is indubitable; but they seem to be greater believers in silent salesmanship.

Those whose business leads them into daily contact with American visitors are remarking on the noise there is for Smith and the stillness in the Hoover camp. Some think this may be due to the preponderance of New York cars among the tourists; others point out that an American visitor has been known to drink something stronger than ginger ale while in Montreal, and conjecture is that the atmosphere is more conducive to sympathy for the candidate known personally to be on the anti-Volstead list.

A tour of the eating and drinking spots so dear to the hearts of Americans certainly proves that the enthusiasm and the pep are on the Smith side.

Keen business men who run cafes are not slow in seeing the shortest cut to the sympathies of many of their patrons. "The Sidewalks of New York," the Al Smith ditty, is regularly in the line-up for the lunch and dinner music at more than a few Montreal hostelries. It is going over big and generally starts something.

To indicate how the Smith demonstrations burst into bloom, a peep into one popular restaurant was illuminating. The musical number dedicated to Al was putting most of the diners, though not all of them, into the best of humors. The music ended. As it happened one of the most enthusiastic Smith workers of New York was in the crowd. "Three cheers for Al Smith" was his proposition. The idea swept through the room, and in a twinkling there was a tumult of applause for New York's favorite.

Cars outside the place showed that seventeen States were represented at the tables. One was from Indiana and the owner of it was most decidedly not for Al.

"Come to Al," shouted one woman who had noticed that the gentleman from Indiana was not taking any part in this particular rally.

"Come to Al? You mean go," he grunted, and retired behind his sauerkraut.

General Upward Move On Listless Market

TORONTO, August 24 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel and Massey Harris were the only two bright spots in a morning of listless trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange. A large turnover of shares of the Nickel stock advanced its price to 102 7-8, while Massey Harris reflected the activity in Nickel and was sold up half a point to 43¾. Canadian Dredge sold as high as 60 this morning, a net increase of ten points. Bell Telephone was up one to 161, Brompton was unchanged at 38¼, F. N. Burt gained a half, closing at noon 65½; Canadian Canners was up ⅝ to 17⅞, and the Preferred in this stock also climbed for a quarter point share. Cockshutt Plow sold ¼ higher, closing at 28¼.

Wheat Prices Drop As Cold Spell Ends

CHICAGO, August 24 (Canadian Press).—Wheat values underwent an early set-back to-day, chiefly as a result of the failure of predicted frosts to appear in Canada. Winnipeg reports indicated that the weather in the Canadian wheat belt had turned warmer, with no frost anywhere. Opening unchanged to 1 1-8 cent off, Chicago wheat later showed a decided drop all around. Corn, oats, and provisions tended upwards, with corn starting at 3-8 cent decline to 5-8 cent gain, and subsequently scoring general advances.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 111 3-8; December, 116¾. Corn, September, 89 5-8; December, 73¼. Oats, September 37 1-8; December, 40.

Leaders Register Gains, Pend Oreille Up Fifty

TORONTO, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Lake Shore with a gain of 1.25 a share, closing at 23.00; Pend Oreille with an advance of 50 cents a share to close at 11.75, and Noranda were the points of interest on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning. Noranda was off 1.00, however, to 55.00, selling as low this morning as 54.75. Small gains in price were made by Amulet with an increase of five cents to 3.97, Barry Hollinger was up half to close of 48, Bidgood advanced 1½ to 67½. Hollinger remained unchanged at 9.00. Kirkland Lake dropped off one cent a share. Teck Hughes was unchanged at 9.20. Wright Hargreaves was up one cent a share to 3.38. Mandy Mines was off ten cents a share, closing at 2.75. Sherritt Gordon closed unchanged at 6.35. Kootenay Florence gained a half in the morning trading closing at 22, and Sudbury Basin advanced to noon close of 18 cents a share. Silver was quoted at 58⅝.

Enthusiastic Outbreak Of Buying in New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— The stock market, which has been under the restraining influence of high money rates for several weeks, broke out in a wild outburst of bullish enthusiasm to-day on buying influenced by unexpected reductions of nearly $23,000,000 in brokers' bonds. Blocks of 5,000 to 10,000 shares changed hands at frequent intervals, with early gains in popular issues running from $2 to $14 a share.

SHERRITT—GORDON

TORONTO, Aug. 24—Engineers who have recently visited Sherritt-Gordon are reported to be unanimous in their opinion that this property when developed will prove to be larger than Flin Flon. Diamond drilling is said to be revealing some of the best ore yet encountered, and it is now believed the average assay may be $14, allowing for concentrating losses. The average width of the ore opened up to date is approximately 18 feet, although one trench is said to have shown a good grade of ore across 76 feet.

It is has now been established that the westerly extension of the ore zone remains in the recently-acquired Sherritt claims. This is an important feature, as for a time it was thought the extension would go to adjoining properties. This company is reported to have power rights for Bloodstone Falls on the Churchill River about 40 miles from the property, where ample power for intended production requirements is available.

PREMIER

From a well informed source a report comes from Vancouver this morning that this company have located by diamond drill, a new high grade ore body. Our informant states that mine officials estimate this new ore body will contain at least $1,000,000 of ore, and should lead to further discoveries of high grade.

MOHAWK

Work at this property, situated on Four Mile Mountain, is being aggressively pushed by the Federal Mining and Smelting Company. The lower tunnel is reported to be in 300 feet and a new crosscut is being run to the hanging wall to pick up the contact of quartzite and diorite, in the hope of encountering the parallel lead that is known to exist on the surface. In the work that has been done in the main tunnel, a number of ore shoots from six inches to two feet wide have been ecountered.

Interesting results may be expected from this property within the course of a few months.

WAINWELL

According to P. D. Bowlen, vice president and managing director of Wainwell Oil, rapid drilling is under way at this company's No. 2 well. He says in part, "We made a day's record in the field one day when 112 feet was the extent of drilling for 24 hours. The drillers are making fine progress and we should soon be in the production sands." The well is reported to be down more than 675 feet.

MARKET REVIEW

Included in the board room gossip one hears to-day, "Is the market headed for another bull movement similar to that of one year ago?" In any event, practically all the stocks were active to-day, many of them reflecting the good news which has emanated from the different properties during the past month or so. This was particularly true of the smaller issues. Amulet continued to be firm and closed practically unchanged from yesterday at $3.82 to $4.00. Area at 30 yesterday was up five points. Arno was particularly active and sold from the opening at 24—31, closing at the top for a gain of 6¼ points.

Following very favorable news of the past couple of days, Malartic was the recipient of very heavy trading and sold from the opening at $1.50 to $1.75. Despite much profit-taking this issue remained firm throughout the session, and gained four points at $1.53 to $1.89.

Noranda was also subject to heavy profit taking and was unable to hold its advance of yesterday to 56, and closed at 54.40 to 54.50 for a loss of 1.50.

The strength in Pioneering Mining Corporation may be attributed to a report received from the Soo to-day, that the ore zone cut last fall by diamond drilling had now been encountered by cross-cutting at the 500-foot level. While no assay reports are available as yet, it is understood the ore has all the appearance of being very good grade.

MALARTIC

The Northern Miner has a very comprehensive review of this property in that paper this morning, which certainly puts a different aspect on this Cadillac-Malartic-Fourniere district property. Their report follows:

"Ten feet of splendid ore with the face still in it, is the word from Malartic Mines. This is the high grade vein crosscut to at the 375. It came in sooner than expected.

"First five feet of width ran $15. The next five feet had not been assayed at press time, but Manager Norris said it was 'looking grand.' The full width of the vein has not been had.

"After passing through a 71 foot width of $7.39 ore, the crosscut drove into 36 feet of material running $2.15. Then the high grade vein, which undoubtedly is the downward extension of the vein found in upper levels, was encountered. That the ground, for great width, is impregnated with gold at Malartic is seen by its assays.

"Results being obtained appear to justify the statement that few gold prospect in Canada have responded so splendidly to development work. Not only is the average grade of ore on the 130-foot level considerably better than previously reported, but the north vein on the 375-foot level has widened and increased in value to a spectacular degree. This vein averaged around 32 feet in width on the top level and slightly more than this on the 250.

"Three veins appear on the surface. The north vein strikes east and west, standing almost vertical. Dipping toward it, at an angle of 70 degrees, is the discovery vein, which is narrow and high grade. The south vein is thought to be of better grade than the north; it has not been cut on the 375-foot level, but work on the 130-foot level and diamond drilling o nthe 250 foot horizon makes it appear that this vein may be of more importance than the north.

"The north vein and the discovery vein have been opened up by 550 feet of drifting and four crosscuts on the 130-foot level. The average width of the north vein on this level is 32 feet, and the grade between $4 and $5. The south vein has been cut by two crosscuts and a number of diamond drill holes, and is known to extend for 500 feet on the 130 foot level. It has been cut with drills on the 250 horizon. The discovery vein is now being worked through to surface by a raise. As previously reported in the Northern Miner, this narrow vein on the 130 foot level assayed around $12.78 for 4.7 feet. About 180 feet of this high grade has been opened up. Where the small vein joins the north vein there is 30 feet of ore assaying $9.25 and nine feet assaying $20.10. This high grade brings the average of the first level up to around $6.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—Two malicious rumors regarding two of the most popular mining stocks on the board were spiked today. One of these rumors was to the effect that Bidgood was considering reorganization. As reported in an earlier bulletin this was denied most emphatically by officials. The other rumor was to the effect that Barry Hollinger was about to float an issue of bonds to provide funds for further development. President Crowe was right on deck to stop this report. He stated the company has ample funds to carry on development in addition to some 400,000 shares of stock unissued.

A report from the north this morning states that the Coniagus is negotiating for control of the Trout Creek property, the scene of the recent sensational gold discovery. Samples of gold from the showing have been most spectacular and the formation and geology is said to be similar to the producing section of the Kirkland Lake camp.

A report, purpoting to be from a well-informed source, came from Vancouver this morning stating that the Premier Gold have located by diamond drilling, a new high grade ore body. Our informant states that the mine officials estimate this new ore body will contain at least $1,000,000 of ore and lead to further discoveries of high grade.

Work at the Mohawk property on Flour Mile Mountain, B.C. is being carried on by the Federal Mining and Smelting Company. The lower tunnel is reported to be in some 300 feet and a new crosscut is being run to the handing wall to pick up the contact of quartzite and diorite, in the hope of encountering the parallel lead that is showing on the surface. In the work that has been done on the main tunnel, a number of ore shoots from six inches to two feet wide are reported to have been encountered.

It is reported that Hollinger's average for July was 4,600 tons of $5.40 ore daily. No official statement has yet been made. If this report is correct July was ahead of June on grade and about the same on ton-

COBOURG PLAYS HERE TO-MORROW

Raybestos Boys Expect To Win—Should Be Good Game.

Raybestos, with one game in the bag hope, to make it two straight against Cobourg here to-morrow afternoon, and avoid a third game on neutral grounds. The fans should crowd the grandstand at the Exhibition Park.

Given any kind of a break, Cobourg will make Raybestos hustle all the way to win. The Lakeshoremen, as was indicated at Cobourg, are a bunch of sluggers and good fielders.

The game will start at three o'clock with Umpires Kay and Colling in charge.

The Port Hope Times, which sent a representative to the game on Wednesday, devotes considerable space to the Raybestos players. The Times says in part. The visitors are a heavy hitting lot. The sparkling kind of ball they played defensively was of great assistance to their pitchers."

TWO NEAR DEATH.

Dr. Clark Saves Brother and Young Girl From Drowning.

Two young people, a brother of Dr. Clark and a girl from the cottage of Dr. Waite, had a narrow escape from drowning at Chemong on Wednesday afternoon. The young lady was out swimming in the lake when she either took cramps or get beyond her depth. The Examiner is informed, and she cried for help. Dr. Clarke's brother, who is not in robust health, was near at hand and rushed into the water to save the girl. He failed in his attempt and called for help. Dr. Clark, although unable to swim, used an automobile tube as a float and went to the rescue of the two in the water. Both were landed safely.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARTHUR GELINEAU

The funeral of the late Mrs. Arthur Gelineau will take place from the family residence, 47 Park street south, at 8.45 tomorrow morning, August 25, to Sacred Heart Church and St. Peter's Cemetery, for interment.

IN POLICE COURT

The charge laid under the Inland Revenue Act against Robert Davidson of the township of Belmont was dismissed by the court this morning. W. F. Huycke appeared for the prosecution and J. A. O'Brien for the defendant.

Two of the three boys who appeared in police court charged with breaking the seal of a C.P.R. car were found guilty and the case against the other lad was dismissed. One boy was fined $10 and costs and the other $5.00 and costs. Alex Elliott appeared for the accused.

THE MARKETS

nage. Considerable low grade material is being drawn from the "summer stopes."

A. McDonald, president of the English Brook Gold Mining Co., is athority for the statement that the company cut their south vein on the 250-foot level at about 110 feet from the shaft. The vein has since been crosscut through and shows a width of 21 feet, of which between 7 and 8 feet is exceptionally well mineralized. Drifting on two faces of the vein in now in progress. To the east surface work is said to be yielding satisfactory results. Numerous free gold showings have been discovered in the Wanna claims. Arrangements are now being made for an extensive diamond rilling campaign on the property.

A meeting of directors of the North Waite Mining Company, Ltd., will be held shortly to consider matters of interest to the company and to decide upon plans for mining and financing. The company holds ground immediately north of Waite-Ackerman-Montgomery Mines approximating 880 acres. Capital is set at 2,000,000 shares of $1 each of which it is reported, 1,000,000 are issued. The company has a strong board of directors headed by James Parker.

Report Ankerite in Deal With Abana, Abonde Mines

Timmins.—Members of the staff of Ankerite Mines have recently completed an extensive examination and sampling of Abana and Abonde copper-zinc properties and it is reported that important negotiations between the several companies are now in progress, if not concluded. The Ankerite property has been meeting with considerable success in new ore development during the last few months. Ankerite Mines Ltd. is the only owning and operating company formed in Canada by well-known British interests and it appears more than a rumor that it will shortly become the pivot of much larger operations.

Consulting Engineer for Barry-Hollinger

W. E. Simpson, mining engineer, Swastika, Ontario, has been offered and has accepted the position of consulting engineer to the Barry-Hollinger Gold Mines and Patterson coppermines at Boston Creek and will act in collaboration with Mr. Richard Treloar, manager of both properties.

Mr. Simpson is an associate of the Royal School of Mines, a member of the Institution of Mining and Metallurgy of London, England, and a member of the Canadian Mining Institute and knows the Boston Creek district thoroughly, having been connected with the Miller Independence Mines a number of years ago.

Besides having handled some of the biggest gold mines of Western Australia, he was for two years, general manager of the Einasleigh Copper Mines in the Chilogoe district of Northern Queensland, and, there gained an experience which should prove useful in the development of the Patterson properties, where some high grade copper ore is at the present time being uncovered.

Chibougamau Has Healthy Promise

Chibougamau Prospectors Limited recently organized by a Quebec financial group, owns 12 groups of claims, with an aggregate acreage of 6,120 acres located in the heart of the Lake Dore-Chibougamau region.

Following an examination of the company's properties in July by Carl M. Mohr, a report was submitted, the summary and conclusions of which read as follows:

Undoubtedly, the Merrill Island deposits of your Company present the greatest opportunity of quickly developing an ore body of importance and the average tenor of the values which it is reasonable to expect that will be obtained, will be such as to stamp it as one of the most important within the Lake Dore Chibougamau district.

Group 7, adjoining the Creek Claim Block "B" of the Blake Development Company, also gives promise of importance in results from diamond drilling, at a point where the south-eastern extension of the Creek Claim adjoins Group 7.

Development work now being carried on, on Cedar Bay, Group 2, will undoubtedly prove that this section of the district contains some interesting deposits. These properties lie within, or almost at, the contact of the greenstones and anorthosite, and an interesting situation may develop on this group at any time.

In general, all the properties of your company are exceedingly well located, and warrant thorough and careful prospecting for further ore bodies than those already disclosed.

The area of your mining properties is extensive; they are geologically well located, and further development, intelligently carried on, should result in the opening up of extensive bodies of copper-gold ore. I would also suggest that your company do not lose sight of the possible occurrence of important silver-lead deposits, which may be found associated with Lake Mistassini Limestone and shale.

Record Day for Handling Grain

Montreal. — The biggest day for grain handling that the port of Montreal has experienced this season was registered Tuesday, when deliveries went well over 2,000,000 bushels for the 24 hours and receipts were recorded at nearly 1,500,000 bushels, a total handling of 3,500,000 million bushels for one day.

The shipments of grain yesterday, according to harbor officials represented nearly five complete shiploads, or a total of 5,500 tons for Europe. The receipts and reliveries to date jumped accordingly and there is now only slightly over half a million bushels difference between the receipts and the deliveries, while both are well ahead of the records to date over a similar period last year.

The stock and the orders in hand went down a little as consequence of the heavy day, but will be made up, it is stated, when the American crop, the first of which is due in the port next week, makes its appearance.

AMATEUR SAYS HE HEARD PLANE

ports from South Greenland yesterday that Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer were sighted Sunday morning over the village of Fiskenasset have stirred utmost hope among Greenland experts that the United States airmen will be found safe. They believe that the fliers landed 200 miles south of Stroem Fjord, which is near Mount Evans, the goal of the fliers on their 1,800-mile hop from Cochrane, Ontario. The nearest gasoline supply is at Scender, Stroem Fjord, and it would take several weeks to transport it, while the chances of a successful take-off, even if the fliers landed with their plane undamaged, are considered poor.

Skeptical In Newfoundland.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Aug. 24 (Special to The Examiner).—Despite the fact that all radio operators in Newfoundland have been listening persistently, no message has come from Bert Haskell and Cramer of the Greater Rockford, who left Cochrane, Ont., for Greenland last Saturday, on the second leg of their proposed flight from Rockford, Ills., to Sweden, and who were last heard from authentically at 3.30 a.m. Sunday from a point said to be 75 miles from Cape Chidley.

Officials here are dubious about the authenticity of a report that an amateur radio operator at Toledo, Ohio last night was in communication with the fliers, who, he said, sent a message that they are stranded on a small island 100 miles from Newfoundland. This is considered absurd here, but will be investigated, and should it be true, everything possible will be done to rescue them.

To Measure Tails To Identify Dogs

LONDON, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press). — All London laughed, grinned, smiled, or chuckled, according to their individual temperament to-day, when it became known that Home Secretary Joynson Hicks had issued an order to the dignified London Police to measure the tails of stray dogs. The measurements will be used to identify the dogs just as the fingerprints of humans are used.

FOURTEEN PERSONS KILLED IN WRECK

SAYS RIVER WATER NOT ALWAYS SAFE

Analysis Reveals Germs

Water From City To Paudash Point Not Good—Rest of Otonabee O.K.

RICE LAKE VARIES.

Bacilli Showing of Trent River Also Varies From Bad To Good.

Peterborough and district is blessed with unusual scenic beauties, and far from the least of these advantages is the Trent Waterways. Beautiful to look upon, yet dangerous in many ways, are these lakes and rivers for if you drink water from the Otonabee, or from the system beyond, without first having taken proper steps to rid it of colon bacilli, you take a long chance according to recent bacteriological reports on samples taken by Dr. N. H. Sutton, district Officer of Health.

Returning from a recent three weeks' trip down the system to Trenton, aboard his small "put-putt" boat, Dr. Sutton brought with him numerous samples taken from various parts of the waters traversed and upon their analyses by Dr. C. B. Waite, director of the local provincial branch laboratory, the M.O.H. has based his report. Another point in favor of the boat trip was that it made possible the reaching and inspection of water supplies to many summer homes or resorts which are practically inaccessible by motor car.

"Unsatisfactory"

From the place of the first test, immediately below lock 19, down past Rye's the City Disposal plant, T. A. S. Park to Wallace Point, the water is decidedly labelled "Unsatisfactory" for drinking purposes, first samples taken to prove "fair" for drinking being from near Bensfort bridge. At Campbelltown, where the tenth sample was taken, the water was classed by the analysis to be "doubtful" but off Paudash Point, the water is pronounced "good".

Following the report of the medical men, it is learned that the water is good to drink off Prickly Island, Rainy Point, at the mouth of the Indian River, off Hickory and Grasshopper islands, but off Margaret Island it is unsatisfactory. On the other hand it would be quite safe to take a drink off McCracken's landing as would also be the case opposite Trent Valley Lodge. Off Cameron Point the water is of doubtful quality. To describe the waters all the way to Trenton would become tedious to reader and writer but for the benefit of those residing further along the system, the report is copied as follows:

Curiosity Leads To Catching Car Thief

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—F. C. Lindops' curiosity at five forty a.m. yesterday caught what is suspected to be a car thief. He asked Roy McIntyre, driving an Essex car, what he was doing. The man was a little vague about the particulars so the official took the man to the station, where Desk Clerk Nelles failed to get details of the car, the trip and the man. Yesterday Sergeant Cara, in charge of the police court, asked for a delay when a charge of vagrancy was read by Magistrate Jones. A telegram received from Toronto later yesterday means that McIntyre will have to answer a charge of car stealing in that city.

WIDE VARIETY OF PRODUCTS

Pups, Flowers and Honey Vie With Dairy Supplies.

APPLES PLENTIFUL.

Small puppies and flowers, with a side attraction in an eloquent "medicine man" were among the items of interest at the farmers' market this morning. Tiny fox terriers that that were said to be eight weeks old, but didn't look it, and "English cattle" collies, seven weeks old, were offered for sale, the first brand at 50 cents and a dollar, the second at $3 apiece. White Angora and grey elgian rabbits were $1 each and the ordinary variety sold at half a dollar. A little lad with a tiny field hare, munching carrots peacefully in a wire bird cage, had a crowd of onlookers.

Clover honey was very attractive in its pale green gold, arranged in small glass jars at varying prices that ranged from 15 to 55 cents, with five pound pails selling at 65 cents and ten-pound container at $1.25. Clover honey sections were 25 cents each in the basket section and 35 cents each downstairs.

Eggs sold at 35 to 40 cents a dozen, the former price asked for pullet eggs and seconds. Butter was 42 and 43 cents a pound and ducks were 30 cents a pound. Chickens sold at 30 and 35 cents a pound for small specimens.

Duchess apples on the open market were 30 cents a peck and early harvest were 40 cents a peck.

Tomatoes were 25 cents for 4 quart baskets, 40 cents for six quarts and 60 cents for eleven quart baskets.

Big bantam corn was 25 cents a dozen with smaller corn at 15 cents. Gherkins sold at 20 cents a quart and small cucumbers ranged in price from 40 to 60 cents for large baskets. Telegraph cucumbers were five cents apiece.

Chokecherries were 10 and 15 cents in small quart and two quart containers. Potatoes were 25 cents a peck and $1.25 a bag. Green peppers were a nickel apiece or $1 for a large basket. Horseradish was 5 cents a bunch.

Green pears in large, good-looking fruit were 60 cents a basket and small crabapples were 50 cents.

Yorkshire pigs of good size were $15 a pair.

MISSING MAN AT WINNIPEG

"Frank Hutchinson" Roomed at Y.M.C.A. Aug. 16—Went To Alberta.

MOVED YESTERDAY.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Rev. Franklyn Hutchinson, rector of Doddinghurst, Essex, England, who has been missing since late in July is believed to have registered at the local Y.M.C.A. on August 16, giving his name as Frank Hutchinson and not wearing clerical garb.

Enquiry at Brooks, Alta., where he went from here, revealed that F. or E. Hutchinson registered at the hotel there on August 23, and left yesterday morning. His movements after that are unknown.

MURDER HEARING STARTS AGAINST BANDIT SUSPECT

Burowski Is Charged at Parry Sound With Shooting Farmer.

HEARING RESUMED.

Witnesses Recount Events Leading Up To Capture of Prisoner.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—At the resumed Burowski hearing yesterday afternoon H. J. Rolland recounted the events leading up to the capture. His evidence was largely a repetition of the Laird boys. He explained, however, that after overtaking and passing the stolen car which was empty at this time and after turning his own car around to return to the stolen car they met a car on the small cement bridge. In this was a man and two ladies. They asked the stranger to go back and assist them in recovering their car. The four men then proceeded back to the stolen car. When the shooting commenced the stranger ordered Rolland to get his car out of the way as it was blocking the road and he wanted to escape from the scene. He did so and while thus engaged he heard shooting from the bush. He did not know there had been a struggle till later, but thought the man had escaped in the bush and was shooting from there.

Money on Prisoner

Claude Jackson stated that a man had called at their home at four o'clock in the morning asking assistance in getting his car out of the ditch. He stated he was from the States and not knowing the road had got into difficulty. Claude and his father with a horse went down to the road and had made one unsuccessful effort to get the car out when Rolland and the Lairds came up and demanded the car. Ordering the prisoner out. Immediately after the shooting commenced and after the man was subdued. Claude went to get some rope to bind the prisoner and as he went he stumbled over the body of his dead father. After prisoner was secured with the rope, he told young Jackson to take the eighteen hundred dollars out of his pocket, saying it will help to pay expenses. Jackson told him to give it to the police. Claude also recalled hearing Laird say to the accused. "Now, you'll hang; you've shot Mr. Jackson," to which he replied that he wished he had shot himself or had been shot by his pal.

Was Well Armed

Provincial Constable Beatty testified to having found four full magozines on the prisoner, and one in the gun with three cartridges left in it, one shot being jammed in the breach. He identified the gun shown as a 45 calibre Colt automatic. He also found on prisoner twenty-one dollars in money besides the eighteen hundred, also a wrist watch, key ring with two door keys, two automobile keys and one skeleton key, also a cameo brooch with repair order attached and a diamond ring, also road map showing Muskoka, and the Parry Sound district. The brooch, ring and watch are in the possession of the post office department.

Inspector Gurnett testified to having found a new bright cartridge shell in the rear of the stolen car in the long wet grass. He described the marks on the car and attributed to them the effect of a high velocity steel jacketed bullet; he thought the bullet had been split by hitting the steel frame of the rear window. One part breaking the window and being found in the car. The other part wounding Jackson The bullet, in his opinion could not have been fired through the car.

Mail Clerk Testifies

Harry McDonald, mail clerk between Fort William and Toronto, said that at 12.05 a.m. on August 18th, at Romford Junction, two armed and masked men jumped into the mail car from the north side. The prisoner being one of them. It was very dark at this depot, which aided the men. The other man, who was taller, appeared to be the leader. They had a gun apiece, similar to the one shown. We were ordered to stick 'em up and face the wall. They wanted to know where the registered mail was. I was finally compelled to show them the registered bag. They were in the car about three hours, getting off at Parry Sound as the train slowed down. He knew the prisoner, as his mask had slipped off while in the mail car and because this man had passed in front of him several times They divided the spoils on the way down. Our assistants come on at Parry Sound. When they came in we told them of the hold-up and headquarters at Toronto while the train was held.

BALLOONS CARRY CERTIFICATES FOR MILES ON BRISK BREEZE

Three Reported From Neighborhood of Springville.

ONE FROM CITY.

Extra Prize Goes To Person Finding Balloon Which Travelled Farthest.

The Sky's the Limit! Shortly after 9.30 this morning, without a single fatality, and with only the first two of fourteen starters failing to make the ascent, Peterborough's first balloon meet began from a point in the rear of the Windsor Hotel. At 11.14 a.m. the first landing of a balloon was reported from Springville. At 11.20 the second descent took place in the garden of Mrs. Pearson, 112 Monaghan Road. Mrs. John McIntosh of North Monaghan and Janet Wilson of Kendry reported at noon. Bert Bailey, 209 Rubidge Street, found one out the Highway, near Springville.

Dan Loescher, 278 Burnham Street, found one at noon near Hendren's Fox Farm, on the Highway.

Surely, they were only paper balloons, with oiled paper wick burning merrily inside to provide the lifting hot air, but they carried envelopes in which were tickets entitling the finder to valuable prizes, donated by some eleven Peterborough business establishments which had taken advantage of this novel advertising scheme provided by The Examiner. Not only were there regular prizes, but to the person who finds the balloon which has travelled the farthest, The Examiner gives a $5.00 reward.

Plenty of Interest.

Much interest was aroused in the business section of the city as the balloons, of varying shapes and colors, took a fairly direct southerly course to gradually swing westward at the will of the upper air currents. Hundred of boys and girls, disappointed at the postponement of the ascensions yesterday, owing to the unfavorable weather conditions (the whole scheme was in connection with Dollar Day) gathered on George Street as well as in large groups throughout the residential section of the city, and men of The Examiner's advertising department who were putting the balloons up had a large audience of eager youngsters.

It was a perfect morning for the balloon ascensions, with a blue sky, fresh breeze and only sufficient clouds in the sky to provide suitable background for the red, white and blue bags and several pig and fish-shaped creations. Up they went, higher and higher, until, at one time, those of keener eyesight could see no less than four in the air at once, at varying altitudes. Particularly successful was the flight of the third, fifth and nineth starters which, travelling high, were last seen making good progress toward the lakefront. Then there was one that provided all kinds of thrills, what with doing a neat sideslip to avoid a radio wire, and a hasty zoom to miss the edge of a nearby building. After that it was clear sailing. The cards of every firm in on the scheme got away successfully.

Following are the names of those firms:

A. A. Fowler, eyesight specialist—$5.00 off the purchase price of a pair of glasses.

Regent Theatre — Two theatre tickets to the special Labor Day program featuring Marion Davies in "The Patsy."

Dawson's Service Station — Five gallons of gasoline.

THORNTONS SAIL.

Sir Henry Will Inspect C. N. R. Offices in England During Trip.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).— Sir Henry and Lady Thornton sailed to-day aboard the Majestic for England. Sir Henry will be abroad about three weeks and will make an inspection of the Canadian National Railway offices in England. He may also go to France.

Modern Girl's Lipstick Saves Day; One Used To Mark Climbers' Record

JASPER, Alta., Aug. 25.—Much as she has been chided for her habits by a world that complains that she is either too feminine or not feminine enough, the modern girl has her uses. The derided lipstick has won a place for itself in the mountain fastnesses of Jasper National Park, even among the icy unfrivolous peaks of the Maligne Lake. Yesterday when Marshall Field, of New York and four others reached the summit of solid Mount Leah they discovered that there wasn't a pencil in the outfit. For a moment there was consternation. How was the world to know that they had gained the top? Then the modern girl came forward with a brignt idea and her lipstick. The record was made, the day was saved, and the reputation of the modern girl was pushed a dozen notches forward.

LOCAL DOGS WIN PRIZES

Doughty Fox Hounds and Grant and Henry Spaniels Win.

AT OTTAWA SHOW.

Peterborough dogs at the Central Dog Show in Ottawa made an excellent showing when they contested against a large number of dogs in the same class and carried off the honors, being in the money in all the classes that they were shown in.

F. J. and C. C. Doughty's American Fox Hounds and D. C. Grant's and V. R. Henry's cocker spaniels made a new name for Peterborough, brought honor to the breeders, and made the city outstanding as a city whose kennels breed prize show dogs.

Mr. Doughty's American Fox Hound Rowdy, shown against the finest class of this breed on the continent, captured prizes in the first limit, first open, and for the best of breed. This latter is a prize that is highly coveted by all breeders.

D. C. Grant's Cocker Spaniel, Gloria's Sensation, took the first limit, second open and reserve winner's prizes. His Gloria's Big Boy took the first prize for puppies and the first novice honors, while V. R. Henry's Gloria's Sweetheart, took another first puppy and the second novice.

These cockers were up against the largest number of parti coloured spaniels that D. C. Grant has ever shown against, over 21 competing for the honors and the local breeders carrying off the coveted ribbons.

These were the only dogs from Peterborough and these three representatives had no trouble in carrying off the honors. Success breeds success and these same dogs will be shown at the Toronto dog shows and the owners entertain the highest hopes of repeating the success of Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The search in Northern Canadian waters for the missing plane Greater Rockford can be abandoned, the Arctic expedition aboard the Canadian Government patrol ship Beothic has been notified.

George Mackenzie, head of the expedition aboard the Beothic, had been notified of the receipt by the Canadian government of a telegram from the secretary of the Rockford-Stockholm flight committee, saying that despatches from Greenland absolutely identify the Greater Rockford as the plane seen over Fiskenaesset, Greenland, on Sunday.

Messages False

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The executive committee of the American Radio Relay League, Inc., at a special meeting today, voted to authorize a reward of $500 for information leading to the apprehension of the person or persons who broadcast messages signed "Rockford Fliers," and which now are believed to have been false.

Within recent years there has been a large increase in the production of condensed milk. The first milk condensing plant was established at Truro, Nova Scotia, in 1883, and there are now in Canada 26 plants for the manufacture of condensed and evaporated milk and milk powder.

NEW BUILDINGS TOTAL $60,000

C.G.E. Paint Shop, Three New Houses and Six Garages Authorized.

THREE FOR SHINGLING.

Thirteen building permits valued at $60,005 were issued by the City Engineer during the past week. Permits were taken out for three new dwellings, six garages, three for shingling buildings and one for the paint shop for the Canadian General Electric Company.

The C. G. E. contract to K. Sheehy and Sons, represented $50,000 of the total amount issued. F. H. Dobbin has let the contract to Fred Dummitt to erect a new dwelling at 295 Reid street. The house will be a story and a half high, with seven rooms finished in British Columbia fir and pine. A hot water heating system will be installed and the estimated cost is $4500. The architects are Hornsby and Allan, and the house is expected to be completed about December 31st.

The Sacred Heart School is being re-shingled with asbestos shingles. The contract has been awarded to Philip Johnson, the estimated cost being $300.

P. E. Hunt is erecting a bungalow at 186 Westcott street. The dwelling will be 29 feet by 21 feet, one story high, with four rooms finished in basswood. A pipeless furnace will be installed, and the house will be completed about April, 1929. The estimated cost is $2000.

A. Murdock has been given the contract for building a dwelling at 90 Sophia street, to J. J. Devlin. The house will have six rooms finished in pine, with a hot air heating system, and will be completed about January 1st. The estimated cost is $2600.

FIRE DESTROYS FINE NEW YACHT

R. M. Waddell Loses Valuable Boat As Result of Explosion.

AT JACK'S CREEK.

CROWE'S LANDING, Aug. 25.—R. M. Waddell's new motor boat was burned to the water's edge on Thursday evening at the mouth of Jack's Creek, Stoney Lake, when an explosion of gasoline blew the hatches off and set it alight. Mr. and Mrs. Waddell, with their two children and four guests, had been on a fishing trip. Their gasoline supply ran out, so they borrowed some from Mr. Roxburgh, taking his outboard motor boat in tow. Shortly after the transfer of the gas the explosion occurred. Two of those in Mr. Waddell's boat were transferred to the other one, while the rest of the party took to the water, all escaping safely.

The boat, new this summer, had a four-cylinder St. Lawrence engine. It was built by the Peterborough Canoe Company and was valued at about $1,600.

Crash Most Serious In Gotham Since 1918

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—The subway crash yesterday at Times Square, in which twenty were killed and 25 injured, was the most serious on this city's subway system since 1918, when nearly 100 persons were killed in the derailment of a Brooklyn-Manhattan transit line train.

In that disaster the train was running through an open cut in Brooklyn. Investigation disclosed that, approaching a curve, the train had been travelling at too high speed. Several cars were derailed and flung against the concrete wall of the cut.

100 CHILDREN HAVE OUTING

Little Ones From Orphanages and Playgrounds Get Bus Ride.

SUPPER FOLLOWS.

One hundred children from the playgrounds, St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Children's Shelter, were the guests of the Kiwanis Club and the Border Transit Company yesterday afternoon.

The sudden downpour of rain that persisted until late in the afternoon caused a change in the original plans which was to have travelled to Wallace's Point where a field day would have been held. The day was not cancelled however, as the Kiwanis club did not want to disapoint the youngsters so they organized a two hours tour of the country side. The busses for transportation were supplied by Mr. Mitchell, the president of The Border City Transit Company.

After sight-seeing around the country and city the party returned to All Saint's Parish Hall which was kindly provided through the good graces of Kiwanian the Rev. J. D. Paterson.

Here games were played all under supervision of J. A. Abraham, the chief supervisor of Peterborough's play grounds while his associate supervisors who aided him this summer were also on deck to see that the kiddies had a good time and to properly supervise the sports. J. John, president of the Kiwanis Club, said that they did yeoman service.

Hats and horns were distributed which added to the merriment of the party, especially the horns which told the outside world that everyone inside was having a good time. Prizes were then distributed. These were donated by Mr. Mitchell, who was represented by Mr. Timbs, who manages Peterborough's bus lines and who lent his assistance to make the affair a huge success.

Supper was served about five o'clock and after the youngsters had done nobly as trenchermen they sang God Save the King and returned home wishing that something like this would happen to them every day.

Among the Kiwanians and their wives who were present were Mr. and Mrs. J. John, Mrs. F. C. Neal, Charlie Elliott, Rev. J. D. Paterson, Art. Moffatt, Dr. Ray Scott and I. P. McNabb.

PLANE FORCED TO TURN BACK

Pilot Has To Drop Most of Gas To Maneuver in Heavy Wind.

FLYING TO NEW YORK.

LE BOURGET, France, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The monoplane France was forced, due to an unfavorable wind and the heavy load of fuel, to return to the flying field this morning, thirteen minutes after taking off on an attempted non-stop flight to New York. In order to gain flying height, Pilot Louis Coudouret dropped most of the plane's gas and even then barely had sufficient altitude to maneuvre back to the field.

IN POLICE COURT

Thomas Flannery pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place, it being his second offence, and was remanded until Monday for sentence.

Another man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $15 and costs or 10 days in the common jail.

New York Subway Is Derailed

Train Wrecked at Times Square Station During Evening Rush Hour.

MANY INJURED.

No Official Report Yet Made As To Cause of Accident.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press). —Fourteen dead and more than ninety nine injured were the official figures this morning of the subway disaster at Times Square last night when the ninth car of a ten car west side subway train split a damaged switch and ripped through a concrete supporting wall, breaking in two as it struck.

The tragedy was the second worst in the history of New York Rapid Transist. Ninety six persons were killed on November 1, 1918, in the derailment of a Brooklyn Rapid Transit Train running through an open cut in Brooklyn. Last night's crash occurred on the line of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, advertised as "the safest railway in the world" and equipped with all modern safety devices. The ten car train consisted of all steel cars. It carried aobut 1,800 passengers.

Emergency crews which were rushed in to the subway to clear away the wreckage worked all night and succeeded in getting the line cleared and service resumed at five o'clock this morning. The accident disrupted the service throughout the city and workers were several hours getting home last night, having to use surface and elevated lines or cabs.

Mayor J. J. Walker, who played a prominent part in the rescue work, was plainly unnerved after viewing the wreck, from which many of the bodies had not been removed when he arrived. He ordered an immediate investigation. When the motorman of the train which was wrecked, was slow in appearing he threatened Frank H. Hedley, President of the Interborough Line, with arrest unless the man was produced. Motorman W. E. Baldwin, who was in charge of the train and switchman King, who had been working on the damaged switch and had pronounced it working were finally found and taken to the 30th Precinct station where they were questioned several hours. Baldwin later was arrested on a charge of homicide.

Although the accident happened at 5.09 o'clock, news of it did not reach the police until fully twenty minutes later, and relief did not reach the scene for more than half an hour.

The train and platform were jammed with home-going office workers, and power was shut off on the whole West Side subway system.

Stations all along the line quickly thronged with passengers unable to board trains. Policemen were stationed at the turnstiles within less than 15 minutes after the crash to prevent other passengers from entering the stations.

Many in Critical Condition.

Three of the dead, two men and a woman, were at the Knickerbocker Hospital. Twelve persons were carried out and taken to the Polyclinic Hospital, where one died, and many others were reported in a critical condition.

Survivors Tell Tale.

Miss Alma Vessau, 22-year-old Brooklyn stenographer, tells a graphic story of last night's subway crash, of which she was a survivor. The first she said, was a terrific grinding noise, indication of the impending tragedy.

"A second later I saw the car behind ours rip through a steel pillar and our own car lurched and banged to a stop. Everybody was yelling and screaming. Everybody rushed to the doors.

"Oh, the horror of it all. I saw women with their legs cut off lying between the tracks. One man, all blackened, I guess by the electric current, was lying across the third rail. I guess he had been electrocuted.

"I don't know how I ever got out. The crowd just seemed to push me past people screaming, moaning, and dying."

Another passenger told how they had been penned up in the cars for more than an hour, and one said it was as if "a couple of thousand wild animals had all been turned loose at once into a cramped, dark pen full of smoke, and were fighting to get out."

ESCAPE ARTIST IS CAUGHT AGAIN

OTTAWA, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—After a week of freedom following a sensational break from Ottawa jail, Arthur Montpetit, 18-year-old Eastview, Ontario, escape artist, was captured by the police of Verdun, Que., early this morning, local police were informed.

FUMES POISON MAN IN PLANT

Factory at Rochester Burns—Ammonia in Refrigerator Plant Loosed.

GAS MASKS USED.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 25 (United Press).—A night watchman poisoned by ammonia fumes is to-day dying, another is injured and F. C. Crittenden plant here, swept by flames, is damaged with a loss estimated at more than $75,000.

Paul Zimmerman, 51, the watchman, was trapped in the building by the explosion of ammonia tanks in the large refrigeration plant maintained by the produce company. Firemen with gas masks fought their way through the flames to rescue him. His condition is reported critical.

The other man injured, Francis Dentingen, 25, an aspiring fireman, suffered a wrenched back when he slipped through an iron grating and fell down a flight.

Masks Were Used.

Gas masks to combat the ammonia fumes were only partially effective and firemen fought the blaze from 3 o'clock yesterday morning until nearly noon. Two floors and basement of the large building were gutted and large stores of pickles, meat and butter ruined. Defective electric wiring is assigned as the cause for the blaze.

WAS VERY DELICATE.

New Health Came Through Using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Caspar Miller, Lourdes, N.S., says that twice in her lifetime she has reason to be thankful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for her. She says:—"I was a very delicate girl going into womanhood, when I first found benefit from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was a sufferer with cramps and pains every month and was hardly able to move around at all. One day when I was very sick a friend came in to see me, and she said to my mother, 'Why not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I know they will do her a world of good'. The result was my mother got six boxes and I began their use, and I soon found benefit from them. By the time I had taken them all I felt an altogether different girl and no longer suffered from cramps and pains.

Then a few years ago I was attacked with influenza, and was sick ofr six weeks. Again I started taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and again they brought me good health. I am the mother of a family and do all my own work, so you see I have to keep in good health, and depend upon these pills to keep me so. Now I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any of my friends who may be sickly."

If you are suffering from any condition due to poor, watery blood, or weak nerves, begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now, and note how your strength and health will improve. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Second Harvesters' Excursions Cancelled By Both Railway Companies

MONTREAL, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Harvesters' excursions previously arranged to follow as the second series of the present season have been cancelled by both the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railways, according to an official statement issued last night by traffic officers of those transportation systems.

This action followed a conference at Winnipeg which was attended by representatives of the railways and officials of the government employment service. Instructions have been issued to all agents throughout Eastern Canada, including Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritimes, to stop the sale of tickets. Special trains had been arranged to carry intending harvesters from various points to the West but such trains will not be required.

It is stated that the total number of harvesters carried from Eastern Canada and Great Britain had already arrived at the harvest fields, on the way thereto, has reached 40,000 while British Columbia to date has sent 1,200 more than originally anticipated.

ROSA PONSELLE, HIT BY GOLF BALL, MAY LOSE AN EYE

LAKE PLACID, N.Y., Aug. 25.—(A.P.)—Rosa Ponselle, operatic soprano, was struck and seriously injured by a golf ball as she was playing here to-day.

Miss Ponselle was struck over the right eye, and a physician who attended her said it would be some time before he could determine if her eye had been permanently injured.

The singer was playing with her musical coach, Maestro Romano Romani, and was about to play a brassie shot to the eighth green when she was struck by a sliced ball driven by an unidentified player from the ninth tee. Miss Ponselle was knocked to the ground, unconscious, and was treated by Dr. George P. Owens. She was later removed to her camp, Wawbeek, on Lake Placid, where her condition was reported improved.

MISSION BAND HOLDS PICNIC

Millbrook Girls Invite Mothers and Children For Social Gathering.

PROGRAM OF RACES.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 25.—The Sunshine Mission Band was entertained for its annual picnic outing at the home of the associate superintendent, Mrs. M. McDowell, on Wednesday afternoon, the mothers and baby members of the families being invited as well, so that over one hundred children and older folk gathered for the happy occasion.

The large and beautifully-shaded lawns formed an ideal gathering place for the outing, games of various kinds entertaining the little folk, while the older ones enjoyed the opportunity for social intercourse. A program of races was run off before the supper hour, Rev. W. W. Jones assisting with this feature of the afternoon's proceedings; the prize winners were:

Children, 2 to 4—1 Teddy McDowell, 2 Marjorie Sutton.

Girls 4 to 6—1 Beatrice McDowell, 2 Maud Raper, 3 Ruth Richards.

Boys 4 to 6—1 Donald Williamson.

Girls 6 to 8—1 Dorothy Raper, 2 Esther Might.

Boys 6 to 8—1 Gordon Jones, 2 Arthur Richards.

Girls 8 to 10—1 Mary Ball, 2 Ida Lunn.

Boys 8 to 10—1 Elwood Fallis, 2 Leon Raper.

Girls 10 to 12—1 Margaret Smith, 2 Bryer Edmunds.

Boys 10 to 12—1 E. Fallis, 2 L. Raper.

Girls 12 and over—1 Helen Mitchell, 2 Mary Vance.

Boys 12 and over—1 Jack Stinson, 2 Marshal Fallis.

Three-legged race—1 Mary Burnham and Bryar Edmunds; 2 Gordon Jones and Elwood Fallis.

Boys' three-legged race—1 Marshal Fallis and Jack Stinson, 2 Leon Raper and Reg. Edmunds.

Potato race (six on a sile)—Won by J. Stinson's side.

The younger picnicers were seated on the grassy terrace, while chairs and benches, under the trees, were utilized for the grown-ups, when the abundant supper was served, healthy appetites doing full justice to the good things provided.

Assisting Mrs. McDowell in looking after her numerous guests were: Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. George Fallis, Mrs. W. W. Jones, Mrs. Lavergne Fallis, Mrs. C. C. Garside, Miss Wilma Fallis, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. Irwin Hatherly, Mrs. J. H. Might, Mrs. Thomas Douglas, Mrs. L. W. Smith and others.

Among the older guests were: Mrs. John Fallis, Rev. Joseph Wilks, Mrs. E. S. Burnham, Mr. McDowell and Mr. Thomas Douglas joined the picnicers for the tea hour, and later took part with the small boys in a game of ball.

The happy gathering was voted one of the most enjoyable in the history of the Sunshine Bands summer outings, and Mr. and Mrs. McDowell were heartily thanked for the hospitality extended.

The prizes given for the races were donated by the parents and friends of the boys and girls who are members of the mission band.

Wedding Bells

THORNLEY—ALP.

Miss Janet Alp, daughter of the late Rev. W. H. Alph, Granton, and Mr. Paul Vivian Thornley, second son of Rev. E. and Mrs. Thornley, Peterborough, Ontario, were married on Wednesday in Knox United Church, Auburn, Ontario. The bride's brother, Rev. W. R. Alph, Auburn, officiated, assisted by the bridegroom's father, Rev. A. E. Thornley, of Peterborough, and Rev. T. D. Jones, Sudbury, Ontario. The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. John Strang Blyth, Ontario, wore a gown of poudre blue crepe, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and sweet peas tied with white bridal ribbon. Miss Evangeline Ross, New Liskeard, was bridesmaid and was gowned in canary yellow crepe trimmed with sequins. Dr. Glen Thornley, Capac, Michigan, was best man, and Mrs. (Rev.) W. R. Alp played the wedding march. The church was decorated with a profusion of gladioli and ferns, the guest pews being designated with gladioli and narrow white ribbon. Following the wedding ceremony a buffet luncheon was served in the manse, after which the bride and bridegroom left by motor for Dexter, Michigan where Mr. Thornley is principal of the high school.

Premier Gets Action; Ugly Sign Torn Down

TORONTO, Ont., August 25.—(Special)—Things do move when Premier Ferguson gets on the job. For the summer months a large colored sign, "Ontario Parliament Building" has adorned the front of Queen's Park. Despite press and private criticisms the sign has stood. The Premier took one look at it when he got back from Europe. The carpenters got busy.

"It was one awful looking thing", said the Premier to-day.

CLOSED SEASON FOR MUSKRATS

Necessary Because of Tremendous Drain on Fur-Bearing Animals.

FOR ONE YEAR

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The Provincial Government has passed a law that no muskrats are to be trapped for a period of at least one year in Ontario. This step has been found necessary as a consequence of the tremendous drain upon our wild fur-bearing animals due to the increasing popularity of furs for both winter and summer wear.

The uniform scarceness of wild fur-bearing animals is resulting in the development of a new industry, that of the fur farmer. The pioneer in this field was the breeder of silver-black foxes, but the large number of muskrats used by the peltry trade, and the high prices that today can be obtained for their skins, are making this also a very desirable animal to raise in captivity.

Swampy land fitted by nature for little else, so long as it has an abundance of bulrushes and cat-tails, upon the roots of which the muskrats feed, is best suited to it. Fur farming is following just as naturally as stock raising followed the demand for regular, steady supplies of meat.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentary, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, if they do come on suddenly to banish them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

U. S. DEPARTMENT ISSUES BULLETINS

Agriculture Department to Relate Many Facts in an Amusing Manner.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 25. — (Canadian Press). — The Research Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, which issue helpful bulletins to all who care to read them, occasionally varies the businesslike monotony of their style with sly humor. They have discovered that cockroaches have a redeeming virtue. "This common and offensive house pest will prey upon that other disgusting insect, the bed bug," says a bulletin, from the department, which adds: "It is not recommended, however, that cockroaches be kept for eradicating the bed bug."

The bulletin proceeds to recommend methods for ridding buildings of both pests. "Commercial sodium fluoride, a powder easily obtainable," is about the best for the purpose.

Tries To Open Haldane's Grave; Spiritualist Says He Still Lives

GLENEAGLES, Scotland, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The grave of Viscount Haldane, British statesman, who was buried here on Thursday, was found opened yesterday morning with indications that an attempt had been made to pry open the coffin.

Lying asleep beside the opened grave was the man who stopped the funeral procession of the former Cabinet minister in High street, at Auchterarder. Awakened by a cemetery attendant, the man was quoted as declaring that he had spiritualist leanings and had an appointment with the Viscount. He insists Lord Haldane is not dead. Police said the man had admitted opening the grave.
